The first rule of an ambassador's office is that he shall abstain from all interference in the affairs of the country in which he is living. A breach of that rule makes him persona non grata. In English diplomacy the best known case is that of Bulwer at Madrid. Bulwer had, by order, transmitted to the Spanish government in 1848 an impertinent dispatch in which the actions of the Spanish government were strongly criticised. Bulwer received a reply stating among other things: "Your conduct in the execution of your important mission has been reprobated by public opinion in England, censured by the British press and condemned in the British parliament. Her Catholic majesty's government cannot defend it, and that of her Britannic majesty has not done so." Whereupon Bulwer received his passports with peremptory orders to quit the country within forty-eight hours.—Manchester Guardian.

When Cheese Was Vulgar.

There was a time when cheese was regarded as too vulgar a diet for well bred ladies. This belief is referred to in Mrs. Gaskell's "Wives and Daughters" and also in "The Visits of Elizabeth," where Mrs. Elinor Glyn makes her heroine write: "I was glad to have a nice piece of cheese. All the time I was with godmamma I was not allowed to, as it isn't considered proper for girls." A correspondent of Notes and Queries for April 24, 1909, writes: "When I was living in Jamaica some years ago a friend of mine who would now if living be about ninety-five told me that before he left England as a young man it was not the custom for ladies to eat cheese. Though he had been in England so lately as 1874, he believed that ladies suffered the same privation at that time and almost refused to believe me when I told him that they did not."—London Chronicle.

Mice That Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament at the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.

Let Her In on This.

"I believe a man should be master in his own house," said the newly married man. "There can be only one head in a family, and I mean to be it."

"That's a very good idea," answered his friend, who had been married more years than the other had lived, "a very good idea indeed. Have you spoken to your wife about it?"

Tree Leaves and Water.

Ash leaves are capable of taking up more water than those of most other trees. In a hundred pounds of ash leaves are eighty-five of water, in the same weight of beech leaves seventy-five, of maple sixty, of pine fourteen and of fir ten.

Touchy About Their Rank.

No ambassador can be arrested, or sued for debt. However much he may get credit, or even defraud a tradesman, he cannot be prosecuted. It is the same with an ambassador's wife. The wife of a Spanish ambassador at Turin once had her goods seized by a creditor, whereupon Spain at once demanded the most profuse and abject apologies from the Italian government!

We have mentioned the ambassador's wife. She is almost as important as her husband. Any attack on her is reckoned by her husband's government as being an affront to itself. She is very susceptible, too, on matters of predecence, and her susceptibilities must be regarded.

The wives of the British, the French and the Austrian ambassadors all left a ball given by the Princess Palavicini at Rome, and left it before the departure of the king and queen because they had not been placed at the royal supper table while ladies of lesser position had.

Nothing Coming.

The teacher was instructing a junior class in arithmetic when she started to give the youngsters some mental exercises.

"Johnny," said she, turning to a youngster of ten, "if you went to the grocery store and bought 10 cents' worth of sugar, 5 cents' worth of soap, 25 cents' worth of coffee and 10 cents' worth of crackers and gave the proprietor a dollar bill in payment for these articles how much change would you get?"

"I wouldn't get any change, Miss Mary," was the rather surprising response of the boy.

"You wouldn't get any change!" exclaimed the teacher. "How do you figure that out?"

"Storekeeper wouldn't give up," answered Johnny. "He would freeze on to it for the old bill."

The Most Popular Sin.

The most popular sin, according to high authority, is selfishness. At least this was the conclusion reached by a number of prominent public men, including lawyers, editors, religious workers and others in response to an inquiry of Rev. Dr. Reisner of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, in New York, "What is the most popular sin and the best method to offset it?" Of all the ignoble traits of humanity selfishness works the greatest evil. It finds its root in envy, malice, extravagance and its fruit in sin. If we could analyze the causes of crime, of poverty, of wretchedness and of war itself we would find at the bottom of them all the evil spirit of a selfish purpose. The best text for the preacher today is "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

A great help in Cooking

One of the most remarkable features of OXO CUBES is the economy they effect in cooking. They are an excellent substitute for meat in soups and savouries. They prevent waste and oddments can be served in many appetising ways by their use.

Then contrast the old-fashioned cumbersome way of cooking with the quick, convenient OXO CUBE way. Think of the time saved—the material saved—the fuel saved—and then reckon up that in dollars and cents. But that is not all. OXO increases nutrition—it makes every dish more wholesome and digestible.

French Lorraine Grave of Heroes of Nancy Battles

Serried Ranks on Amance Plateau, Unburied Now Lie Covered with a Weedy Sod.

PONT-A-MOUSSON, France, Dec. 1, 1915.—French Lorraine is the greatest cemetery in the world. Colonies of dead, marked by lines of crude wooden crosses, lie everywhere under newly formed sod at the edges of woods and thickets and in ravines—German and French. The shifting of battle scenes may be traced by following them. They are thickest there where was fought the great battle for Nancy that began with the retreat of the French from Morhange and reached its climax during the battle of the Marne. The number has been continually swelled since in the fourteen months' struggle in the Woeuvre and the Vosges.

St. Genevieve, Essey, the Amances, the Heights of Cuittes, Velaine, Gerbevillers of the Grand Couronne de Nancy, Etain, the Eparges, the Bois Brule, the Bois Apremont, the Bois St. Mansuy and Bois Le Pretre in the Woeuvre are so many cemeteries, nearly all of them with crosses bearing names already illustrious. Lionel Rieux, the poet, lies at Essey; Paul Vial, who received a bullet in the heart, in the St. Mansuy Woods. Among the French buried at Gerbeviller is Jean Martin, one of the most promising pupils of the French Art School at Rome; he fell with the heroic handful of chasseurs that held the Mortagne there against 40,000 Germans during the eleven hours. Marcell Drouet is among those who lie at the summit of the Samogneux hill.

The dead lie thickest perhaps at the Loisy Gap. After the Germans had captured Nomeny and Pont-a Mousson, they sent a regiment to force this passage between two heights, held by a single company of French infantry. That gap became the tomb of the entire regiment.

"To-Morrow in Nancy."

The cemetery of St. Genevieve is not so dense, but far more extended than that of the Loisy Gap. The Germans, forced by the resistance of the company of infantry at Loisy to resort to a flank movement around the heights of Sainte Genevieve, obtained a success before the Heights of Cuittes, where French crosses predominate. It was then, thinking he saw the route opening up for his troops, the Emperor of Germany issued his famous order of the day: —"To-morrow in Nancy." Sainte Genevieve was still between His Majesty's troops and the Lorraine capital; it is to-day the cemetery of most of them. The French, too, fell in such numbers there as to disquiet the officers, who directed the attention of Commandant M—to the losses.

"No matter," replied the commandant, "we won't give an inch."

It required an order from the general to induce him to take up a stronger position a little in the rear.

During the attacks upon the Plateau of Amance, captured on the 7th and retaken by General Dubail on the 8th, Emperor William is said to have observed the action from the edge of the Morel Woods, behind which were concealed the 10,000 horsemen of the Prussian Guard—his escort into Nancy. Velaine fell and Uhlanos and Bavarian infantry surged into the passage between the two heights of Amance.

"If we can hold out the day it will be a miracle," said the French general in command.

The 8-inchers increased their fire to the maximum speed just then and mowed down those Uhlans and Bavarians, before they could debouch from the defile; they lie there to-day in serried ranks, over which a weedy sod was formed. The 10,000 cavalry of the guard galloped off toward Metz, and a parliamentarian with a white flag asked, "in the name of His Majesty," for an armistic of twenty-four hours to bury the dead.

Three Germans to One Frenchman.

"In twenty-four hours," replied the French General, "when the Emperor shall have given sepulchre to his thousands of dead, we shall be ready for him again."

An estimated proportion of three Germans to one Frenchman buried in the battlefields of the Grande Couronne de Nancy, extending in a semi-circle from Gerbevillers to Pont-a- Mousson of the east bank of the Moselle, naturally takes no account of the thousands of Bavarian dead removed at night by rail toward Metz after the battle of Sainte Genevieve, which decided the issue of the struggle for Nancy; nor does it comprise the heavy death roll of the French in annexed Lorraine, just over the frontier, in the disaster of Morhange

The evidence of those who have seen all the battlefields of Lorraine and those who helped pick up the dead after the battle of Nancy tends to the belief that taking the French dead in German Lorraine and the German dead carried from the field of battle there is no exaggeration in the estimate of three Germans to one Frenchman as the proportion of those killed in the operations in the attack and defence of Nancy.

Pious hands are caring for these cemetries, even so close to the battle front that the German heavy artillery often rakes up the sod and sends the crosses flying in splinters. Flowers are planted on all the French graves and the tricolor floats over many of them. The graves of the Germans are sacredly protected but not decorated.

EARLY HISTORY OF BASEBALL AS A GAME

How Decision Was Reached That Tie Games Must Be Played off the Same Day

A "game" is systematic exercise. It is "play" governed by stated rules and regulations. A boy can "play" by merely tossing a ball into the air, or by rolling a hoop. That is unsystematic exercise. But when play is brought under restrictions it at once assumes the dignity of a respectable pastime. Excitement, more or less pronounced, is aroused by a game, which presupposes a contest. Games have been played very probably since the day Adam was chased from the field by the Great Umpire. The ancient Greeks, as we all know, divided their historical epochs into periods corresponding with the Olympian games, which took place every four years.

It is likely that club swinging was the first game practised by Adam's near descendants. It is not probable that the exercise was quite so tame as it is at the present day, governed by anything like the same rules. Broken heads and bloddy clubs (bats) were no doubt the aim and result of the game.

The ball, according to archaeological researches, was used before there was a written language. Who knows that baseball was not played either before the Flood or immediately after, for "there is nothing new under the sun?"

However that may be it is certain the ball found its way to the New World, probably carried here by the Pilgrims, or more likely by the Cavaliers, who were not quite so severe in their views of the pleasure of living.

But it was the Dutch, or at least the territory first settled by them, that gave us the national game. After playing with the ball, first looking into the air and catching the descending sphere, and then gazing on the ground, they discovered that it was much less like work and a heap more fun to keep the ball nearer to the earth. Consequently "play" was changed to "game." Unlimited number of bases were scattered over the field, and crude unwritten rules were agreed to.

Reduced Bases to Four.

By and by these bases became less in number until only four were left, forming a perfect square. And so the game of baseball kicked and squirmed in its swaddling clothes. To be consistent, and really as proof positive that the game was nursed by the many trousered Dutch, the group of nurses styled themselves the "Knickerbockers," in honour of the savant who wrote a most delightful history of New Amsterdam. No doubt they would have liked to dub themselves the "Stuyvesants," but old Peter had but one leg, and therefore, they reasoned his name would cast a damper on one of the brightest features of the game, that of running the bases.

In the days of these nurses the game was not limited to any certain number of 'hands,' or innings. When one side made 21 'aces,' or runs, it was declared the winner. Up in Massachusetts it required 100 runs to win a game, but the baby up there was slow in maturing. The New Englanders were then considered the representatives of culture, and their land the seat of learning. They did not, however, neglect to profit by the progress made by the lowly Dutch in baseball. So in 1858, after reluctantly admitting the superiority of the Knickerbocker game over that of the Tri-Mountain, and accepting the changes a year and sometimes longer after the New Yorkers had made them, they joined with the Dutch, and together they formulated rules which put the game on the highway of popularity.

It was then ordained that the game should consist of nine innings, and so it has remained to the present day. It was also ruled that, should each team have scored the same number of runs after nine innings were played, the game should continue until one team got the better of the other. There was nothing to prevent teams which had payed a tie game to continue the contest the next day, or the next week, or that matter, beginning where they had previously left off.

Must Finish Same Day.

This led to much scandal, as it gave gamblers an opportunity to ply their trade. Money bet on the game was held over. In the meantime the gamblers exerted their influence in inducing the interested captains to scour the country for the best players. And so it came to pass that when the decisive inning or innings were played each team had new men in its line-up, some of them with national reputations. To put a stop to this it was ruled that no game should be carried over the day on which it began. This is still the inexorable law.

The first extra inning game we have any record of was played in New York between the Gothams and the Knickerbockers on June 30, 1854. That was when twenty-one runs won, and it took the Gothams sixteen innings before they could count the required number of aces. Since then games without number have gone into extra innings.

The first extra inning game in the National League occurred in its initial year, 1876. At Boston, on April 29 of that year, the Hartfords defeated the Bostons by the score of 3 to 2 in ten innings. Three days later, at Brooklyn, the Mutuals of New York beat the Athletics of Philadelphia, 3 to 2 in twelve innings. On June 21, 1876, the Louisvilles and the Hartfords played a tie game, 3 to 3, in thirteen innings. This was not only the record for extra inning games, but also the first game played in the National League.

However, in July, 1876, a record was made that seemed astonishing to the old "fans." On the 8th the Louisville and Mutual teams met at Louisville and played fifteen innings without result, darkness ending the contest with honours even, each side having scored five runs. The 16th was an open date for both teams, and they met to play off the tie. The game went six'teen innings before Mutuals won by the score of 8 to 5. So it took these teams thirty-one innings and two days to settle their friendly argument.

It must be explained that in those days games in the National League were not played every day. Each team was required to play only ten games with the other, five at home and five abroad, or 70 in all. As the season opened on April 22 and closed on October 21, there were naturally many open dates, teams rarely playing more than three games in a week. To-day each team plays the other 22 games, or 154 in all.

It was not until 1868 that the rule constituting five innings or more a game in case of interruption was adopted. However, it had to be full innings until 1876, when the side second at bat, if ahead, was not required to go to bat in the last inning.

MILLION ARMENIANS KILLED OR IN EXILE

American Committee on Relief Says Victims of Turks Are Steadily Increasing.

POLICY OF EXTERMINATION

More Atrocities Detailed in Support of Charge That Turkey Is Acting Deliberately.

In a statement issued recently from the offices of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief at 70 Fifth Avenue further atrocities committed by Turks upon Armenian Christians were detailed and additional evidence was given to support Lord Bryce's assertion that the massacres are the result of a deliberate plan of the Turkish Government to "get rid of the Armenian question," as Abdul Hamid once said, by getting "rid of the Armenians."

Professor Samuel T. Dutton, Secretary of the committee said:

"According to all of the best evidence which the American committee has received, it is probably well within the truth to say that of the 2,000,000 Armenians in Turkey a year ago, at least 1,000,000 have been killed or forced into Islam, or compelled to flee the country, or have died upon the way to exile, or are now upon the road to the deserts of Northern Arabia, or are already there. The number of victims is constantly increasing. Surely there can be no greater need of immediate help, even in these troublous times, than the desperate need of the Armenian refugees."

Walter H. Mallory, Executive Secretary of the American Committee, said that the committee was in close touch with the Lord Mayor's committee of London and that "daily authentic reports of almost unbelievable atracities" were received. In the statement made public there was an excerpt from a letter received by the American committe from the English committee, which read:

"The committee knows that there are 250,000 refugees still in the Caucasus besides 50,000,000 who have died there, and 70,000 who have returned to parts of Turkey and Persia."

A large part of the statement is taken up with a letter received by the American committee from a missionary stationed in Konia. In part, the letter read:

"Soon after the great deportation that preceded the arrival of the new Vali Miss C. and I drove out to Kachin Han, the first station of the railroad toward Eregli, just to follow the crowd, as a large number had been driven off on foot with the expectation of taking the railroad later on. Kachin Han is about three hours from here by carriage, and even so near to Konia as this we found about one hundred people, sitting and lying about the station in utter desolation. They had been there three days; most of them had eaten up all the provisions they had and looked hazzard and emaciated, veritable famine victims such as one sees in pictures of a scene in India.

"The train from Konia arrived while we were there, and the greater number of the people dragged themselves to the cars in an effort to get on board, but were pushed back by the gendarmes, partly because they had no tickets and partly because there was no room; so the poor people were forced to turn back to where they had been sitting or lying about the station.

"Among the hundred people there were not half a dozen tents, and the half dozen were improvised and of the flimsiest character. Most of the people were lying out in the open day and night many of them without even blankets or quilts. Half a mile from the station I found two old women who were crawling off on hands and knees, too weak to walk; they had been carried off on a waggon ostensibly to go to a village, but once out of sight of the gendarmes the driver had dropped them in the field and hurried away. Without exception, all of the people looked forward to certain death by starvation, nor was there any other future to be seen for them."

Had Palpitation

OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

KEEP THE TOWN SPIRIT ALIVE

IS our town on the DOWN grade? Are things slackening up? Are the weeds commencing to grow on our main thoroughfares? Do people shun our community? Maybe it isn't as bad as that. And yet we feel that all is not right. The hustle and bustle of business is wanting. We don't GET TOGETHER as often as we used to. Each man is keeping too close to himself. If this is so our town needs a TONIC. We must GET AFTER ourselves. We must start a campaign in the interests of HOME TRADE. We must keep our town ALIVE at all costs. Even if it DOES cost money to keep the town spirit alive, it is surely money well spent. There's no use in waiting. We must make things HUM now.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

Patent Medicines. — It is a well known fact that the medical profession has for many years been fighting patent medicines and therefore, when it became known to the laity that almost without exception, the doctors were using and recommending a remedy called Salvarsan and that it was a patented formula made in Germany for the treatment of specific blood poison or Syphilis, there was to say the least, considerable surprise. The defence, of course, is that Salvarsan is not a secret remedy and that the formula is furnished by the makers, but that is no defence at all, as the formula of any patent medicine is on file in the patent office at Washington, D.C., and may be had by anyone for the small sum of five cents.

Now the real facts are that while Salvarsan is a patented remedy it is whiskey and morphine with a laxative. Now such a remedy for the time being kills the pain; no it does not kill the pain it kills the ability to feel pain by paralyzing the sensory nerves with morphine. The whiskey still further stupifies, but at the same time destroys the brain power and causes a false sense of stimulation. Soon a terrible drug habit is formed and the unfortunate victim becomes a slave not sold to the laity, but to the profession only, and as the formula is fully known, the physician feels that it is an ethical remedy.

As a matter of fact the profession uses many of the so-called patent medicines because they know that they are honest remedies and do the work they are designed to do. The fight should not have been waged against patent medicines so much as against secret formulas. There is where the real viscious remedies have done so much harm. Men with keen selling ability and without conscience have secured from irresponsible physicians or drug clerks a formula containing to the medicine that was made for the sole purpose of getting his money.

There are honest and good patent medicines as well as proprietary remedies. Some of them are well known and used by the profession and some of them are not, but it is unwise and unsafe for any one to use a secret or patent medicine without first finding out for certain what his ailment really is and then find out what's in the remedy. If this cannot be learned then it's a safe plan and wise to not take the remedy.

As for Salvarsan to my way of thinking, it is a desperate remedy for use in a desperate disease. I have never recommended its use and could not, because I am fully convinced that there are other and less dangerous remedies that will give better results without the danger.

In line with my teachings of a quarter of a century I am in favour of sterilization of all those that have been infected with specific blood poison, even though a Wasserman blood test shows that there cannot be found a trace of the disease. Neither the test nor those who make it are infallible.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Graceful in every line, this frock is one which will be very effective for two materials and which may be made either simple or dressy according to the textile which is employed.

In the tissue paper pattern the blouse is all in one length, with perforations in front and back showing where to cut for the use of a second fabric, or where to overlay in case something sheer is used. The same manner of marking is used in the skirt, each gore of which is full length in the pattern, so that both waist and skirt may be made in one material or in two without any trouble whatever.

The waist has the neck open with a small collar and the sleeves form large puffs finished with a deep cuff. The skirt has two gores and it is gathered at the top where it joins the waist.

In using two materials it is now the custom to place the darker one at the top and bottom, so that the interval may be of plaid or of a semi-transparent fabric. Combinations of broadcloth and taffetas in one color, of velveteen and taffetas in one color or with the silk in plaid or stripe and also combinations of taffetas with voile or chiffon for the middle sections and a colored lining are much in vogue.

The dress pattern, No. 7,439, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 44 inch serge and 2¾ yards of 36 inch satin.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Young Men Wanted.

Every young man in our town is wanted! Wanted from the street corwears you out, it puts bitterness in from the idler's promenade; turn your steps into the highway of noble aims and earnest work. There are prizes enough for every successful worker, crowns enough for every honourable head that goes through the smoke of conflict to victory.

There is within the young man an upspringing of lofty sentiments which contributes to his elevation, and though there are obstacles to be surmounted and difficulties to be vanquished, yet with truth for his watchword, and leaning on his own noble, purposes and exertions, he may crown his brow with honours. He may never wear the warrior's crimson wreath, the poet chapet of ber-- or the statesman's laurels, though no grand universal truth may have at his bidding confess to the world, though it may never be his to bring to a successful issue a great political revolution—to be the founder of a republic whose name shall be a distinguished star in the constellation of nations—yea, more, though his name may never be heard beyond the narrow limit of his own neighbourhood, yet is his mission none the less a high and holy one.

But why do so few young men of early promise, wise hopes, purposes, and resolves as radiant as the colours of the rainbow, fail to distinguish themselves? The answer is obvious. They are not willing to devote themselves to that toilsome culture which is the prices of great success. Whatever aptitude for particular pursuits nature may donate to her favourite children, she conducts none but the labourious and the studious to distinction.

The old man may not recall all the experiences, all the struggles and triumphs of his early manhood, but every feature of his childhood home, every little playhouse that he helped his sister to build is a photograph on his heart's tablets and can never fade away. Perhaps the golden light of eternity will not dim the brightness of that picture. What else the heart may forget, it cannot forget the place of its birth; it cannot forget the little broken cart, the sled and the kite, the sister's fond caress, the brother's generous aid, the father's counsel, the mother's anxious prayers.

Which of you by your anxieties can make to-morrow any smoother than it would have been without them? Which of you by your groanings and grumblings can change the future? It changes you, it wears out out, it puts bitterness in your sweetened cup. I tell you the spirit of trust, hope and joys in the most victorious atmosphere in which women can work out her temporal or eternal salvation. There are only two ways of living. One way says to the people round about: "Some and make me happy"; and the other way says, "Come and let me make you happy."

Too many of our young people fail in showing considerate attention, and too often do not fully appreciate the self sacrificing love and benign presence of mother. Like the air and the sunlight, she and her tender ministries are received and looked upon as a matter of fact. When she is at rest in the home of the soul, this thoughtless negligence will cost them many a tear.

Who will tell? The boy who reads this, what will he do? When he becomes a man will he do manly things? will he read and so be intelligent? Will he bring the powers of body and mind into exercise, and so be useful and healthful and strong? Will he pray and be pious, good—of a noble and virtuous soul? Will he write, and so be graceful in speech, ready in communication and of strong influence? Say, my boy, what are you going to do? What you like to do now you will be very likely to do by and by. Do you swear now? Do you lie, cheat, deceive, steal? Do you do dishonorable things? Are you disrespectful to, or do you disobey your parents and teachers? Remember the boy makes the man. If the boy is bad the man will be. Fix it in your mind which you will be.

True politeness does not consist of the artificial airs of the drawing room, in what is sometimes called "company manners," that continue so long as there are persons present to look on, whose good opinion is desired, and relapse into barbarism as soon as the company has gone. It is the inborn influence of a higher and nobler nature.

There are real rainbows in life after all, and many of them, too, visible to each of us separately. They come and go leaving promise, hopeful promise, in their pathway, yet how many reach out the white band of existence and cling to that promise, that hope—few, yes, of course, but will it always be so? Will we never learn to cling to hope, will the time not surely come when the sunshine of pure honest lives will be appreciated

A NEW USE FOR THE AFTERNOON GOWN

Dressy Costumes for Indoor Skating as Well as Simple Models

VELVET AND VELVETEEN POPULAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—With dancing still a popular pastime, indoor and out-of-door skating becoming a more fascinating fad each day, new clothes are constantly in demand. The indoor skating frock might consistenly serve as well for afternoon tea, bridge parties, and similar daytime affairs, or it may be as plain as the fancy dictates.

Indoor Skating or Afternoon Frocks.

Sleeves and collars are the distinctive features of these costumes. Whether for afternoon or morning wear the collar is high; not necessarily of the choker type, for many a collar high in back is open in front, affording the comfort of the open throat and the chic of the high neck dressing. When the choker is used it is boned as of old, and usually finished around the top with a frill, ruche, circular band of chiffon, picot-edged, or a narrow strip of fur. On one of the new Paquin models of black satin and velvet the high satin collar is topped with a two-inch-wide circular flounce of chiffon. While trimmings are not elaborate on these gowns, still there are many little details which offer the clever woman with individual ideas a chance to make good use of them. Cloth covered buttons, in self-tone, or a color that harmonizes are being used to trim both dresses and suits of the more dressy as well as the simpler types. Both long and three-quarter length sleeves are used in daytime dresses; when the three-quarter length sleeve is used it is cut very full and flares away from the fore-arm gracefully, with very much the effect of the old-fashioned flowing sleeve of grandmothers' day.

Fur-Trimmed Black Velvet

Favored Colors and Fabrics.

While serge and gabardine are still the fabrics favored for the more simple suits and dresses, velvet, velveteen and broadcloth are the dressy materials. Braid, buttons, and fur are the trimmings that bring out the rich effect of both of these materials. Of course there is nothing richer than black velvet for street and afternoon wear; a charming indoor skating frock of skunk-trimmed black velvet worn at one of the more popular of the hotels recently, caused many an eye to follow the graceful skater with her bright hair and huge bunch of purple orchids. For skating, as well as for dancing, pantalettes are practical and comfortable; these are being put out in all shades to match suit or frock; the simplest of them have merely a frill or two around the ankles in the same colour and material as the garment.

Small Hats for Dancing and Skating.

For real comfort, both in dancing and skating, the small hat is necessary. This is usually in bright contrast to suit or frock; for instance there is a charming shade of brick red that is much favoured with blue serge and black velvet dresses and suits. A bright currant velvet is also favoured, and bright coral, too, is attractive for those who find the shade becoming; and for the more conservative there are wonderful blues, golden browns, and other dark, rich shades which will harmonize beautifully with broadcloth, satin, velvet, taffeta and the other daytime materials.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

FEWER BABIES BORN IN EUROPE

Two Years of War Also Account For 20,000,000 Deaths, Says London Physician.

LONDON, Dec. 16. — Dr. Louis C. Parkes, speaking at the Royal Sanitary Institute on the national and social aspects of the lowered birth rate, said there had been a steady decrease in the birth rate of nearly all the European nations during the last thirty years. He estimated the total destruction of life in Europe in two years of war at nearly twenty million persons. At home the birth rate of the least desirable class of the community is increasing more rapidly than any other, and as a result of child welfare schemes the death rate among the lower classes was now nearly identical with that of the superior artisan class.

The women's movement for emancipation from social fetters and the larger number of occupations opened to them as a result of the war, says Dr. Parkes, must tend directly to lowering the birthrate still further. The saving of life must be chiefly among the lowest classes of the community, and it could not be quite satisfactory that the nation should be reinforced by the least intelligent and most dependent elements. After the war a government commission should make exhaustive inquiry with the view to security of employment and a sufficiency of remuneration for the working classes.

Chorea or St. Vitus Dance

Mrs. Geo. Chisholm, R.R. No. 1, Grafton, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for my little girl for what the doctors pronounced Chorea, a disease of the nerves. I consulted our family doctor, and he gave her a liquid medicine, but do what we would, we could not get her to swallow it. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and, being in pill form, she took it without any trouble. She was seven years old, and got pale and run down. The muscles of the face were affected, and she became a pitiful sight. She seemed to improve right along under this treatment, and was entirely cured by using six boxes. She is nine years old now, and you cannot find a larger, healthier-looking child for her age. I shall always be grateful for what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for us, and I can recommend it to all nervous people. You are at liberty to use this statement, so that others may benefit."

In children nervous exhaustion frequently takes the form of rickets, St. Vitus' dance or fits. In less advanced stages there are nervousness, excitability and irritability.

All such conditions indicate the need of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood and nourish the starved and depleted nerve cells. Being natural and gentle in action, and at the same time powerful in its restorative and reconstructive influence, this food cure is admirably suited as a treatment for weak, puny, nervous girls and boys. It makes them strong, hearty and robust, and enables them to develop into healthy and useful men and women.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD"

Being a Story of How a Husband and Wife Were Reunited on the Eve of Christmas

Arnold did not care for children The few he had known in later years were, unfortunately, the product of hotels and boarding-houses; pert little misses and precocious little boys that he had found it safer to avoid; but this one—

"Look here,' 'he said abruptly to the tall man, who seemed to be in charge. "Let me take her home, and I will see what can be done."

"I wish you would," the other returned promptly. "The storm is increasing every minute, and we'll soon have more than we can do. I warn you, though, it is a case that will require tact."

"More likely a club!" Arnold growled, belligerently. "I suppose I can take a few things—a shawl or something to wrap her in, and a little food as a sort of 'first-aid'; and, if she knows anything about the size maybe some shoes for Benny. I'll come back later and report," he added meaningly.

"Help yourself—and good luck to you!" The tall man laid his hand caressingly on the pretty, tumbled curls; then, as the door swung open to admit a great amount of snow and a small quantity of shivering humanity, he hurried away.

The storm was indeed increasing Although it was only four o'clock, the windows were a twilight grey. People began arriving in twos and threes; some with full baskets, hearts, and purses; others, less fortunate, to carry the largesse away. Arnold was left alone by the radiator, the child drooping sleepily on his knee.

"Dolores," he said softly. "Dolores." She turned toward him big lustrous eyes, then snuggled her tired little head into the hollow of his shoulder.

"How I do fit!" she remarked in surprised approval.

For a moment she was silent; then suddenly sat erect, surveyed the spot that had pillowed her, patted, it lovingly, and nestled into it again. "My sakes! Don't I fit?" she whispered contentedly, and closed her eyes.

"God, but you do fit!" Arnold muttered brokenly, holding her close.

"Now, Dolores," Arnold said firmly at the door of the Good Fellows' Club, "tell me where you live."

She was wrapped warmly from head to foot; she had had "somefing" to eat, and the pockets of the little red coat held "somefing" to play with. Arnold's pockets, too, were full, as the bag slung over his shoulder, from which peered a pair of shoes for Benny, and a most unsanitary rattle for the baby.

"Come! Where do you live?"—

She measured him, frankly appraising his eyes, purposeful despite their tenderness; his square jaw, and the straight, firm line of his lips.

"Three hundred and eleven Park Avenue," she answered promptly. She had found her master; but even then, womanlike, she must need temper his triumph. "I'd have to be going right now, anyway," she remarked carelessly, "'cause if Mama wakes up an' finds me gone, it would mean a awful 'pankin' for me."

To his dismay, Arnold found that the cars had stopped running, and there was not a conveyance of any kind in sight. While he had been brooding over the child asleep in his arms, strange thoughts, and unspeakable hopes occupying his mind, the storm had so increased in violence that traffic had almost ceased.

A policeman pointed out the nearest way; and, gathering Dolores closer in his arms, he started on his journey. He would have liked to ask her if she was comfortable, to beg her not to go to sleep again; but it took all the strength he had to make any progress against the gale. He hugged the shelter of the houses as much as he could, blundering against projecting railings, tripping over exposed steps. Sometimes he was compelled to stop in convenient doorways to catch his breath.

"Ain't you cold, 'way up there?" she asked once, while he was resting; and when he bent his head the better to hear her, she threw her arms around his neck and tried to warm him with her soft little cheek against his.

He attempted to cover her up again, but she would not let go; so he bowed his head over hers, to protect it as much as he could, and started on again. Her hair whipped his face, almost blinding him; she had a strangle-hold on his neck and made breathing difficult; but he stumbled on, smiling grimly, the happiest and the most determined man in all the storm-gripped city that night.

He was going to have Dolores! It could be done, he thought confidently. A woman with headaches, taking in washing to buy bread for a starving family and a drunken husband, was not likely to be over-sentimental about one of that same family, especially if her lack of sentiment was made remunerative. He gave the child a sudden grip that made her gasp. He'd have her if it beggared him!

"Stop!" she ordered peremptorily, struggling up in his arms. "Stop! You're going past; that's our house on the corner."

Some moments before they had entered a wide street, bordered with handsome homes, and it was to one of these that the child was pointing. He turned back, wondering; then hurried confidentally toward an area-door. They lived in the basement, of course. Strange custom this! With all the hue and cry about the sanctity of the home; and then, for a few dollars, housing any kind of riffraff in your cellar. He had supposed, though, that the residence district—

"Where are you going?" she demanded; then, as he paused uncert-

A man opened the door; a very straight man with an impassive face, who immediately forgot to maintain either straightness or impassivity at sight of the little, red-coated figure. Arnold had followed, though not conscious of it; and now the man pulled him forward off the threshold and closed the door behind him. All the time he kept saying: "Why, Miss Dolores! Where have you been?"

"Is Mama down yet, Baxley?" she counter-questioned anxiously.

"No, Miss; but she rang for Jennie a moment ago."

"Then, you go up pretty soon and say they's a gentleman to see her in the parlor. . . . You'll fix it so's I don't get a 'pankin', won't you. She turned imploringly to Arnold and grasped his hand. "And soon's I hear her comin' I'll run down and ask Maggie to make popovers for dinner. You'll like 'em awful, and you'll like my Mama, too—if she's got over her headache."

The butler, straight and impassive once more, removed the filled sack from Arnold's shoulder and laid it on the table. If he saw the shoes for Benny, and the unsanitary rattle for the baby, he betrayed no surprise. He took off Arnold's coat and hat—literally took them off for he got no help from the dazed man—then flung aside a drapery, pressed a button, and stepped aside, his heels together.

They entered a room that Arnold knew was warm and bright. Beyond that, he had no thought for anything in all the wide world but the little creature before him, tearing frantically at the buttons of the little red coat. He helped her mechanically. He even untied, with clumsy fingers, the strings of the soiled old apron and cast it into an angle of the wall behind a couch, where Dolores had thrown the cloak and the shawl. She stood before him bare-armed, bare-necked; and he felt that the filmy white dress was a flaming sword between them: he had lost her!

"Why did you wear—wear that?" he demanded huskily, jerking his head toward the corner where the apron lay.

"'Cause, if I hadn't, they'd 'a' called a policeman and sent me home." She spoke with the assurance of one who knew.

"Why—why did you go there?"

"'Cause I was lonesome and hungry. She'd locked me up from luncheon till dinner."

"Why?" he persisted monotonously. It didn't make any difference now; but it gave him something to say.

"For speckling all up with red ink and makin' 'em think downstairs that I had the smallpox. Land sakes! They tumbled right out in the snow.

"Dolores!" He sat down on the couch and drew her down beside him. He touched the shining hair and the plump little arms; but when he laid his hand flat on her back between the shoulders it wrung a groan from him. He didn't know why; he only knew that it almost broke his heart. He laid his cheek there and heard her heart, palpitant with life and promise; and he groaned again.

"But your father doesn't beat you?" He at least had that much to be thankful for.

"No-o!" She laughted derisively. "I never had no father since I was borned."

"But Benny and the baby?"

"Oh, they're the Finnegans'?" she explained carelesaly.

"I don't understand."

She looked up at him and sighed patiently. "They are askin' so many fings, and when they said 'father,' I thought of Maggie's pa, an' just played I was her. Oh, Maggie's pa is the limit, he is," she confided, her voice, for a moment, a shrill treble. "I slip down the back stairs when her ma washes for us, and she tells me all about it. Oh, dear!" She leaned against him, and her face became very grave.

"I wish I hadn't pertended I was Maggie, for Mama says, 'Precious Love, I'll 'pank all this fibbin' and pertendin' out of you if it takes till you're growed up. Your dear papa hated it, and so do I, for it's ruined my life.' Then she cries, an'—" She stopped abruptly, listening, alert.

"She's coming!" she announced breathlessly. "I'm going up to my room." She caught him around the neck in a strangling hug and kissed him violently. "You darling angel!" she whispered. "You won't let her 'pank me!" Then she ran away.

The butler again flung aside the heavy drapery, and a woman entered. Even while rising to meet her, Arnold wondered what the man had told her. Not about Dolores, he was certain; the look in the man's face when they entered precluded that.

A slender, girlish woman stood before him. Soft hazel curls, a shade darker than Dolore's, framed a sweet, pensive face. Wild blue eyes, older and sadder than Dolores's, regarded him questioningly, then widened, darkened—

"Peyton!" she cried. "Oh, Peyton!" before he snatched her wildly to him.

"But, dearest, I can't understand why you left me," Arnold objected.

She pressed her cheek closer into the hollow of his shoulder; an action that suddenly electrified him with joy! Dolores!

"I had to, Peyton; I was no fit wife for you," she told him mournfully. "For years I had lived in a little world of my own back on that lonely farm; and when I told you things at first, dear, I scarcely knew when reality ended and fancy began. You called it lies, dear." Arnold winced; and, pressing her cheek closer, she hurried on:

"A spade was a spade to you in those days, you blessed old Puritan; but it easily became a fairy wand to me."

"I know, I know," he agreed abjectly. "But I am a lot wiser than the prig you knew then; and if you'll let me stay, we'll make a little world of our own right here; just we two" —he watched her narrowly, breathing hard—"we two—"

She regarded him breathlessly for a moment, then her face suddenly became transfigured. She broke away from him, and, running to the butler, whispered something that sent the man up the stairs three at a time.

"A little world of our own," she repeated, coming back to him, but avoiding his eyes. "Just we two—"

A patter of little feet, and Dolores stood inside the portieres, holding them together behind her with both hands. She looked from one to the other; silent, non-committal.

"Dolores, this is your papa, come back to stay with us always," her mother told her, with tremulous eagerness. "And, Peyton, this is your, our baby!"

Arnold drew her to him. He touched the soft curls, the little bare arms. He laid his hand flat upon her back between her shoulders; and he felt his lonely, starved heart drumming in his ears. "She isn't a make-believe baby, either!" he declared wonderingly. He felt he had to say something foolish or he would lose the mastery of himself altogether.

"We might 'a' knowed it," Dolores whispered to him later; "for just see how I fit."

"Yes, serve dinner immediately, Baxley," her mother said to the man who stood, straight and impassive of face, in the doorway. "I—we—oh, we're all hungry, I know—especially Dolores, who has been in her room all the afternoon, poor dear!"

The eyes of the two men met above her head. Arnold grinned. The man choked slightly. Dolores saw the glance, and treated them impartially to a knowing, contented wink that she probably had learned "off of" Maggie, her prototype of the afternoon.

MY TERRIBLE HACKING AND SPLITTING COUGH WAS ENTIRELY CURED BY DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Clara Jackson, Huntsville, Ont., writes us under date of January 12th, 1915. "I take great pleasure in writing you concerning Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last winter I contracted a very bad cough which troubled me all through the summer. This winter I started to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking three bottles I can truthfully say that I fell like another woman. The terrible hacking and splitting cough, and the dry sensation in my throat is entirely cured. I would certainly recommend it to anyone troubled with bronchitis or lung trouble. I have not words too grateful to give you."

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, combining as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold that you can possibly procure. The thousands of testimonials we have received prove that our claim is right.

All we ask you is to see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, and don't accept some no-account substitute.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Scottish Soldiers' Songs.—A correspondent says that the spell of "Tipperary" is now broken, at least in the Scottish regiments. In their ranks the old Scottish songs have come into their own again. "Loch Lomond" stands first favourite. "Annie Laurie" comes next, but may claim to be the real battle-song of the lads in the glengarries, whether they come from the North or the South. Another ditty popular after lights out" is "Rolling Home to Bonnie Scotland." Music hall ditties, of course, plays a large part in the soldiers' programme.

Charles Reade's Mistake.

"It was Charles Reade, wasn't it, who wrote, 'Nothing is so terrible as a fool?'"

"Yes, but he was wrong. I live next door to a newly married couple. If Charles could see them he would at once admit that two fools are even more terrible."

A Long Pull.

Personally we never expect to have any trouble with our appendix. We think the dentist pulled it out when he fetched that tooth.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Seen King Charles.—The late Rev. Dr. Fairbairn of Newhaven used to tell of a lady who said to him at a dinner party, "I have spoken to a man who once saw an English King playing golf on the Burghmuir of Edinburg. Guess which King it was." Dr. Fairbairn guessed backwards from George II., but to each name the old lady said "No," till he reached the name of Charles I. The date of the dinner party was in 1820. The lady was then 95 years of age, and the man who told her that he had seen King Charles was her father's gardener, who died at the age of 107, when the lady was a young girl.

The fall and captivity of Israel. 2 Kings 17:1-18.

Golden Text. He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed. Prov. 29:1.

1. Verse 1. How many kings reigned over Israel from first to last; how many were good and how many bad?
2. Verse 2. What was the general character of Hoshea?
3. If Hoshea was a bad man, but less bad than some of the kings who preceded him, what would be God's estimate of him compared with his estimate of the other bad kings?
4. May a man do "evil in the sight of the Lord" and yet be regarded highly by his fellowmen? Why?
5. Verse 3. Has a strong nation the moral right to conquer a weaker nation just because it is stronger? Give your reasons.
6. Have the strong historic nations, as a rule, been better or worse, morally, than the weaker nations? Give your reasons.
7. If Hoshea had been as good a man as he had been bad would you say or not, and why, that the king of Assyria would still have been able to conquer him?
8. Verses 4-6. What are the chances that a man who is untrue to God, will also be untrue to his fellow man when he thinks it to be in his interest?
9. Why is it impossible for a man to be true to God and untrue to his fellows?
10. Under what circumstances is political rebellion right?
11. Verses 7, 8. Can you give any instance of any nation ceasing to exist which at the time of its collapse was morally healthy?
12. What kind of sins chiefly had the Israelites been guilty of?
13. Verse 9. How do secret sins injuriously affect us as compared with open sins?
14. Verses 10-12. Does the second commandment which forbids idolatry make idolatry sinful, or does this commandment forbid that act because it is sinful?
15. Why is idolatry sinful, and why has it always been so?
16. Verse 13. How many years had God been trying to make Israel a holy, and therefore a prosperous people?
17. Who were the chief messengers that God had sent to Israel and Judah to preach national and personal righteousness?
18. Verses 14-17. Why, and how, did they harden their hearts against the loving commands of God?
19. Why do sinners to-day persist in their sins, when they know, intellectually, that sin means death?
20. Verse 18. What is anger in God, and how is it manifested?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 26, 1915. Review. Jehovah's gracious promises to Israel. Read Hosea 14.

Turkish Carpet Making New War Industry For Ireland

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Among the new war industries Ireland has astonished the British carpet manufacturers by putting on the market "Turkish" carpets which would deceive the elect of Constantinople to say nothing of Turco-Irish cigarettes. Costly carpets may hardly be regarded as a war industry, but the Donegal factories from which the Turco-Irish carpet come, are conquering the instinct of economy by sheer merit. Even now there are sufficient orders to keep the workers employed. It is a bold bid for the capture of the enemy trade in war time. The design and colour of these carpets have so ravished the expert eye that it is said they charmed an order from an Egyptian connoisseur.

The manufacture of half tufted carpets is short fifteen years old in county Donegal and has given employment to hundreds of peasants, who have inherited, through all the troubled ages of Irish history, the subtle sense of form and colour that distinguished their Celtic ancestors. The Kildare carpet factory, which was reorganized on a commercial scale about five years ago, has succumbed to the stress of war. It specialized in large carpets of the gorgeous and expensive sort which finds many patrons in America and among the managers of Commercial hotels. But to-day even those are cutting their carpets according to their cloth. So the Kildare industry languished, but it has now come into the hands of the firm which deals most extensively in Donegal carpets, and will be reopened with a good backing of capital. The successful struggle of the Irish carpet industry in war time is made still more trustworthy by the fact that, like all other textile industries it is suffering from the scarcity of dyes.

There are other war industries which are "booming" in Ireland writes a Dublin correspondent. "The woollen factories," he says, "are humming night and day. The only shadow on the growth of the munition shops is the fear of the publicans that Dublin may be made a scheduled area. Irish agriculture is enjoying golden hours. Naturally, however the smaller and more artistic home industries have suffered. The men are at the war, or in the fields and workshops. Many of the girls are making munitions. The demand for the minor luxuries of life is declining with every new pamphlet that issues from the Irish War Savings Committee. There is talk of a commercial glass factory in Dublin, but the little industries in stained glass and enamels have fallen on evil days. The lace industry—a very important affair in rural Ireland—has been hard hit, and there is some depression in the famous centres in Kerry, Cork and Limerick."

CROWN BANK

In adjourning the meeting of shareholders of the Northern Crown Bank until January 18, Sir Daniel MacMillan, the President, told the shareholders that "the adjournment was made in view of certain propositions recently made of the directors loking to the future welfare of the bank. The directors were unable to recommend a dividend for the half year ending November 30." The expression of Sir Daniel MacMillan revived rumours here of a possible absorption of the Northern Crown Bank by some other institution, and the Bank of Montreal and the Quebec Bank were both mentioned. Representatives of both banks, however, said that no negotiations were under way.

Stormy Balkans Is World War News Center

SALONIKA, Dec. 1, by mail — Here's the world war news centre. At last the stormy Balkans have come into the world's eye.

Correspondents form all corners of what used to be civilization flock here to be near the great German push 400 miles north of us.

There are other lesser correspondents hanging around the hotels of Saloniki, mostly queer dressed chaps with queer habits and manners, newspaper men from European countries who have spent their lives in the Balkans trying to bet the busy world interested in their little affairs; men who have lived in queer Balkan cities, and have dashed madly to the Balkan telegraph offices in times past with news items which they themselves thought tremendously important, but which were honored with tiny headlines in the newspapers of the world.

These Balkan fan journalists knew that some day the Balkans would explode. The day has come, the explosion has occurred.

At last the feet of European armies are pounding the Balkan highways; European cannon, machine guns and rifles sound through the Balkan hills and European spades eat trenches in the Balkan soil.

A Melange of Color.

In the Olympus Palace hotel on the water front gathered around the tiny tables in the cafes are the officers of the British, French, Russian and Greek armies, a melange of color and language. And these Balkan journalists—English, French and Italian—chatter gaily, wisely of the great day which has come at last.

Saloniki harbor is filled with great boats, warships, torpedo boats, hospital ships and two or three boats which have huge American flags painted on their sides, and which are making small fortunes for their owners in running the submarine gauntlet with supplies for the Balkan allies.

That busy harbor of itself is enough to delight the soul of the Balkan journalist. But last evening just at sundown came the climax of his excitement. An aeroplane was soaring over the Bay of Salouiki. Behind it, across the harbor loomed Mount Olympus, where the old Greek gods used to live and cut their capers.

Just to see an aeroplane above Olympus, which has been peaceful and quiet ever since the gods died, as a background, was enough to prove to the Balkan experts that the great day had really come at last.

To top it off, the engine of the aeroplane weakened in its stroke. The machine came nearer and nearer to the water. It had wheels instead of boats beneath its planes, and when its momentum was gone and it came to the surface of the bay, it dug its nose 15 or 20 feet into the water, pilot and all, and then stood on end with its tail in the air.

A War Catastrophe.

Here was a catastrophe of the world war, right at the foot of Olympus. The Balkan experts watched the aviators come to the surface, climb into the half-sunken planes and wait for three tug boats in the harbor to rush to the rescue.

Then they went back to the Olympus Palace cafe where the French old timers in the Balkans ordered absinthe—which one cannot buy in Paris—and the others ordered whiskey and soda, over which they threshed out the whole problem of the value of aeroplanes in Balkan warefare, happy at least to be able to say:

"The eyes of the world are not on the French front or on the Russian front. They are on the Balkans, as I have always said they would be; and here the world war will be threshed out."

It is given out in Washington that the decrease in receipts from the liquor and tobacco tax amounts to $35,906,291 for the fiscal year ending last June. This curtailment is part of a world wide manifestation of economy and temperance.

BAD FIFTY CENT PIECES IN CIRCULATION

Look out for spurious fifty cent pieces. A number of these coins are said to be in circulation throughout the province and they are hard to detect. They are the best imitation seen for some time. Not only do they ring good when dropped on the counter, but they are nearly of the same thickness as the genuine, and they don't respond to acid tests. The metal has to be scratched before it will turn back. The coin is a little lighter than the genuine article, but could be easily mistaken, even by experts. The Receiver-General's office say they have been handed several of these in the past few days, and the matter has been reported to the Dominion authorities.

AUSTRIA'S NOTE TO UNITED STATES CRITICIZES THE AMERICAN DEMANDS

Statement is Given Out To-day---United States to Reply With An Abrupt Dismissal of Austria's Arguments in Regard to the Sinking of the Ancona---Hand-to-Hand Fighting Reported at Several Points Along the Western Battle Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Having practically completed what is said to be almost an abrupt dismissal of Austria's arguments concerning the sinking of the Ancona, Secretary Lansing this afternoon gave out the text of Austria's note.

Its most significant feature is its insistence on the discussion of the evidence and the principles involved.

It asks almost plaintively, "why America refuses to an exchange of correspondence which it has conducted with another government in other cases."

The Austrian Foreign Office criticises the American demand on the ground "that they might well have warranted the expectation that the Government of the United States should precisely specify the actual circumstances of the affair upon which it bases its case."

The Vienna Foreign Office also pointed out that the United States "failed to designate the persons upon whose testimony it relied."

The note declares Austria ready and willing to "enter into an exchange of views," also that the matter of reparation to the relatives who lost loved ones on the Ancona is a matter for further discussion.

The note concludes that Austria reserves to itself "full freedom of maintaining its own legal views in discussion of the case of the Ancona."

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The troopship Orduna, with the second Canadian Pioneer Battalion, all Ontario men, has arrived at a British port safely.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Baron Zwiedinek, of Austria, arrived at the State Department two hours before he was due to talk on the Ancona case, and was taken immediately to see Secretary Lansing. He remained but ten minutes, and was frowning and glum when he came out.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—French official statement to-day says there were several artillery engagements last night. In Artois region there were hand to hand fights without change in positions.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The German Socialists have issued an appeal to the Socialists of France to help end the war.

The Socialist organ Vorwaerts, in its latest issue, calls upon the Socialists of France to abandon the idea of acquiring Alsace and Lorraine.

The Vorwaerts promised that in return the German Socialists would force concessions from Germany that would result in an early peace.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 18.—Bread tickets are to be instituted in Hungary. The Berlin Vo Zeitung announces, because of difficulties of transporting wheat and flour.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Major-General Von Stockhausten has been killed in action. From the beginning of the war until the last of October 1,786 German nobles have been killed in action or died of wounds.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The Temps Salonika correspondent says the information on December 16 was "still contradictory as to what the German army which invaded Serbia is now doing." According to reports which are probably true, the German forces are leaving Serbia for other fronts — Russian, Roumanian, and, in part, French—but according to other information the Austro-Germans are preparing to attack the Allies in Greece with the support of the Bulgarians, whose halt at the frontier is only temporary.

GENEVA, Dec. 18.—German railway officials have arrived at Constantinople to inspect the military railway being built from Damascus, supposedly for the Turko-German invasion of Egypt.

With them, according to the advices received here to-day, are a number of engineers who have been employed in constructing new railway lines in the conquered territory in Russia.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Austro-Hungarian troops have captured 13,000 Montenegrins and Serbians in the last five days on the Montenegrin soil.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—In the Welland Canal cases, United States Commissioner Houghton, to-day fixed Koenig's bail at $50,000, and that of Leyendecker, another of the alleged conspirators, at $30,000.

To objections of their attorneys, the commissioners said the charges against the men were "very serious," and demanded large bonds. Hearings in both cases were put over until January 12th. Frederick Metzler, a third alleged conspirator, is now under arrest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Frederick Schleindel, a German clerk, employed in the National City Bank, the largest banking institution in the country, was arrested to-day charged with participating in conspiracies alleged to have been directed against the Allies.

Schleindel is charged with having furnished to the Kaiser's secret service agents here information about financial matters passing through the hands of the National City Bank, in connection with munitions purchases and other transactions of the Allies.

INSPECTOR SPENCE SAYS MEASLES NOT BEING REPORTED

Disease is Prevalent in the City Just Now and Citizens Are Asked to Co-operate in Combatting It

MAY PROSECUTE SOME

Sanitary Inspector Spence reports a prevalence of measles that appears almost as an epidemic, and the worst feature of most of the cases is the attempt on the part of parents to evade quarantine. A considerable part of the Inspector's time during the past week has been taken up in investigating reports that had come to him. For instance in three of the homes Mr. Spence placarded yesterday the parents claimed that they did not know the seriousness of measles, and for that reason had not reported them, and these were only a few of the homes he placed under quarantine. Mr. Spence wishes the citizens to remember that secreting cases of measles is a breach of the health laws, and he was considering the advisability of making an example of some of those persons who have failed to report the disease in their homes.

Only by the co-operation of parents can these epidemics be confined to a few cases, and parents should realize that measles may have serious after effects.

C. R. Widdifield, Lieut.
Acting Adjutant, for Officer Commanding 93rd O.S. Battalion, C. E. F.

Writing to the Examiner, Gunner M. G. Hardill, formerly of Farm and Dairy, and who left with the 33rd Battery draft, says:

I got the first number of the Examiner last night and as it bore one of the old familiar wrappers, I presumed that my letter reached you safely and that you are again favouring me.

Here's a hearty thank you and good luck to the old sheet.

Had a visit from Barney Quinn last night. He has a week's leave from the trenches, went to London, and knowing that we were here at Shorncliffe, he came up to see us. He is looking as fit as a fiddle. He has grown about 6 inches and aged at least three years.

This is his first leave since "going in" in February. He sure has had some experiences, and kept us asking questions all night. We are having nothing but rain here now. Had an inspection yesterday and had to stand out in the rain in mud six inches deep. But it didn't do us any harm.

The Kingston Standard says: At noon to-day the City of Kingston was compelled to say good-bye to four hundred more young officers and soldiers who have been trained in this garrison for overseas service in the present war. The men were taken from the three local batteries and "C" battery of the C.C.H.A. "C" battery gave one hundred men, the 32nd, 33rd, and 34th field batteries gave one hundred men each, making a total contingent of four hundred officers and men altogether. Before leaving the city the various units from which the drafts were taken banquetted the members of the draft, and all the men were given late pass privileges last night. Outside of a demonstration of pure patriotism and enthusiasm last night, the men were all orderly, and full of good nature. They could be seen on the streets in groups carrying flags and singing snatches from the latest and most popular songs of the day.

Word has been received that Driver Fred Revoy of Peterborough, who is a member of the 26th Battery, is seriously ill in hospital at Kingston, suffering from an attack of pneumonia. His sister Miss Annie Revoy, has gone to Kingston to see him.

Bandmaster Hughes and the members of the band are being warmly congratulated on the splendid concert last night. It demonstrated not only a fine efficiency as a whole, but also some splendid individual work, the baritone solo of Sergt. Leader, the cornet duet by Bandsman Payton and Walno, and the cello solos by Bandsman Smith being very enjoyable. The latter, by the way, has had no tuition on the cello, which makes his work even more creditable.

Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers, and Officer Commanding the 2nd Battalion, and former Commanding Officer of the 3rd Dragoons, son of Mrs. E. Z. Rogers, Grafton, had a Providential escape some little time ago, when going into the trenches in France. He and a guide were together, the latter 93rd Musicians Won Fresh Laurels in Splendid Programme at the Grand Opera House Last Night —Individual Artists Shared the Honours of the Evening.

REPEATED TO-NIGHT

The Band of the 93rd Overseas Battalion scored a hit of the greatest magnitude in their concert at the Grand Opera House last night, when they contributed a programme that was a revelation to the audience. Unfortunately the distressing weather conditions interfered with the attendance, but it is safe to say that there will be a big crowd on hand for the second performance to-night, for every member of last evening's audience went home delighted with the programme, and most enthusiastic in their praises of the band and of the individual artists who assisted in the great success of the occasion.

In the 93rd Band, Peterborough has an organization of which the citizens have every right to be proud. A band of such numbers and efficiency would under normal conditions be a body to arouse civic pride, and when it is considered that every man has donned the khaki uniform to do his bit for the Empire, there is a two-fold reason for enthusiasm over Bandmaster Hughes and his musicians.

Their programme last night was an exacting one, a series of numbers that called for skilful conductorship and individual and collective efficiency, and the band came through with flying colours showing a sureness and precision of attack, and a cleverness in execution that reflected the greatest possible credit upon Bandmaster Hughes, as well as upon the various members of the band. Their artistic performance was all the more meritorious when the fact is taken into consideration that the musicians at present are equipped with borrowed instruments of various makes, and of varying degrees of fitness.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, who was enthusiastically received, opened the programme with a brief address in which he expressed on behalf of the 93rd Battalion the gratitude the organization felt to the citizens of Peterborough for their kindness in providing for the purchase of instruments. When they arrived the band would be equipped with the finest instruments possible. As for the band itself Lt.-Col. Johnston stated that the General Staff Officer of the division who was in the city yesterday, had remarked that although there would be plenty of competition the 93rd Band had no need to worry about comparison with other bands in the division.

The band's first number was the dashing march "Fillmore Triumphal," a rousing selection into which they interjected a spirited vim that was an augury of the good things to come. Then followed the always delightful overture from "The Bohemian Girl," perhaps never heard to better advantage at the hands of a local organization. The band made the most of the beautiful number, the reed section doing particularly effective work in the Gypsy Chorus. The khaki musicians next offered an exacting but most pleasing selection from "Maritana," a number that demands careful handling, but which was played with a seemingly confident ease. The hearty applause which followed this number, probably the band's most ambitious effort of the evening, was a well merited tribute. "The American Patrol" gave the band an opportunity to show their versitality and this bright number was so well received that an encore, one of the 93rd's marching songs, "Farewell, Isabelle," had to be given.

Hermann's splendid overture, "Le Diadem," another solid test, was played in a sparkling manner, fully up to the standard of the rest of the programme.

The band's final number, although

WEEK ENDS IN FEELING OF HIGH HOPES FOR ALLIES

English and French Troops Can Entrench Themselves Safely in Saloniki and Await Confidedtly the Spring Advance

POLITICAL CONSEQUENCES

(Copyright, 115, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Last week ended in anxious uncertainty; this week on the contrary, ends not only with a feeling of decided relief, but actually with feelings of high hope for the Allies.

There was uncertainty whether the French and British troops could save themselves from encirclement and destruction by the German and Bulgarian forces hurled against them in Serbia, and even greater uncertainly whether the Salonika expedition should be continued or abandoned.

Military opinion in England foresaw difficulties from the beginning and foretold the impossibility of rescuing the Serbian army. Great French journalists like Clemenceau insisted with equal vehemence that the place to beat the Germans was in France. Both prophesies on the whole have been falsified by the unfolding of events. The English and French troops now not only are safe, but can entrench themselves safely in Salonika and await confidently the new advance which no doubt will be postponed until spring.

Political Consequences.

In the meantime several serious political consequences have arisen from the successful retreat and the determination to hold at Salonika. Greece only awaited the word of determination of the Allies to comply with the demands to make their task possible by withdrawing some troops at Salonika and abandoning the policy of pinpricks against all our military movements.

Russia in the meantime is slowly gathering and perhaps more slowly equipping her now army. While Roumania is biding her time she will doubtless join the Allies when Russia's backing makes her position absolutely secure.

This transformation of the whole military situation in the Balkans since last week has produced a greater feeling of optimism in the Allied countries.

All Irishmen are proud of the tremendous part played by the Tenth Irish Division in the Balkan retreat, though the feat cost many lives. The magnificent and far-reaching achievement shows their blood was not shed in vain.

Partly owing to John Redmond's remonstrances, backed by the opinion of all English parties, these deeds of the Irish regiments have received full notice in all papers. All parties abound in recognition of the incomparable bravery of the Irish soldier. The chief regiments were the Munsters, Leinsters, Connaught Rangers and Inniskillings. The first three are almost entirely Catholic and Nationalist, the last mixed Ulster, Nationalists and Catholics. The latter, here as elsewhere, have forgotten the old Irish feud in the common defence of England's and Ireland's fight for European liberty.

Important Debate.

At home there has been an important debate on the bill to prolong the life of Parliament, in which a small CANADA'S ONE GREAT TASK.

The war will last a long time; it will be long before Belgium will be liberated; it will be long before the Boches are beaten. All our efforts to day must be devoted to the war, and the victory which must come to us."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Montreal.

SHARP'S THE WORD.

Whatever may be the extent of Canada's sins of omission, they cannot equal our sins of commission. We have been hag-ridden by commissions for this and for that, which have amounted to nothing but procrastinate reports, whose only use is to gather dust, in pigeon-holes. But we have a new one, the federal economic commission, that must investigate promptly and report sharply if it is to be of the slightest use. The work of the commission is to take an industrial census of Canada in order to ascertain the extent of our industrial capacity so that we can better organize it for meeting the demands for the supply of war material. The call upon our manufacturing establishments is for efficiency and speed. The commission must also set an example of speed, if its work is to have any real effect upon the production of war material, by our Canadian manufacturers. Sharp's the word.

THE COMING SESSION.

The third war time session of a Canadian parliament will, or should be, animated by only one purpose, to give point and effectiveness to Canada's participation in the war. It is to be expected that the partizan truce that has been in effect for nearly eighteen months will be in play. This properly regarded, means that there will be absence of critical partizanship to the end that our representatives can concert the best measure for the country doing its full duty. While there should be, and will be, unanimous, support of the government in all wise proposals to this end, there should not be, and will not be, abstention from criticism. The portion of parliament that, in normal times, represents the Opposition, will not be expected to abstain from any criticism whose object is to correct conditions that militate against the interests of our militant participation in the war; they can use benign and truly patriotic criticism. Nor should we expect the normal supporters of the government's general policy to abstain from criticism if there be legitimate ground for it. The aim of both parties is to have Canada do her best. Governments are human and liable to err, by inadvertentency if not from intent. They have to combat the influences that in our ordinary life of peace are quick and eager to use the government and its machinery for selfish ends. If these or similar influences have impaired the execution of the government's programme, that in the man invites undivided support, the work of true patriotism is to try to correct any abuses or shortcomings that would interfere with what is the common aim of the government, both parties in Parliament, and all the people. A sound, wholesome, honest criticism is not only consistent with the party truce, but a patriotic duty incumbent upon every member of parliament.

OUR LADS IN THE TRENCHES.

Now is the time when the Christmas spirit—whose essence is good will to the other fellow, thinking of the other fellow—should come into the fullest play in our hearts and actions. It is all very well to think of these in our own home circle where plenty and comfort abound, where there is no lack of the material good things of life; no lack of affectionate solicitude; where little ills are tenderly treated; where the loved ones are sheltered from every cold wind of discomfort, and where the Christmas reminders appeal to home inmates as a mere treat, a break in the monotony of good things, of plenty and comfort and even of affection. But there is another pic-

AN APPEALING CALL FOR FIELD COMFORTS FOR CANADIANS AT WAR

The following most intimate appeal to our active sympathy is an extract from a letter written, written from "somewhere" in the wilderness of war, by Dr. Frank S. Park, to his father, Mr. Andrew Park, of Matthews-Blackwell, Limited, Toronto:

Regarding comforts for the men. I can only describe to you the condition of the men in the trenches as I saw them at sick parade. By far the majority of cases are the sick, not wounded. They are mostly colds, or rather exacerbations of colds, for the most of the poor chaps are never free from "colds." They come in from the trenches, absolutely covered with mud, wet from their feet up and are always cold. Medicine is no use for such cases. They must be dried, their wet clothes removed and dried, and their feet warmly clothed. "Trench feet" is the name given to a condition which will be common from now on. It is a species of chilblain, the whole feet are swollen, red and extremely tender. Even the touch of the socks is agony. This condition results from a long exposure in water plus the constricted circulation caused by a wet tight puttee. The only relief is a thorough drying, dry socks and rest.

So I am going to try to have in my dressing station a room where I can have a good fire for these chaps to sit around, dry socks that I can put their feet into, slippers that they can put on, and a few dry clothes for them to wear. I want to be able to give them some hot coffee, or tea, or soup. A day's rest under such conditions will improve their condition wonderfully. Even when wounded, the chaps suffer more from the cold and their wet clothes than from their wounds, and we would be able to make their long journey to the hospital more bearable if they started warm and in dry clothes.

I suggested to Colonel Gordon, who immediately passed it on to Mrs. Plummer, who has something to do with the Field Comforts Association, that two or three dozen pairs of socks, a couple of dozen pairs of slippers, and a few warm dressing-gowns, would be a great boon to our sick boys, and I believe we'll be able to get them. If you at home want to help directly, you could see that the culinary end is not lacking. Tea we can usually get, but meat extracts for beef tea, coffee essences, condensed milk, etc., would be a most acceptable gift. We don't have any trouble getting surgical dressings, so you had better save them for the Red Cross people. Hot water is always wanted, and I have often wished for a Thermos bottle. That would indeed be a useful gift.

To see these chaps come in wounded after having spent four or five days continuously in the trenches without a chance to take off their wet clothes, to see them shiver when their wounds are bared, and realize that it is not from pain but from cold and wet, we can't help realizing that more pleasant than dressing to the wound and more soothing than the morphine they are given, would be a suit of clean dry clothes and a warm fire.

The men are wonderful. They seldom complain. They are grit clean through. I tell you, when you see men with shrapnel wounds on head, body and arms, blood from head to foot, apologize to the men who carry the stretcher, because he can't walk, and then apologize to the surgeon because he is so dirty and can't keep his shivering muscles still to be dressed, then you will realize that nothing is too good for our "Tommies"—Hats off to them, there isn't any army in the world can show such stuff, and there isn't any organization that can beat them.

FRANK S. PARK, Capt.,
Medical Officer, 4th Can. Mounted Rifles, France.

ture in the battlefields; in the slouths of trenches. We cannot picture the conditions there, where the boys who left comfortable homes and comfortable billets in workshop or office are fighting our battles; and, not only fighting against a relentless enemy, but fighting wet and cold and hunger and perhaps weakened by the illness these conditions bring, and deprived of every comfort which the poorest of us are accustomed to at home. No mother to concoct simple remedies for a prostrating cold, no mother to pin about our necks a sock, the old remedy for a cold in the throat—to tuck the patient in the warm, dry bed and bring up a steaming porringer of gruel, "sweetened to the taste." If we would show the real Christmas spirit we would put ourselves in their place and think to real effect of providing the soldiers in the fields, in the trenches, in the field hospitals, some of the comforts, for lack of which they not only suffer discomfort and pain, but risk of life.

In this connection the reader is referred to a letter appearing on this page from a Canadian doctor at the front. Read it; feel it; act upon it. If you have a heart, if you have one thought outside of yourself and your own ease and comfort, the facts it contains will appeal to you. Your boy, your brother, your husband may not be among them, but they are all represented by the boy or brother or husband of somebody else. If through the appointed agencies you give practical thought to the Canadian boys in the field, in the trenches or on the painful way to the field hospitals, lacerated with wounds, covered with mud, wet to the skin for days, or in the grip of la-grippe, you will all the better enjoy your Christmas dinner, and sleep more soundly in your comfortable bed.

THE REWARD OF WAR.

For years Canada has been financially coddled by Great Britain, borrowing money by the million every year. Canada, however, has found herself, not only in the money manner, but in other ways, and we are now drawing the boot on the other foot; we are helping finance Great Britain. The Dominion Government has advanced 59 million dollars as credit to Great Britain to finance shell orders placed in this country and half of the 100 million dollar loan will be used as a credit to the British government. It is stated the Canadian banks and the Finance Minister are maturing a plan to finance war expeditions and promote British purchases in Canada. In this we are only paying a small instalment of the debt we owe the Old Country. We gladly do this as well as give yeoman service in the battlefield. The price of war is costly; but it will be worth the price to have had demonstrated the indestructible unity of that magnificently wonderful conglomeration, the British Empire, sundered by hemispheric seas, but one ance war expenditures and promote in interest and achievement.

CANADA'S REVEL IN RECORDS.

Those who revel in new Canadian records should feel in high fettle. In the past few weeks, some notable figures have been recorded. The first internal war loan of $50,000,000 was oversubscribed by $54,000,000. The bank savings deposits in October, at $710,000,000, were the highest on record. The wheat crop of the Western provinces is estimated by the government at 304,000,000 bushels, as against the previous high record of 200,000,000 bushels. Canadian Pacific Railway net earnings in October were nearly $1,000,000 greater than for any one moth previously. November bank clearings of $909,000,000 were better than those for any other November or, indeed, for any other month on record. Winnipeg's bank clearings of $246,000,000 in November are $32,000,000 more than Winnipeg's previous high record. The national revenue during November showed an increase of $7,000,000 over that of November last year and was the largest revenue for any month in Canada's history. Canadian exports in October were $84,000,000 or $24,000,000 more than in any previous month on record. The trade balance is constantly improving in our favour.—Monetary Times.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS.

President Hoot of the Burroughs-Audubon Nature club showed an attentive audience a night or two ago how fascinating the study of birds and plants can be. All around us, as soon as the foot forsakes the pavement, wherever a sidewalk ends and a field or a forest path or the turf of a park begins, a page of surpassing interest lies open. There is no single commonplace or unimportant fact upon it. Nowhere in all the bewildering multiplicity of living things is the tiniest life form to be found which has been hastily or imperfectly fashioned. Nowhere is there a plant, a weed which is not a work of the highest artistry filling to unimprovable perfection its place and function in the scheme of things. There is no microscopic seed which is not sculptured with unimaginable delicacy and beauty, no chalice of a flower which is not moulded and tinted with exquisite, inimitable art. Man makes ugly noise machines which rattle and crash as their pinions grind together, but in nature's marvellous mechanisms we find that perfect adaptation to an end in view necessitates perfect beauty in construction.

The reason why so few of us turn with delight to the Creator's book is unflattering to us but not far to seek. We have not cultivated our taste for the truly beautiful. We are still barbarians who prefer noise to music, a discordant din to harmony. The beasts of the field are strictly utilitarian and are not credited with any aesthetic perception or appreciation. We have as a race developed a measure of it; but have we left the animal as far behind as we sometimes fancy? Are not our chief interests still those of lower life forms—comfort, sense, pleasures? Especially are we city dwellers prone to neglect and forget and lose interest in the great outdoors where everything is wonderful and beautiful. Crude man-made beings, the bad smells and discordant noises of civilization, make up so much of our environment that we are habituated to them and have come to prefer our world to the Creator's world. But, a reaction from this is under way and our children in life outdoors, in woodcraft, in nature study, and far more love of birds and delight in flowers and roadside weeds and noble trees than their fathers felt. With that fuller perception of the beautiful will come an intenser admiration and gratitude for the incomparable, infinite Artist who fashioned it all.—Rochester Post.

Lime is generally referred to as a soil amendment rather than a plant food. Lime corrects acidity and helps to improve the physical condition of many soils, especially of soil organisms. Lime may be applied in the spring or fall after the ground has been dug over, working it into the surface with a rake. For one application 500 pounds per acre will usually be sufficient.

group, partly Liberal and partly Tory critics, hoped to utilize the occasion to deal a heavy blow, perhaps even precipitate another change in the Ministry. But Bonar Law's splendid loyalty and convincing speech destroyed the combination and the Ministry stands strongly against all opponents. Next week may have a decisive debate on the question of conscription. The extraordinary returns of Lord Derby's recruiting campaign prove that all the men wanted are to be had by voluntary instead of compulsory methods. Ireland certainly does not want conscription for Lord Lieutenant Wimbourne in the last few weeks has added 10,000 to the 100,000 Irishmen already recruited.

Spending a week-end at Nottingham, I suddenly realized that I was not far away from Newstead Abbey, the home of Lord Byron, nor from the little church in which he was buried. I found also that Newstead Abbey had passed into the hands of a friend of mine; so when I announced that I wanted to pay a visit to the shrine of the most compelling figure in Britain literature, I received an invitation to lunch, and had my own time to inspect the place. The present owner is Sir Arthur Markham. He is a Nottinghamshire man; was born within twelve miles of Newstead; has amassed a great fortune in coal, and is a striking figure in the House of Commons, outspoken, audacious, almost an Ishmael, because he criticises so freely all men even in the highest positions. Whatever his eccentricity, however, in the House, he has the genius for business; no mine almost he has ever touched has failed to turn to gold.

Newstead Abbey.

Everybody familiar with Byron knows how deeply he loved Newstead. When he found himself in his childhood transferred from cheap lodgings in Aberdeen to this ancestral home, he described himself as living in a palace. In some respects the description is true. To-day it looks splendid; hoary with age and memories; an epitome in some respects of the History of England. As its name implies, it was once an Abbey, and was one of the monastic institutions which Henry VII. diverted from the church to his nobles; the foundation of most of the fortunes of the ancient aristocracy of England, including the Cavendishes, the Fitzmaurices—of whom Lord Lansdowne is the head, and the Russells with the Duke of Bedford as the present leader of that illustrious line. There is scarcely a part of the building, even with modern improvements, that does not look like a monastery. Everywhere you pass through cloisters—some of them reminiscent of the cloisters in the House of Commons, now used as a cloak room, but relics of the days when an Abbey began to make Westminster one of the notable spots in the growing village of London. It was a cold day and a walk through these long and bare cloisters made one shiver; as a matter of fact, there are hot water pipes all over the place, but the restless spirit of the great business man who is now the possesor has resolved on radical improvements, and for the moment the hot water pipes were up, and the cold was left to work its will through the bleak cloisters.

Around there are remnants of the chapel and the other monastic buildings; they are more or less in ruin, and this adds to the air of ancient and brooding history which is characteristic of the whole place. It is extremely irregular; there are big and almost palatial rooms, and then there are tiny rooms where you could scarcely swing a cat. The stairs in some places are steep and narrow. The room in which Baron himself used to live is at the top of the house; might well indeed be called an attic; but it has a beautiful view out on the grounds and the remnants of the old abbey. You have to approach it by one of these winding litle staircases; nowadays it would be objected to by a domestic servant of a lordly footman, as too remote and too troublesome to reach.

Each Has a History.

Each of the big bedrooms has a history. The Royal family preserved the right to use these bedrooms when it suited them and when they found themselves in that part of the country. One room is called the King Edward II. room, and another the room of Charles II.; a third is called the Duke of Sussex room. Poor Byron did not make much use of these spacious and palatial chambers; he was too poor when he was transferred to Newstead, and had to be content with a few of the smaller rooms, including that attic in which he lived and dreamed; and started the poem that in a day made him famous and immortal instead of poor and neglected.

There are few Byron relics in the Abbey, a sword and some other relics of the ancestors—those strange and eccentric soldiers and sailors who gave to Byron the hot blood and the abnormal nerves that at once made him a poet and an outcast. Curiously enough, there are more reminiscences of David Livingstone, the great explorer whom Henry M. Stanley found in Africa. The explanation is that Newstead Abbey was for many years the home of a Colonel Webb. Webb was a globe-trotting Englishman; one of his friends was the great African missionary, and Livingstone was his honoured guest for some time, wrote some of his works there, and a medallion of the strong typically Scotch face is on the wall. The great dining-room — quite a Royal chamber—was too cold for lunch; so we took our meal in a small comfortable room at its side. One of the curiosities of the place is a tablet in one of the cloisters where are set forth the names of the Augustinian friars who formerly were the owners of the Abbey, put up by I know not whom—probably some devotee of the ancient faith.

Byron's Tomb.

I was even more anxious to see Byron's tomb. Every Byron scholar will remember that long and dreary procession of Byron's remains from the Misselonghi to his home; with the refusal of the authorities of Westminster Abbey to allow the remains of one of England's greatest figures to die in the goodly company of the poets and the writers. That tragic procession took nearly two months before it reached its goal—from May 26 to July 16. Hucknall Torkard in the slight and short glimpse I got of it seemed just an ordinary English working-class village. One of the incidents, it will be remembered, was that Lady Melbourne, the Lady Caroline Lamb of an earlier date—wife of a man who was Prime Minister of England, and Queen Victoria's first Premier, tutor and friend—accidentally met the funeral procession outside London. She had been one of Byron's first, most passionate and most tempestuous loves; and their passion had ended in a fierce quarrel, with the most venomous and unrestrained and vituperative letter Byron ever wrote; it is preserved in his published letters. The coffin of the dead lover brought back all the complicated past, and she never recovered; died soon after; the always unbalanced mind had received its final shock.

The church at Hucknall Torkard is a fair size, and has been beautified a good deal by one of its rectors. The tomb of Byron is a disappointment. There is nothing to show that one so illustrious lies below, except a short slab with the name Byron upon it. The remains lie in a sealed vault below to which there is no access, except by opening up a big stone, which has never been done since the remains of his mother and his daughter were placed in the row of the unhappy Byrons of former generations, by the side of whom the greatest of the name sleeps.

Other Memorials.

There are other memorials, however, of Byron—a medallion placed there by Augusta Leigh, the half-sister with whose name his is inextricably associated—whether in guilt or in pure affection the world hasn't yet decided. Apart from this and a little away from it, there is another memorial of Byron which struck me as an outrage. I remember seeing in the House of Commons in the far back eighties and afterwards, walking through Pall Mall, an eccentric and very rich Scotch baronet named Sir Tollemarche Sinclair — with the red beard of the Highlander and the rather mystic look. He was an eccentric always apparently in a passion about something, and unable to restrain the desire for communicating these outbursts of rage in spluttering letters to the papers. He took it into his head that he also would commemorate Byron; so he put up a tablet in which there are a number of quotations from Victor Hugo, Chateaubriand, even Disraeli, bearing testimony to the genius of Byron; as if Byron required testimonials. A companion wittily described that this tablet is a series of press cuttings.

One more little incident. There is in the graveyard outside the tomb of Ben Caunt. Ben Caunt was a famous prize fighter. "They say," said the old sexton with a smile, "that as many people come to see the tomb of Ben Caunt as of Byron; but," he added, "it isn't true." I hope not.

PLEASANT EVENING AT ST. ANDREW'S

Yesterday evening a most enjoyable time was spent at St. Andrew's Church in the Lecture Room, for the purpose of discussing the organization of a Young People's Society, at which Mr. George Gillespie made a most efficient chairman.

The early part of the programme consisted of guessing contests, some blow-ball matches, etc., interspersed by solos by Miss MacLaren and Messrs. Coleman, Langford and Evans.

After the social hour Mr. Thompson President of the George Street Methodist Y. P. S., gave an instructive address for the organization and merits of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church. After a good discussion committees were appointed to discuss the matter more fully and report on January 7th. The following members were elected to represent the ladies Mrs. J. John, Misses E. Rae, M. Rae H. Maclaren, MacNab, A. Richardson. The members representing the men were: Messrs. W. Richardson R. Langford, R. Glover, W. Armstrong and E. Walton.

After refreshments and the singing of God Save the King the enjoyable meeting came to a close.

The Young People of St. Andrew's appreciated very highly the kindness of Messrs. Thompson and Coleman as well as the others, in making the evening such an enjoyable one.

At The Theatre

The announcement of the coming engagement to the Grand Opera House of May A. Bell Marks supported by R. W. Marks, Manager and Proprietor, Marks Bros.' No. 1 Dramatic Company which opens with matinee, Saturday, December 25th. Christmas Day will be appreciated by all the theatre goers as they will receive an attraction that is run on entirely different plans than the general line of these attractions. It is Mr. Marks' effort to elevate his attraction so as it will outclass all others and command the dignity and sphere of the dollar attraction and give to his patrons a variety of production that are so costly in mounting and costuming and settings that others dare not venture to follow in his steps which will make him leader and be classed in a field by himself.

In organization, May A. Bell Marks was not satisfied to depend upon the word of man or woman, agent or manager, but devoted the summer in visiting all the principal cities; there securing her supporting cast which she now has and which is one that can be depended upon as being the best that money can obtain. Mr. R. W. Marks also devoted much of his time in securing his plays and out of the hundreds of manuscripts from which he had to select from he would only take those on a contract that would be absolutely under his control for a season and in this way he knew that he had property that no others would present to his patrons.

Five More Men From Apsley For 93rd Battalion

Recruiting Meeting Held on Monday Night Proved a Most Successful One

Special to The Examiner:

APSLEY, Dec. 17.—A largely attended and enthusiastic recruiting meeting was held in the Town Hall, Apsley, Monday night, Dec. 13. Lieut. Carter of the 93rd Battalion has been interviewing the young men here during the past week or so, and this meeting was called to get some of the boys to enlist and start the ball rolling. The meeting opened at 8 o'clock. Reeve Lean was chairman, and the speakers were Rev. E. W. Jarder, Rev. S. Carr and Lieut. Carter. Both of the reverend gentlemen made telling speeches, and while Lieut. Carter's able description of events at the front and the valour of the Canadians brought vividly to the minds of those present the necessity of more men at the front, resulted in five new recruits coming forward to aid the motherland, viz.; Zeddick Hales, Bert McIlmoyle, John Coates, David Coones, and Hugh Jones.

There are a number of our boys already with the 93rd Battalion in Peterborough, and no doubt many more will join later.

After three rousing cheers for the King and the new recruits the meeting closed.

Lieut. Carter has worked hard and hopes for twice as many more yet.

The Apsley Choir rendered some very appropriate pieces; recitations by Mrs. Wm. Staples, Paul Gardener and Ruth Gardener; violin solo, John Coone, accompanied by Miss Ella Brown. Mrs. (Rev.) Gardener presided at the organ.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' DISTRIBUTION

The King's Daughters desire that all donations of supplies for the annual Christmas distribution will be sent to the recruiting rooms on Simcoe street, next to the T.A.S. Hall, not later than Monday afternoon. Baskets will be sent out on Tuesday.

Red Cross Society Fund For Canadian Prisoners of War

A Timely Appeal to Practical Public Interest in Their Condition

The Peterborough Red Cross Society desires to acknowledge with grateful thanks the receipt of a cheque from Captain Burnham, M.P., for sixty dollars, of one from the Cheese Board for twenty-five dollars, and one for twenty dollars from the Progressive Club of which Miss Peck is President. The latter sum is for the "adoption" of ten Canadian prisoners of war in Geramny. The Club has very generously agreed to give this sum monthly, so ten of our Canadian boys in the land of their captivity will have reason to regard the Peterborough Progressive Club as "a bit of all right." The prisoners in Germany are in dire need of food, the exchanged prisoners arriving in London urge the sending of more and more parcels.

"If it were not for these, very many of us would have starved; the German food is very poor; much of it cannot be eaten; the men are really terribly in need of food." These are the words of one of our exchanged prisoners. Twenty-one exchanged prisoners of war arrived in London last month. Every one of them had to be sent immediately to the London Hospital at Wandsworth. Mrs. Rivers Bulkely and Miss Lowther went to see them. "Their face told without any words, a story of great privation and of endurance, and one felt it must be heaven for them to be again surrounded by friends and to exchange the rough handling of the prison orderlies for the gentler ministrations of the nurses.

The first man we visited was much injured and unable to sit up in bed. "We asked him," says Mrs. Bulkely, "what we could do for him, would he like some fruit?" "Oh, yes, very much, and could you send me an account of the battle we were in at the end of April?" was his reply.

It is hard for us to realise how completely cut off the men were who were taken prisoners at that time.

Another of the men gave me the daily menu at the prison camp he was confined in:

4.30, Breakfast—Thin soup or porridge, either one or the other.

12 O'clock Dinner—Soup, made of coarse beans and potato peelings (often rancid.)

5 O'clock Supper—Raw herring (generally high), three potatoes only partially eatable, 3 slices of black bread daily.

The same man said those who were lucky enough to get parcels from the Canadian Red Cross gave their prison food to the Russians, numbers of whom die of starvation, as they only get half the allowance of the British and Canadian prisoners, who in their turn get less than do the French. Some of these exchanged prisoners were wearing clothes and boots sent them by the Canadian Red Cross," concludes Mrs. Bulkely.

The expense of sending parcels to our prisoners makes a heavy call on our resources, but when one hears how they would fare without our parcels of food, clothing, socks, boots, blankets, etc., we feel the call must be answered.

Some people say "this does not help the war." An argument such as this would eliminate in times of peace. Most of our expenditures on behalf of the weak, the incurable, the unfit. Such expeditnure in the commercial sense, is not a paying proposition, but we can only cut it out at the cost of all the higher elements of civilization.

Peterborough has been generous, and through the channels of giving we have come to know and appreciate one another better. What was merely a glib saying before has now become a great reality and we realize with a greater power than ever before the truth "that it is more blessed to give than to receive."

The Peterborough Red Cross Society has, as a result of the recent canvass on its behalf, been able to allocate fifty dollars monthly to the Prisoners' Fund. This sum added to the twenty of the Progressive Club, and two or three private "adoptions" means the forwarding from Peterborough of about eighty dollars monthly for our boys who are cut off from home, friends and the ordinary necessities of life.

Christmas-tide draws near, the special season for the expression of our love and good will towards one another. Think of Belgium, Poland, Serbia and Armenia. What a Christmas for those peoples. Husbandless, fatherless, motherless, homeless, foodless and clotheless (if I may coin a term). No Santa Claus for the boys and girls of these sorely stricken lands, but in Peterborough "Santa" still comes to both young and old.

Happiness, comfort, love, is our portion this Christmas-tide, but away in Germany and Prussia there will be many longing, aching hearts for "the old folks at home," a longing which canot be satisfied for a long, weary day yet.

Would any Peterborough boy or girl big or little, old or young, care to be "Santa" to a Canadian soldier boy, to whisper to "Santa" that they do not desire so much for themselves this Christmas, but that they would like to send something that would say "cheer up" to a lonely, homesick Canadian soldier, a prisoner in a strange land. If you feel your own Christmas would be all the happier for your doing this, send your gift to the Prisoners of War Fund of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, and it will be forwarded and some boy will feel less lonely, and will realize that he is not forgotten though far from the home land.

The cost of each parcel is one dollar. They are packed in the Civil Service Stores in London, under the supervision of Miss Stikeman and in the presence of [illegible] and stamped by him. Thus they arrive intact at the prison camps.

The Canadian Red Cross now has the bread made at Berne, Switzerland, and it goes direct to our men, and arrives in better condition and less stale than when sent from London.

Convener Publicity Department.

A TRIUMPH FOR THE KHAKI CLAD BAND

not the most difficult, was one of the most effective of the evening. This was the descriptive selection, "Under Freedom's Flag," a most cleverly arranged compilation of the national airs of the Allies. The number aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and the effect was added to by the display of the flags of the different countries by Sergt.-Major Miller. Included in the selection were "The British Grenadiers," "Men of Harlech," "Cock o' the North," "Garry Owen," "The Maple Leaf," "Motherland," "Under the Same Old Flag," "India's Reply," "La Brabanconne" (Belgium's National Air) "The Russian National Hymn," "La Marseillaise" "Rule Britannia," and "God Save the King."

The Individual Artists.

The work of the soloists was a fitting auxiliary to the splendid performance of the band. Lieut. Raymond's most pleasing voice was heard to great advantage in the stirring song "Heroes and Gentleman," and he had to respond to an enthusiastic recall. Lieut. Bailey sang the solo "Big Ben," in excellent voice and with effective expression, and in response to the outburst of applause contributed "Mother Machree," in equally pleasing style. Quartermaster Sergt. Goodhouse, the possessor of a rich robust voice, threw a depth of feeling into his rendition of "The Veteran's Song," that earned him a warm-hearted encore. He replied with "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," the band and audience joining in the chorus.

Bandsman Tom Smith in his 'cello solo, Rubenstein's immortal "Melody in F," showed a thorough mastery of his difficult instrument, getting a pure rich tone that made his number altogether delightful. In response to the applause he played with equal skill the beautiful number "When Other Lips" from "The Bohemian Girl"

Sergt. Leader aroused enthusiasm with his splendidly executed baritone solo, "Pretty Jane," with an effective accompaniment by the band. The 93rd is lucky to have secured the services of such an accomplished musician as Sergt. Leader.

Bandsmen Payton and Walno scored a most decided hit in their cornet duet "Labord Watch," the two instruments intermingling in most effective style. The audience liked the number so well that they insisted upon an encore.

And last, but by no means least, was Mr. T. Stratton, a newcomer to Peterborough, and as clever an imitator of Harry Lauder as has been seen here. Mr. Stratton has the infectious laugh and burr of the Scotch entertainer down to a nicety, and he couples with his ability as a mimic a very pleasing voice. The audience could not get enough of him last night, and after singing several of Lauder's newer songs, he had to come back and sing "Roamin' in the Gloaming."

Mr. J. H. Renwick added to the success of the occasion by his sympathetic accompaniments, and Sergt. Leader rendered good service at the piano for the instrumental solos.

Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable programmes heard here in a long time, and a crowded house should be on hand to-night when the concert is to be repeated. By no means miss it if you enjoy good music.

Great Quantities of Fowl at Top-notch Prices—Butter and Eggs at Usual Figures—Next Friday Will Be Market Day

Fowl occupied a commanding position on the market to-day, not only in number, but also in price. The farmers, very wisely have been holding their choice birds for an enhanced figure. Turkeys were quoted all the way from 19c to 25c per pound. The following are a few sample quotations: A 15-lb. bird for $2.50, 20 lbs. for $3.75, 22 lbs. for $5.00, and 30 lbs. for $6.50. Truly turkeys were a luxury, and only people with large bank accounts could afford them.

Geese were correspondingly high. Eleven-pound birds brought $1.55, 8 lbs. $1.50, 16 lbs. $2.00 and $2.25, averaging on the whole, 15 or 16 cents a pound.

Chickens sold for 90 to $1.000 a pair.

To give one an idea of the quantity of fowl offered it is simply necessary to refer to a sample case; that of a farmer and his business-like helpmate, who brought 10 turkeys and 12 geese to market, all in excellent condition, which they were selling at 17 cents a pound for geese, and 25 cents for turkeys.

Eggs maintained their usual price of 40 cents a dozen, although one woman asked 42 and another 45c, but the latter explained that hers were a special brand.

Butter sold at 30 cents.

Bananas brought 25 cents a dozen, and oranges 30 and 40 cents.

Outside Section.

Christmas trees were a feature of this morning's market, and were being snatched up at 25c to $1.00 each.

One load of 4-foot hardwood was offered at $6.00.

Potatoes made their appearance once more at the same old figure of $1.00 a bag. One farmer, however, was asking $1.75, but, no doubt, he would have to lower the price before the day was over.

Apples were not so plentiful as usual, and were somewhat cheaper and of an inferior quality. They were quoted by the barrel as follows: Arctic Spy $3.50, Northern Spy $4.50, Canada Red $3.00, and Talman Sweet $3.25.

Pork brought 14 and 15 cents, beef 10 and 11 cents, and lamb 15 and 17 cents.

Vegetables brought their standard prices. Onions $1.35, and carrots 60 cents a bag.

Home-Made Cooking and Fancy Work.

The ladies of Mr. Horn's Bible Class, and those of Miss Wood's, of the George St. Methodist Church, had fancy work and home-made cooking for sale, respectively.

Friday, Market Day.

By order of the Retail Merchants' Association next Friday has been set aside as the big Public Market Day before Christmas.

A Suggestion.

The aisles, or spaces between tables, in the Market Hall are not all the same width, due to the fact that an allowance has to be made for two stoves, and as a result the congestion in the outside aisles is very noticeable, particularly on a big day. One way of overcoming this inequality would be to place sheet iron screens around the two stoves and move the tables over nearer the centre. The screens would prevent people coming in contact with the stoves, and would provide a more effective and quicker way of heating the hall.

LITERARY RAMBLES

Green's "Short History of the English People.

The above does not perhaps appear at first sight a very inviting title with which to tempt the ordinary reader. The word seems to smell of dry-rot and mould. School children for the most part hate the mention of history and many grown-ups fairly abominate it. Yet, one cannot help feeling that if people could be induced to take more interest in a subject that deals with matters vitally affecting their status as patriotic citizens the country would be very greatly the gainer. History when properly presented is anything but a dry subject. How can it be when it embodies every ingredient that is to be found in human nature? The work before us is one that amply bears out this statement, but before dealing with the book it will be of interest to know a little about the author.

John Richard Green was essentially a man of English University type. First a student at Magdalene College school, he afterwards went to Jesus College, where he obtained an open scholarship. On leaving the University he entered the Anglican ministry and became incumbent of St. Philip's, Stepney, where he became known as an able and eloquent preacher and a diligent visitor amongst the poor of his parish. Always of a studious turn with a decided taste for delving into documents dealing with the social progress of the English people he finally abandoned clerical life and devoted himself entirely to his hobby. He was impelled to this partly owing to weak health and partly because he found himself out of sympathy with the doctrines of the Anglican church. In 1868 he was appointed librarian at Lambeth and in 1883, at the age of forty-six, he died.

This in brief, is the story of the man whose work has been extolled as the only complete history of England really worth purchasing.

The history was published in 1874 and was afterwards expanded into a work of four volumes which was published between the years 1877-1880. Its popularity during the intervening years has never waned. The novelty of the style no less than its inherent excellence attracted a multitude of readers. It was planned by Mr. Green as a departure from the stereotyped method hitherto pursued by historians wherein special stress was laid on battles, sieges, and the charactera of kings and queens to the detriment of a true portrayal of the life of the people. In his wonderful word-painting his style is reminiscent of Macauley, of Gibbon and of Hume, for he places before us in a succession of brilliant pictures the history of the various periods.

The following paragraph, taken from an excellent article which appeared a short time since in the Christian Science Monitor, gives in a few words a very clear conception of the scope of the work.

"There is more in his book about the Bible than there is about courts, more about Shakespeare than about war. You hear John Bell preaching in Kent and mingle with the crowd in Caxton's shop where the bare-armed apprentices are tugging at the bars of the creaking presses. You jostle with the crowd of poor scholars in the Oxford "High" and listen to the academical bell of St. Mary's pealing against the town bell of St. Martin's. You ride with Erasmus and Colet to Canterbury, and make one with the wonderful meetings at the Mitre. You watch the growth of the English town and the evolution of the trade guilds. You hear the tramp of the trained bands marching through London, and join the silent crowds whilst some haphazard scholar reads from the great chained Bible at St. Paul's. Mr. Fox comes to town and Mr. Wesley rides away to preach in Cornwall. The wonderful stories of the Chroniclers and the rondeaux of the troubadours sound in your ears. You see the priest at Earnley bending over his bookskin and listen to the bishop singing that wonderful Latin drinking song of Walter de Map. So the history of the English people unfolds itself before your eyes, since in Mr. Green's own words "the mill by the stream, the tolls in the market place, the brasses of its burghers in the church, the names of its streets, the lingering memory of its guilds, the mace of its mayor, tell us more of the past of English than the spire of Sarum or the martyrdom of Canterbury."

I think that paragraph in itself is enough to create an appetite for the book. We want to know all there is to know about John Bell, that sturdy priest, one of the oldest of Socialists, who was excommunicated for his utterances on the principles of social equality and finally executed before Richard II for his participation in the peasant revolt of 1381. He it was who gave vent to the famous words, "When dam delved and Eve span Who was then a gentleman."

The occasion was in a sermon at Blackheath, where he used them as a text in the exposition of his doctrines. We want to know also all we can about Erasmus and Colet and the meetings of the poets at the Mitre Tavern and many other things, which we feel must be incorporated in Green's masterly pages. The book is in the Library, is easily obtainable and can be guaranteed to give first class satisfaction to all who dip into its pages. It may be of interest to many to know that Green is supposed to be the original of Robert Elsmere in Mrs. Ward's well-known book of that name.

UNLIMITED ARRAY OF XMAS GIFTS

At the Peterborough Hardware Store—Many Beautiful and Useful Articles at the Right Prices

The Christmas season is here once again, and the oft recurring question "What shall I give for Christmas presents?" is as bewildering as ever. Now this perplexity would be rendered a mere trifle if one would make a visit to the Peterborough Hardware Store. Here suggestions of suitable gifts are found on every hand. The handsomely designed show windows invite inspection of the goods to be had at this place of business. The north window is tastefully arranged in Yuletide colours, and sets forth to advantage articles of silver, of the famous 1847 Rogers Bros.' type—the silver plate that wears—and is not only indescribably ornamental in appearance, but is guaranteed to be serviceable as well. The south window, also very attractive in design, displays sewing sets and many other useful articles.

In silver one has the very finest array of casseroles, crumb sets, coffee machines, chafing dishes, manicure sets, vases, etc. Any one of these appeals to the purchaser for its beauty and its usefulness, and the warm reception it is certain to receive from who ever happens to be the lucky recipient.

In electric conveniences a complete stock of electric toasters, tea and coffee pots, irons, electric stoves, etc. For some no gift could be more suitable than one of the electric time and money savers.

Then, too, the sleighs, skates, tools knives, hockey sticks, rifles, shot guns, razors, military brushes, shaving sets, and brass jardinieres, pedestals, fire sets, etc.

Your Christmas shopping cannot be in any sense complete unless you have inspected the almost unlimited range of gifts in the Peterborough Hardware Store.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—With the two Aldermen in the West Ward likely to be candidates for the Mayoralty, and as one of them will necessarily be defeated I write suggesting the name of Mr. George H. Duncan, an experienced Alderman, as a candidate for the Mayoralty in the West Ward this year. He has proven himself to be a first-class Alderman with the interests of the city at heart, and as the Council is short of experienced men, I would like to see ex-Alderman Duncan consent to run in our Ward. I do not know him personally or would speak to him, but I hope that this will serve the purpose.

Yours truly,
WEST ENDER.

MR. G. H. DUNCAN WILL BE A CANDIDATE

Well Known Ex-Alderman Will Run in the West Ward

Mr. G. H. Duncan has announced his intention of contesting one of the aldermanic vacancies in the West Ward. Mr. Duncan is no stranger to the electors of Peterborough, having served a number of years in the Council, and also as member of the Board of Health. The entry of Alderman Green and Duffus into the mayoralty campaign will create two vacancies in the West Ward.

VIVID ADDRESSES BY SERGT- CROSIER AND LT.-COL. MILLS ON WAR

Lindsay Soldier, Recently a Prisoner in Germany, Gives a Most Graphic Description of Life at the Front and in the German Prison Camp.

A FINE PROGRAMME

A most enjoyable evening was spent in the Charlotte street Methodist Sunday school last night when Sergt. Crosier of Lindsay, until recently a prisoner in Germany, and Lt.-Col. Mills of the 2nd Battalion, gave most vividly interesting addresses under the auspices of the Charlotte street C.L.A. The speakers held the audience spellbound as they related some of the experiences of the Canadian contingent.

Sergt. Crosier dealt with the adventures of the first division from its mobilization at Valcartier, telling first something of the life at the big Quebec camp, of the voyage across the Atlantic and of the terrible conditions the Canadians met a Salisbury Plains. Then he passed onto describe the move to France and the first experiences the Canadians had near the firing line.

It was at Ypres that the boys got their first taste of real fighting. Without time to get a hot meal, the order went forth to relieve the French at this point, and Sergeant Crosier gave a graphic description of how the boys went into the trenches, many of them getting thoroughly wet while crossing the creeks on the way. This was on the 17th April last. In the first five days of their trench life they had 35 casualties. The trench walls were not bullet proof, and a good deal of difficulty was experienced at first because these had to be reconstructed. Notwithstanding these things, the boys always looked on the bright side of things and created as much fun and amusement for themselves as possible.

It was on the 22nd April last, when the Grenadiers with whom the Sergeant was on duty, were relieved by the 5th Highlanders, that the Germans began to use lyddite, and the speaker's battalion was ordered to reinforce the other unit. This was found impossible in the face of a murderous machine gun fire. A general attack was made by the Germans at this point, but they were withstood until nightfall. The Sergeant's description of what followed was intensely graphic. It was the story of how the two Canadian battalions held off a force of 10,000 Germans, and recaptured a whole battery of Canadian guns, which had been taken by the enemy's gas attack. The speaker described a day's sniping he had had, and how at the end of the day each of our snipers reported "a good day's business." For 36 hours at this time the Canadians had had no food or water.

On the Saturday following the Germans began to use high explosives and things looked serious for the Canadians. The reinforcements had not arrived, and it seemed impossible for the handful of Canadians to hold the position although ordered to do so. Their machine gun was put out of action, and the Germans had actually surrounded the little force and demanded a surrender. Instead, however, an effort was made to hack their way through, and some ten men out of about 40 left, actually accomplished the feat. Sergeant Crosier, with a great many others was wounded, and taken prisoner. He related seeing a German approach one of his comrades who attempted to raise himself, being badly wounded, and after gazing at him for a moment, deliberately shot the wounded man in the head, fortunately not killing him.

After lying on the battlefield for some 40 hours, Sergeant Crosier was picked up by the German Red Cross, and taken to the clearing hospital and thence to the hospital at Roulieres, where he was taken care of. The Sergeant stated that the Germans were attentive to them at this place but they were sent on to the ambulance train, where some of the prisoners were badly treated. The whole lot of them were sent on to the German prison camp at Waldrup, in Saxony, where they were placed in a huge barracks. The doctor in charge here was very bitter, and the treatment given some of the boys was brutal. Not all the German surgeons were like this; some of them were very kind. The prisoners were more neglected than actively misused. Their food largely was sent them in packages from England, and it was only through the kindness of the American counsel that some clothing was allowed to come through, which relieved the situation. Some German actually took a fancy to Sergeant Crosier's boots, and he was deprived of them. Instead wooden "clouts" were given out for the prisoners to use. Of the 125 English wounded in the barracks, about 4 soon were convalescent enough to play games and this helped to pass away time. The Sergeant spent from the 24th August till the 1st of October in this camp, when he was exchanged as a member of the Medical Corps, and sent to Great Britain, where he again had an enjoyable time as a convalescent.

Lt.-Col. Mills followed Sergt. Crosier with a most interesting address in which he dealt largely with the battle of St. Julien in which the previous speaker had been taken prisoner. Lt.-Col. Mills' description was a vivid one and combined with the address of Sergt. Crosier, gave the audience probably the clearest conception they have had of the terrible battle.

Lt.-Col. Mills illustrated his description by means of a large map prepared for him by Mr. T. A. S. Hay. Through this medium he was able to show the audience the exact position of the Canadian forces and their movements during the great struggle. The explanation was very clear and explicit and the audience followed Lt.-Mills' remarks with great interest.

Mr. Hone was chairman of the evening. Enjoyable vocal numbers were rendered by Miss Charlotte Hanson, and Messrs. D. Carlisle and Staples. Mrs. Cruickshanks acted as accompanist in a most capable manner.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

There will be a double-header in the Y.M.C.A. building Monday evening, December 20, it being the occasion of the parents' reception and inspection of the building, under the auspices of the Boys' Department and the launching of the Senior membership canvas. We trust that the parents of Peterborough's boys will inspect the facilities offered by the Y. M. C. A. Boy guides will show the visitors to every part of the building. At 6.30 supper will be served the workers who are to participate in the membership canvas. The teams selected are as follows, although the names of some workers are yet to be added:

Rosa Dobbin, Captain; C. S. Thompson, Ray Best, Dr. Middleton, Ted Raynor, P. McCarroll, Fred Preston Tom Gilchrist, Harold Lees.

Wm. Heaslip, Captain; Elmo Brown, Bruce Hamilton, W. Carruthers, Harry Carte, Harry Mulhern, Harold Adams, Alex. Pidgeon, Newton Staples.

Dr. Frank, Captain; Chas. Sisson, F. E. Ellis, C. H. Patterson, B. Grant, Leslie Waters, Jack Green.

It is proposed to conduct the canvas for two weeks, closing with the New Year's reception, January 1st. As the activities from now to the close of the winter will be boomed to the utmost, it is hoped that all old members will renew their memberships and that many new members will avail themselves of the privileges offered by the Y.M.C.A. A special Business Mens' Class is being organized for social intercourse and physical exercise. A special locker room is to be provided for business men who use the privileges. A special effort will be made to make the members of the 93rd Battalion feel at home in the building and a reception will be tendered them at a very early date. It is proposed to offer without charge to the soldiers the use of the new spacious lobby and correspondence room. It is also proposed to organize a soldiers' department of the Y.M.C.A. to enable every enlisted man to be on a full membership footing. One-half regular membership rates will be quoted soldiers or the full privileges will be granted an enlisted man on a bi-monthly ticket which he may secure for $1. We would like it understood that the fees charged soldiers are enrollment fees, and only cover one quarter the expenses of the privileges offered. We expect that the daily attendance will average about 500, and we would like to see the khaki uniform much in evidence.

walking ahead of Col. Rogers, when for some reason they changed places, the officer proceeding first. Almost immediately afterwards the guide was shot by a German sniper, whose intention no doubt was to pick off the officer. Such are the fortunes of war. —Cobourg World.

A cablegram was received yesterday by Lt.-Col. Birdsall, of Birdsall, from Major Wm. Beattie, stating that Captain Everett Birdsall, of the 2nd Battalion, has received a scalp wound, and had been sent direct to the hospital in England. Captain Birdsall left Cobourg with the first quota from the 40th Regt., 1st contingent.

The 93rd Battalion is not escaping the epidemic of la grippe which is general throughout the city and the sick parade this morning was a lengthy one. A large number of the 93rd men are suffering from la grippe. The Armouries Hospital is full. A number have been sent to the city hospitals and still others are confined to their bunks. The changeable weather and wet conditions under foot are given as the reasons for the outbreak.

Lieut. W. G. Bailey, who has been acting as assistant adjutant of the 93rd Battalion, has been summoned back to Kingston, where he was employed on the headquarters' staff up to the time he came to Peterborough. In his departure the 93rd Battalion loses a most valuable and valued member. Mr. Bailey has been of the greatest assistance in the work of organising the 93rd and no one appreciates his work more than the officers of the regiment, who are most sorry to have to bid him farewell. This morning Lieut. Bailey was presented with a handsome club bag by the 93rd officers, and Lt.-Col. Mills, Lt.-Col. Johnston, Major Watt, Hon Major Davidson, Capt. Lech and other officers expressed their deep regret that the headquarters staff needs Mr. Bailey's services at Kingston. All united in expressing their appreciation of his services as assistant-adjutant Lieut. Bailey left on the 1.30 train this afternoon and a number of the officers were at the station to bid him farewell.

Lieut. H. M. Snider of the 14th Regiment, Kingston, who has been attached to the 93rd Battalion for some time, has been transferred to the 146th Frontenac Battalion, and left for Kingston at noon today. Lieut. Snider has been in charge of the recruiting station on Simcoe Street, and has done good work there.

Bugler Allan C. Sharpe of the 39th Battalion, Sandling Camp, Kent, has been promoted to the rank of Corporal, the news of which will be pleasurably received by his friends.

The production of "San Toy," which, as announced last night, is to be given in the Grand Opera House on Jan. 5 and 6, will be under the patronage of the 93rd Battalion, and the proceeds, after the expenses of the production are paid, will be devoted to the 93rd Band Fund.

For soldiers of the Expeditionary Force in uniform making home visits for the Christmas and New Year's holidays, a reduction of single fare for the round trip is being granted according to an order issued by Divisional headquarters.—Kingston Standard.

WINTER TOURS TO CALIFORNIA, FLORIDA, ETC.

At this season of the year many are planning their winter tours. Considerable numbers annually visit the ever-popular California resort, while many choose the flowers and sunshine of Florida together with the very even climate.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a winter tour, have the mistaken idea that a trip of this nature is most expensive. This is not so. Thanks to modern railway facilities, and extensive trip, both interesting and educational, may be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

The Canadian Pacific Railway offers particularly good service to Detroit where direct connection is made for Florida via Cincinnati, Ohio and Atlanta, Ga. Jacksonville, Florida, is reached second morning after leaving Detroit. Excellent connections for Florida can also be made via Buffalo.

The Canadian Pacific-Michigan central route (via Michigan Central twin tubes between Windsor and Detroit) will be found the ideal line to Chicago, where direct connection is made for the Southern States. New Orleans is reached second morning after leaving Toronto.

Direct connection is also made at Chicago for points in California Texas, Arizona, etc.

The Dining, Parlour and Sleeping car service between Toronto, Detroit and Chicago is up-to-date in every particular. Connecting lines also operate through sleeping and dining cars.

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto. 2d-141

Trades and Labour Notes

The usual meeting was held this week, with President J. J. Hartley in the chair. The Patriotic Fund and the Presidents' chances for winning the mayoralty contest next January were the chief topics under debate.

Delegates from the Motion Picture Operators' Union said that the cause of trouble at the Red Mill and Tivit Theatres was the proprietors' break with the union operator. The latter had, on engagement, found a machine sadly in need of repair. He made the necessary repairs, but when "fired" took the parts away with him as his property.

TREBILCOCK BROTHERS HAVE IT!

Something Real About The Big Struggle - Frederick Palmer's Book

MY YEAR OF THE GREAT WAR

THE WAR BOOK that has taken the Country by Storm, and the demand has been far greater than the Publishers have been able to take care of.

More Copies of this book have been sold than all the other War Books combined, and the book is certainly the BIG BOOK EVENT OF THE YEAR.

Palmer was selected by Lord Kitchener to be the only accredited representative of American Press to the British Forces and with one exception the only correspondent permitted to visit the British Fleet, and he tells a wonderful story.

Extract from Toronto Daily Star

FREDERICK PALMER'S

My Year of the Great War

A FINE BOOK ON THE WAR

FREDERICK PALMER'S BOOK, "MY YEAR OF THE GREAT WAR," will have a tremendous sale in Canada.

It will be the talk of every battalion in training in this country. It will be read and passed along from the reader to another and discussed wherever soldiers are. And not by soldiers only, but by the whole people, for here is a book such as Canadians have hungered for, a story of the war by one who has seen it, by one who knows how to describe what he has seen, and who makes no secret of the fact that his sympathies are with the Belgians, French and British, with whose armies he has been since the war began.

Frederick Palmer is the foremost American war correspondent and traveler, has seen much of war, and is the author of many books. He is an American, but he is not caring about the German vote or Teuton customers of his shop. As you read his book you know where to find him. He is with us, one of us, wanting us to win, and knowing that we shall win for the good of the world and all the people in it.

The book is not an argument on the questions at issue. The world has heard enough of that. The public mind longs to know what has happened, how it happened, and what it was like. Palmer tells battle stories fascinatingly, and the reader who lays his hands on the book wants to make a day and night of the job of reading it at a sitting.

It is a fascinating book and wonderfully meets the needs of the hour for the reading public. Not the least interesting feature of it is the space it gives to the Canadian at the front and the evidence produced as to the heroic work they have done.

THE Chapter entitled "THE MAPLE LEAF FOLK is alone worth the price of the book and it appeals in a peculiar way to every Canadian.

Mr. Palmer was with the Canadians when they entered the trenches.

The Author's story of the British Fleet will live in the memory of every reader.

This Book sells at $1.50 a copy, if mailed $1.62. It is having an unprecedented sale and if you desire a copy for yourself or a friend, order immediately.

TURKEYS WILL BE PLENTIFUL FOR CHRISTMAS

There Are Lots of Turkeys in the Country--Producers Are Holding Them Back in Anticipation of Higher Prices

MARKET REPORT

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer:

The usual turkey trot has begun. At this time of the year the chief topic of interest on the street is "What price are we going to pay for turkeys at Christmas?" This year is no exception, and already all sorts of rumours are heard, some supporting the view that there are lots of turkeys and therefore the price will be low or fairly so, others, and probably more, thinking that prices are going to be high. The present situation, that is up to the time of writing, is that turkeys are slow in coming in. One man tells us that he expected a thousand in this week and got fifty. Nevertheless, there are lots of turkeys in the country, and it looks as though following the usual custom, they are being kept back, hoping to get a bigger price as Christmas draws near. Anyway, as a result of that at present prices are up three or four cents on dressed stuff. Of course if the situation continues, the prices may be higher still; on the other hand, they may not. Now and then the farmer gets a shock in this respect. The basic fact remains that there are a lot of turkeys to be had and this year there is no excuse along the line of American buying. Americans are through buying for their Thanksgiving and at present, turkeys, from all reports, are plentiful enough.

Currants Scarce.

Those grocers who are expecting currants on S. S. "Frixas" will be interested to know that the "Frixas" has at last reached New York. Nevertheless, grocers and the public, too, are going to be lucky if they get all the currants they want. Possibly two or three cars will slip through into this market but in the main the cargo of the "Frixas" won't be delivered in Canada until after it is too late for Christmas buying. Meanwhile that grocer is lucky who has got the currants he wants for Christmas trade. The currant situation is a mighty good example of the old established folly of putting all your eggs in one basket. The wholesaler who left all his currants to come over on the "Frixas" has probably got "left". The man who arranged for shipment on three or four different boats, has at any rate, got one or two, which is more than can be said for the majority who expected their stuff on the "Frixas". But the wise men are in the minority again. Wholesalers could not predict that the "Frixas" would be so late, and some have still to get their supplies of currants, and their clients, the retailers, are waiting for them. So is the public. It would not be surprising if currants took a last leap upward next week when Christmas is near. At present all prices are firm, indeed.

Peels Are Up.

Peels are up this week by a couple of cents; there has been a particularly big run this year on citron peel, and strange enough here again the wholesale trade did not seem to display a great deal of foresight. A few people got in right and bought citron in fairly adequate supplies. The present price, which is an advance on last week of 2c, is high and firm.

Shelled almonds are short; in fact they are practically cleaned up already. There are a few odd lines of shelled walnuts here, but not many, and it looks as if many grocers are not going to have enough shelled walnuts for their own trade this Christmas. With regard to walnuts in the shell, some from Bordeaux missed the boat and will not be here until after Christmas. The marbots are coming in now, but they are of an inferior quality. It looks as if they were shipped too green.

Other advances are to be noted in condensed milk. Brooms too are going up. The broom corn market is materially increased and the price to the trade and public is advancing.

Beans are still hard to get and this positions obtains both in Ontario and Quebec.

CURLING

The membership of the Curling Club was increased last night when seven applications were favourably received.

Messrs. R. P. Best and H. R. Martin have been appointed a committee to secure a piano for the season.

An open bonspiel is one of the questions the members will discuss at a meeting to be called in the near future. It has been casually mentioned around the rink of late, but no action will be taken until the opinion of a representative meeting is obtained. The local bonspiels will be held as usual.

Interesting Sidelight On Pan-German American Conspiracy

An interesting sidelight on the great Pan-German conspiracy in America is contained in the new "Life and Letters of John Hay," by William Roscoe Thayer. John Hay was one of the first to perceive that the intrigue was hatching, and it fell to him as Ambassador and as Secretary of State to guard the United States against the earliest massed assaults of Germany. When William II. became German Emperor he uttered several declarations to the effect that his will was law, and that he held the life and death of every German in his hand. German-Americans at first explained these utterances as neurotic, but gradually a change was worked in their hearts. Germany prospered in material things, and began to dream of world dominion. The British Navy was the obstacle, and the building of a great German fleet was started. The Germans hoped, however, even before they had finally despatched England, to be able to expand by colonization, and they specially coveted Brazil. When President Cleveland reaffirmed the Monroe Doctrine they were warned that they must keep hands off in America. Thenceforward, for twenty years, they have been watching an opportunity to humble the United States.

The policy of "permeation" was the one decided on. They set themselves to gather a veritable German colony in each country, prepared to use their foreign citizenship for the benefit and the ultimate triumph of the Fatherland. Most emigrants from Germany were in the United States, and the German Government began secretly to organize them. The more affluent were effusively welcomed at Berlin. Gradually the United States were permeated by the spies, advocates, and surreptitious promoters of the glory of Germany. They were served by German teachers in American colleges and universities. John Hay began to get wind of the changed purposes of German Imperialism as early as 1900. At that time the Germans were trying to protect Spain from war with the United States. Hay knew that Britain if requested, would put her fleet at the service of America, and as time went on this became plainer and plainer.

The biography tells how the Kaiser secretly negotiated for the purchase of two harbors on the desolate coast of Lower California for his own personal use. He wished to occupy one or more of the seaboard towns of Venezuelans. He tested the Monroe Doctrine, but was firmly met by President Roosevelt. Not daunted by his failure, the Kaiser continued his blandishments, and sent Prince Henry of Prussia to America. Secretary Hay firmly met him on all points. He had not the smallest doubt that the object of Germany was to supplant the English-speaking peoples all over the world by Prussianized Teutons. He laughed at the Kaiser's bustle in politics, art, literature, and religion, but though he smiled he recognized that such a monarch, working on such people as the Germans, might become a danger to civilization. "When, before Hay died, the Kaiser took to 'rattling his scabbard' too frequently, the Statesman of Peace had no longer any delusions as to the purpose of the Emperor of War. Only after the German Kaiser had forced his atrocious war upon the world in 1914 did his agents in the United States proclaim that they had built up an organization so powerful that it would compel the American Government to do their bidding, which was his." Every day now brings some revelations of the deep-laid plans of that organization to cajole or terrorize the people of the United States into acting at the bidding of Berlin.—Montreal Herald.

The Pigeon Creek Bridge

Ex.-Reeve Killen, of Ennismore, Replies to Recent Letter

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir.—In reference to a letter to the Warder, a copy of which appeared in The Examiner, I ask space to reply.

The writer seems to hurl strong denunciations at the actions of the Warden of Victoria County, hence he must be a ratepayer of Victoria County and no doubt the Warden of that County can look after his own ratepayers, no matter if they be County Officials or Government Officials or ordinary ratepayers. His reference to the charge of caretaker of said bridge is unwarranted and the facts will not be revealed here unless the permission of the former caretaker is procured.

I might say that no reflection can be cast on the efficiency of the former caretaker nor has any been attempted by the Council of the County of Peterborough. His statement as to nobody now in charge is incorrect and the writer knows it. The bridge is now temporarily closed, yet the same thig nearly occurred in 1914, and had it not been for the persistent urging of the resident Reeve it would have been closed. So you see an old waterlogged structure was kept together until the present, that every year is nearer an impossibility to repair.

The present caretaker has put every effort forward to keep traffic open but the old White Elephant got beyond his control as it would, if the best Government Official in Canada were in his place.

Thanking you for your space.

S. KILLEN, ex-Reeve.

Situation at Suez is Grave View in Rome

ROME, Dec. 18.—The Turco-German threat against Egypt is becoming more grave daily in the belief of military men here.

The construction of a railway line from Damascus to the Egyptian frontier has been pushed with extraordinary speed, it is stated, and it is expected it will be finished by February 1, there being only fifty miles more of rails to lay before the Sinai Peninsula is reached. This railway, which has double tracks, is considered by military men to permit of a concentration of half a million men in one month, together with the necessary supplies and ammunition, at the Egyptian frontier.

About three hundred thousand Ottoman troops, commanded and drilled by German officers, already have been concentrated between Alessandretta, Aleppo and Homs, it is stated. Army engineers are laying miles of tubes for carrying drinking water across the desert, and also are providing material for the construction of bridges with which to cross the Suez Canal.

Turco-German emissaries are said to be urging the Senousi to attack Egypt from the west, while an attempt also is being made to induce the Abyssinians to march into Soudan. German officers are reported to be acting as propagandists, organizers and military instructors.

The Rome newspapers ask if, after the lesson of the Balkans, the Entente Powers are going to allow themselves to be taken by surprise in Egypt.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 4—To Get The Best Eye Service

If a watch is so out of order that it will not run, it is necessary to do more than shake it trying to get a few more ticks out of it. You must have it put in running condition.

It is the same with eyes that refuse to do all you want them to without having them tell your brain they are tired by a warning ache, or letting you know they can't see clearly when things seem to waver before you or run into each other in a jumble most unaccountably. That means that you are not getting the service from your eyes that you should, or can. What you want is a pair of Fowler's Peblo Glasses fitted to exactly put your eyes in perfect working order, and your eye troubles will be over.

BEAUTY AN ASSET OF WOMAN DOCTORS

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Members of the freshman class of the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women who assembled yesterday in the Students' room to present a piano to their alma mater were somewhat startled when the dean, Dr. Cornelia C. Brant, told them that mere knowledge would never put them in the front ranks of their profession.

"If you want to be successful physicians," she said, "you must be good-looking and you must be well dressed. I don't mean, of course, that a doctor needs the wardrobe of a fashionable debutante. She does, however, need the beauty that is the result of careful attention to hair, skin and teeth, and her clothes must be well made, becoming and thoroughly up-to-date.

"Most of those who employ a woman physician employ her because she is a woman. They want the womanly sympathy—the feminine lightness of touch. If the woman physician has a door-knob coiffure; rough hands, a stiff, ugly shirtwaist, frayed skirt and boots with run-down heels she cannot express the charm that is really her birthright.

"In order to compete with men in the medical profession you must have not only knowledge and skill equal to that of the men, but you must cultivate certain qualities which belong exclusively to women. Those who prefer the masculine personality and attributes in a physician will employ a man. You cannot therefore hope to appeal to this class by aping masculine dress or manners and you will inevitably lose prestige with patients who like the soft voice, the soothing touch and the general pleasing harmony that belongs to the cultured and well-groomed woman."

SECOND IN ONE FAMILY TO BE SHOT ACCIDENTALLY

Roy Moore, a young man whose home is in Dungannon township, lost his life in a rather peculiar manner. He was employed in a lumber camp as a clerk. He was about to accompany the scaler into the woods when he decided to take a rifle with him. He stepped into the camp, and, reaching across the bunk, grasped the weapon by the muzzle and drew it toward him. The trigger caught in the bedding, and the rifle was discharged. The bullet struck him below the heart and passed through his body. He lived about an hour and a half, and bled to death before medical aid could be secured. The victim was 28 years of age. Ten years ago an elder brother met his death in a similar manner.

Roy attended Stirling High School some years ago, and was a great favorite among his school friends. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.—Stirling News.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—That Russia has abandoned all idea of entering the Balkan campaign, is apparently confirmed in Sofia despatches to-day, announcing the withdrawal of Slav troops from Reni, on the Roumanian frontier, where they have been concentrated for several weeks.

Sofia corroborated reports reaching Rotterdam that the Russian troops are being transferred to the Bukowina frontier, presumably for a new blow at Austria.

Italy Is Able To Hold Her Gains

Austria Has Small Chance of Retaking Lost Ground

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The war rests lightly on the Italians for the moment. That, at any rate, was my feeling during the five months I have just spent in Italy, says Julian M. Price in the London Chronicle.

Paris is in the thick of it, London has it brought home to her by the darkened streets, and the khaki seen on all sides, but in Rome, Milan, Turin and Florence all is still as bright and cheerful apparently as before the war.

It was confidence that the destiny of the nation was in safe keeping that brought about the remarkable tranquility all over Italy on the outbreak war was declared. Had I not seen it for myself I should never have believed that any Latin race could have been capable of such self-restraint as was exhibited on that fateful Sunday.

It is no exaggeration to state that the chances of Austria ever regaining any portion of the territory she has lost to the Italians are practically nil. Already it is fenced in by impregnable lines of armoured trenches, artillery positions of immense strength and endless barbed wire entanglements on entirely new principles—all of which extend the entire length of the new frontier—a veritable modern prototype of the Great Wall of China.

That the whole of the Italian system of defence and offence is based on German methods is indisputable, but one could not fail to be impressed with the conviction that they have managed to go one better than their masters.

WAR FAMINE IN PLATINUM HITS JEWELRY TRADE

Scarcity of Metal May Force Use of Substitute for Gem Mountings.

The scarcity of platinum, due to the war, threatens to paralyze the fine jewelry industry in the United States.

The belligerent nations are not only holding up all the platinum under their control, but some, particularly France, have agents here to buy what little still remains. Platinum is essential in the making of fine jewelry, so that manufacturers are especially hard hit at a time of big demand.

Platinum in three months has leaped from $41 to $100 an ounce, the price paid for small quantities in the Miden lane district yesterday. On this basis it is worth more than four times as much as gold, and jewerly manufacturers may soon be forced to stop using it. The metal has practically displaced gold in mounting diamonds.

Manufacturers of electrical, chemical, photographic, dental and surgical supplies also feel the shortage. One manufacturer, it is reported, has purchased a ton of platinum coated paper to recover the comparatively small amount of metal used in its making. In Germany, it is understood, an alloy of rhodium and palladium metals of the platinum group, is being used in the manufacture of jewelry. Thousands of sets of false teeth have being broken up to recover the platinum pegs.

Russian, French, German and English syndicates have controlled the chief sources of supply of platinum in the Ural Mountains in Russia. A small quantity has been obtained in Columbia and the United States.

Speculators have reaped a harvest through the advance in price.

THEY REFUSE TO EAT

At periods in most childrens' lives they fail to relish their meals and refuse to eat even the delicacies prepared to tempt their appetites. They lack ambition, and growth seems impeded, which causes anxiety and worry.

To compel them to eat is a grave mistake, because nutrition is impaired. Healthful exercise in fresh air and sunshine is important, but equally important is a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion three times a day to feed the tissues and furnish food-energy to improve their blood, aid nutrition and sharpen their appetites.

The highly concentrated medicinal-food in Scott's Emulsion supplies the very elements children need to build up their strength. They relish Scott's—it is free from drugs. Avoid substitutes.

HUNGARY'S MANHOOD EXHAUSTED WITH "GRANDFATHERS" AT FRONT

BUDAPEST, via London, Nov. 27.—In all the many tragic days of the war Austria-Hungary has just reached its most pathetic and deeply moving period. The men between forty-three and fifty years have had to join the colours. These figures are not to be judged according to the military value they represent. What they really represent is the commercial and economic backbone of a nation, and those who have to sacrifice this strength for a comparatively small military valne know best what an immense loss the difference indicates. The man of forty-three to fifty years is a father, in some cases a grandfather. He is established in life and business, and upon him the future of some and the happiness of many depend.

The man in this class in Austria-Hungary, especially in the districts inhabited by nationalities, is not the kind of man one finds in Western Europe of the same age. The Englishman, for instance, at this age is robust, healthy and young. He looks thirty-five and often has the advantage over his juniors. The peasant in Transylvania, Croatia, even in some parts of the Hungarian districts, is an old man at forty-five to fifty years. He is badly fed all his life, lives in unhealthy houses, works hard from his childhood up, lives under political and economical oppression and never hears of sports. The women are old at thirty-five; one would take them for sixty. Yet the recruiting committee worked havoc among men of this age, and, according to figures to hand, fifty per cent. of them were found fit. In ordinary times this is the average with men of twenty-one to twenty-four years.

The tearful scenes recorded in the Budapest and provincial press over the leave-taking of "the grandfathers," as they are being styled, are most pathetic and heart-rendering. Even such newspapers as the Az Est, a subsidized government organ, which ought not to wail at anything, gives vent to feeling of utmost despair. It wants to console its readers, as a good subsidized paper should, yet the consolation is very bitter indeed.

"We are pouring out the last waves of the ocean of blood," it says. "The bleeding of the world is nearing its end, for by all law, all signs, all instincts the day cannot be far away when the flood is to regain its bed. In the mist of the horizon we can distinguish already the feathers of the white dove. Yet we have to sacrifice another winter and the fathers of our nation before we can reap the benefits of our efforts. We have to gather our final resources, strain our muscles to the last for the concluding stages of the struggle.

Men Exhausted, War to End.

And in this key it goes on for a column and a half. The gist of the article is that the war is going to be over with this last levy, for, the main power of the country being exhausted, the war cannot go on any longer.

The pathos of the great event lies not in its political or military significance, nor in the flowery and pathetic editorials of the newspapers, but in the thousands and hundreds of thousands of individual tragedies connected with it. Of these I find many in the Nepszava. The writer went to see the very tragedy itself. No playwright could have invented scenes more tragic. The scene is the pavement before the great barracks of the Ulloi, in Budapest. It is seven o'clock in the morning and the men are coming from all directions with their small bundles, wives and children. They stop before the barracks and take leave.

"On every face one can detect the feeling that the parting is forever," says the article. "I stop among the groups and listen. One of the men talks to a grown-up girl, evidently his daughter: 'I think you will not have to wait for months for the separation allowance. Don't weep but see that mama is consoled, and take care of her if anything happens to me . . . .' He could not utter another word.

"An elderly woman stands at the gate. She is ill looking and weeps bitterly. I try to soothe her. 'My husband just went in there,' she says. I tell her to go home. It is very cold, but she insists on staying. 'He might come out again for a minute,' she says. An hour later I saw her still standing there."

National Hari-Kari

Not the least interesting question in connection with the "grandfathers" joining the colors is the military value and significance of the new levy. Especially is it the more interesting as this is supposed to be in all circumstances the very last resource of the monarchy apart from the seventeen-year-old boys, who are to be called up early in the spring. The number of these does not exceed 180,000. On the authority of available statistics the number of new levy now being enrolled of the 42-50 class is estimated to be about 780,000 men, more than half of whom are being despatched immediately to the front. The military authorities do not attach much value to the new levy, for they are not allowed to operate independently as part of an army group. It would be impossible to officer them.

When Parliament passed the law authorizing the government to call up the men between forty and fifty years it was adopted under the condition that these men were not to be employed in the firing line. To-day it is understood everywhere that sixty per cent. of them are being sent to the front immediately, the rest in two months' time. The day of "utmost necessity" has arrived. It is a national hari-kari.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis."

At the dog show to be held by the Special Relief Society a cup is to be awarded for the "best dog living in a New York hotel."

Wireless Controlled Torpedoes And How They Are Operated

The present war has caused enormous strides in the development of almost every type of fighting machine.

The aeroplane and the dirigible torpedoe have been especially developed. Every few days we seem to hear of really important invention making it possible for an aeroplane to accomplish hitherto impossible feats.

During recent years the range and accuracy of naval guns has made it practically impossible for vessels to get nearer than four or five miles. The guns of one combatant will completely demolish the ships of the other when the distance is lessened.

For three or four years it has been perfectly feasible to accurately control a dirigible torpedoe, by wireless torpedoes are released at a distance of six or seven miles and may be accurately guided to its mark through out the entire distance. But, one great trouble has been that it was not possible to see a torpedoe launched after dark, needless to say, it is most desirable to launch these dirigible torpedoes after dark, so that neither the fact of their launching nor their course will be disclosed to the enemy.

A recent invention has made it possible to keep the torpedoe in view from the starting point, in the darkest night, without making it visible to the enemy ship. This is done by placing a small but powerful light on the top of each short wireless mast of the torpedoe, with strong reflectors arranged to direct the rays toward the sending ship.

But to render the torpedoe even more effective, a carrying apparatus has been devised for hydroplanes of the sea-plane type. This enables them to carry large high-power dirigible torpedoes and release them at a comparatively short distance from their targets. They form a very small and difficult mark even at fairly short range and when above the water. When high in the air above battleships they are extremely difficult to hit. So, when loaded with a high power dirigible torpedoe they may be sent out toward the enemy. When they get well within range they swoop down to the surface and despatch the torpedoes. They are equipped with wireless control apparatus for guiding the torpedoes and may guide it from close range until it reaches its mark.

Very recently, an apparatus has been perfected for shooting a sea-plane from a battle-ship—something in the nature of a large catapult. It has operated successfully while the ship was travelling at full speed.

Thus, a cruiser could dash into close range of an enemy, launch its sea-plane, and retire to safer distance the sea-plane would speed on toward the enemy, launch a dirigible torpedo at close quarters, and guide it, by wireless, to its mark.

Certainly, the science tremendously developed.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from more stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own case. 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR GREAT CREATOR'S "UNSPEAKABLE GIFT"

"Good Tidings of Great Joy, Which Shall Be Unto All People."

Generosity an Element of Godliness—God "The Giver of Every Good and Perfect Gift"—Including the "Unspeakable Gift"—Our Appreciation of God's Gifts—How Expressed—"More Blessed to Give Than to Receive."

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Dec. 19.—Pastor Russell preached a Christmas sermon here to-day to a very attentive audience His discourse was based upon the text "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." (2 Corinthians 9:15.) He said in part:

There is an appropriateness in the general good cheer of the Christmas season. The happy custom of giving tokens of love and friendship prevails wherever the story of Jesus has gone. Surely this is just as it should be. While some may have been injured by receiving bounties, but few, if any, have been other than blest in the giving of them. Herein we see corroborated our Saviour's words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." In proportion as we attain Godlikeness, in proportion as the Spirit of Christ dwells richly in us, in proportion as we possess the Holy Spirit, in that same proportion shall we appreciate more and more our Lord's statement.

In our dealings with God it is necessary that we realize our dependence, our own insufficiency, and His greatness and beneficience; and that we learn to go to Him as His "dear children," to whom He delights to give His favors, and who receive them and appreciate them with gratitude of heart. In every sense of the word we are debtors to God and always shall be. We can never dispute the obligations under which His mercy and loving kindness have placed us. The sooner we realize this fact, the better will it be for us. Some possessed with a false pride declare that they ask no favors from God or man—that they pay their way and wish always to do so. As respects our dealings with our fellowmen, something of this spirit is praiseworthy; but the entire proposition is inconsistent with our relationship with the Almighty.

As we did not create ourselves, neither can we maintain our being, as the Scriptures assert: "In Him we live and move and have our being." (Acts 17:28.) This would have been true of us whether born in an angelic plane or as perfect human beings; for we could not have created ourselves, directly or indirectly. Through the arrangements of His providence in nature, God was responsible for our birth; and He is the Provider for His creatures on every plane. The fact that He causes His sun to shine upon the just and the unjust, and sends His rain upon the evil as well as upon the good, and thus provides for the world of mankind that in general is in rebellion against Him and His authority, does not prove that the laws of nature are autocratic and that the results could not be otherwise than they are.

Rather, as the Scriptures show, these mercies of God scattered broadcast tell of a provision on our Creator's part for the necessities of His creatures. That He allows these laws to be interfered with at the present time and permits adverse conditions upon our race He fully explains to be because of its sinful, rebellious attitude, because the sentence, the curse of death, has been justly pronounced against mankind.

and because He sees a way by which present lessons of adversity and tribulation may be made instructive as respects "the exceeding sinfulness of sin."

"All Taught of God."

Two of the great lessons for us to learn are (1) our complete dependence upon God, and (2) His loving kindness and tender mercies over all His works. But these lessons can be learned only from one standpoint and by one class. Those who view matters from the outside only will surely misunderstand, misinterpret, many of the operations of Divine providences.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him, and He will show them His Covenant"—His future plans, His agreement. (Psalm 25:14.) In order to see, to understand, to appreciate them we must accept certain matters by faith: (1) "that He is"—that there is an Almighty Creator; (2) "that He is the Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." (Hebrews 11:6.) Seeking the Lord diligently, we find in the Bible that which commends it to our hearts as well as to our heads.

But right here we are beset by a danger and a difficulty; for while it is possible to receive great assistance from fellow-believers in the understanding of the Divine Word, yet there is much danger of our becoming even more confused by such assistance—by the creeds and theories of men, particularly those handed down from the Dark Ages. Whatever, therefore, we receive from men we must accept tentatively—for examination, for proving and testing by the Word of God. Thus we "try the spirits" or doctrines, as the Apostle admonishes. (1 John 4:1.) Thus we permit God to be His own Interpreter and to make the matter plain to us. Those teachers who refer us to the Word of God, who point out to us its harmony with itself and with reason, giving the citations and showing the relationship between text and context—these are the teachers who are really helpful. All others are apt to be injurious, whether they address us orally or in print.

"Every Good and Perfect Gift."

Only after we have been for some time in the School of Christ can we comprehend the force of the Apostle's words, "Every good and every perfect gift is from Above." (James 1:17.) Then we begin to look about to find some of these good and perfect gifts. We soon find many gifts and blessings, but very few of them perfect, purely good. Everything connected with our present condition is imperfect. Even the sunshine and the rain, which are common to all God's creatures, are evidently not furnished under perfect conditions. Imperfection seems to be written upon everything we have, as well as upon ourselves.

The Bible explanation of this state of affairs is that, while God's work is perfect (Deuteronomy 32:4), our race to-day are not really samples of His workmanship, but are depraved, fallen, imperfect through the original sin of Father Adam and its entailed weaknesses and blemishes upon his posterity. The good and perfect gifts of God are to be seen only by the eye of faith—only by those whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see by faith Jesus, the great Redeemer. By faith this class see accomplished in God's due time His great work of Redemption, the wiping away of all tears from off all faces and the re-establishment of everything on the plane of perfection—the destruction of death and everything connected with it, and the establishment of perfect life conditions, such as God has promised.

Those whose eyes of understanding have to some extent been opened see more and more of the riches of God's grace, and appreciate more and more all of His gifts and favors, especially the great gift, the unspeakable gift, mentioned in our text. What this gift is the entire Scriptures set forth in various presentations. Of these statements one of the most forceful is St. Paul's declaration, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:23.

A Gift Not Appreciated.

False theologies have diverted or taken away from this Bible statement that eternal life is the GIFT of God, and that He will supply it only to those in fullest harmony with Himself. False theologies have taught us that eternal life is a natural quality—yea, that it is a persistent one, that not even God Himself can destroy our lives or being. This erroneous thought has distorted all our reasonings, and has left the issue as between an eternal life in torture or an eternal life in bliss. But the Scriptures clearly define a different issue; namely, as between extinction, destruction, and a life in harmony with God, a life which Divine Love and Mercy had provided for those who are in accord with the Almighty.

Let us hearken to the testimony of our Lord, the Apostles, and the Prophets on this subject, and see that God is now proffering the Church a gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let us note the Scriptural proposition that if we are willfully, deliberately, intelligently, rejecting this gift it will be withdrawn, and that the effect upon us will be the Second Death, everlasting oblivion, from which God offers no hope of recovery.

Let us note that this is the general dealing of God; and hence that when His time shall come for dealing with the world of mankind in general, during the Millennial Age, the offer then to be made to them will be a similar proposition of life or death everlasting. Those who will accept God's gift upon God's terms are welcome to it. He is pleased to give it to them. Those who will then reject it shall die the Second Death.—Acts 3:22, 23.

"Through Jesus Christ our Lord," is the Apostle's statement. The gift is not offered to us by the Father directly, but indirectly through the Son. To those whose eyes of understanding have been opened, the Apostle says: "This is the record, that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." (1 John 4:12.) Other Scriptures inform us that this life is merely reckoned to the Church now, and that they will not get it until they shall experience the change of the First Resurrection, at the Second Coming of our Lord. Of these it is written, "Your life is hid with Christ in God." (Colossians 3:3.) This every suggestion of God's gift is bound up similarly in Christ. Only as we become united to Him, related to Him, can we have this unspeakable gift of God. Hence it is not improper that we should sometimes both think and speak of Jesus Himself as being

The Unspeakable Gift.

Both Jesus and the eternal life which the Father has provided through Him are unspeakable in the sense that it is impossible for us to present fully to others the richness and the glory which inhere in both. Who can describe life eternal in either a spirit plane or as restored and perfected humanity? It is beyond all the powers of our mental comprehension. Even the thought of it can only be imperfectly communicated and imperfectly grasped. It must gradually dawn upon us, grow upon us in appreciation and comprehension. Similarly the wealth of grace Divine represented in our Lord Jesus is unspeakable. We cannot tell it; and the natural man cannot receive of the things of the Spirit of God, neither know them.—1 Corinthians 2:14.

Only those who are especially favored of God can get even the first glimpse of the riches of God's grace in Christ. If this glimpse be appreciated it leads to clearer and still clearer views; for all who will appreciate either our Lord Jesus or the gift of life must be "taught of God." (John 6:54.) As our Redeemer said to St. Peter, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but My Father in Heaven." (Matthew 16:17), so all who would grasp spiritual things must be taught. All our teaching and preaching cannot overcome the blindness of the natural fallen mind in respect to God's gift and the channel through which it comes.

Only as the Heavenly Father shall grant His blessing may fruits to our labors be expected. It is written, "As many as the Lord your God shall call," and "No man can come unto Me except the Father who sent Me draw him." (Acts 2:39; John 6:44.) Hence we see that our present appreciation of Divine goodness implies three gifts; (1) the Divine provision of eternal life; (2) Christ the Channel, and (3) the knowledge by which we are enabled to appreciate both the Gift and the Channel.

Receiving and Rejecting God's Gift.

As we look out over the world and perceive 1,200,000,000 in heathen darkness and the remaining 400,000,000 of nominal Christendom in the dull, foggy light of superstition and ignorance, our first thought might be that the world in general has rejected God's gift and hence has sealed its doom for the Second Death. Then we find relief in the Scriptural assurance that the present world-wide darkness is the result of Adam's sin and condemnation to death; that, although Christ has come and offered His sacrifice for sin, and thus made possible the removal of the curse and the bringing back of Adam and all of his race to harmony with God and to the possibility of accepting His gift of eternal life upon His terms, nevertheless the offer of this opportunity to the race in general is still future.

How glad we are that in God's due time all the blind eyes shall be opened, all the deaf ears unstopped, and the fogs of superstition and error all flee away before the rising of the Sun of Righteousness — the glories of the Millennial Kingdom!

The few who now see and appreciate God's gift are indeed, as the Scriptures declare, a "little flock" (Luke 12:32); and although generally disowned by men, and "counted fools for Christ's sake," they are rich in that they have become, in advance of the world, the recipients of God's favor by faith. Even now they may think of themselves as being possessors of life eternal—because of their joy and confidence in Him who has promised.

There is a superlative blessing of eternal life on the spirit plane, "far above angels, principalities, and powers." Those who attain that blessing will indeed be "partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4; 1 John 3:2.) Surely "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." (1 Corinthians 2:9.) Those who have now accepted Christ as their Redeemer and their Bridegroom possess also all the riches of God's grace that centre in Him; and when He shall appear, they shall be made like Him, sharers in His glory. "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift!"

"More Blessed to Give."

God Himself is the great Pattern set before us in His Word. In proportion as we have received of God's gift and have appreciated it, in that same proportion are we so privileged to be so "taught of God" as to become more and more like Him in spirit, disposition—desirous of giving—generous. Since man was created in the image of God, all men would have possessed this generous disposition had it not been for the fall of Adam; and we find that the fall has especially blighted some in one particular and others in another. Hence amongst "natural men" there are some who are generous, and who to that degree have perhaps more Godlikeness than have some of the children of grace—especially until the latter have been trained in the School of Christ.

For we are to remember that God's Message and His drawing power affect the less honorable of mankind. (1 Corinthians 1:26-29.) Thus opportunity is afforded for the Lord to demonstrate the power of His grace in the transformation of character. But so surely as have become God's children, recipients of His blessing and of the instruction of the School of Christ, this quality of benevolence will grow in us; and the more ripe we become as Christians the more will it abound in our thoughts, words and deeds. But any other condition, any failure to progress, any turning toward greater selfishness, would be sure signs that we are faced in the wrong direction, that we are walking after the flesh, not after the Spirit.

Since the judgment of each will be according to his light, it follows that many more can appreciate the privilege of giving earthly blessings, comforts, succor, solace, etc., than can understand the still higher privilege of giving Heavenly gifts, blessings, counsel, succor, consolation, comfort. Whoever, therefore, has spiritual ability to give further spiritual favors should rejoice to engage in this service of blessing others.

The chief gift that we can bestow upon anyone is the Unspeakable Gift; for, remarkable as it may seem, the Heavenly Father is pleased to use our ministries in the conveyance of His gift, in the finding of those who are of an appreciative heart, ready to receive it. Additionally, however, there are other ministries of love in which we may engage. Those who are our brethren in spiritual things, who like ourselves are the recipients of God's unspeakable gift through Christ, have their special trials, besetments, and difficulties from the world, the flesh, and the Adversary. These we should be on the alert to comfort, assist, uphold. As we help them to bear their burdens we thus co-labor with the Redeemer, and so become special servants of the great Burden-Bearer.

To the Shareholders of the Bank of Ottawa,

We have examined the books and accounts of the Bank of Ottawa at its Chief Office and at five of its principal branches, and have been duly furnished with certified returns from the remaining branches, and we find that the above statement of Liabilities and Assets at November 30th, 1915, is in accordance therewith. The Bank's investments and the securities and cash on hand at the Chief Office and at the branches visited were verified by us at the close of business, November 30th, 1915, and in addition we visited the Chief Office and certain branches of the Bank during the year, when we checked the cash and verified the securities and found them to be in agreement with the books. We have obtained all information and explanations required, and all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have, in our opinion, been within the powers of the Bank. And we certify that the above statement of Liabilities and Assets as at November 30th, 1915, is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank. In arriving at the profits for the year ending November 30th, 1915, sufficient reserves have, in our opinion, been made to provide for shrinkages in the values of the Bank's investments.

ENGLISH MARRIAGE RATE INCREASES, BIRTHS DECLINE

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Registrar General's return of marriages, births and deaths in England and Wales, recently issued, which covers the period for April, May and June, shows a striking increase in the number of marriages. On the other hand, the birth rate shows an appreciable decrease during July, August and September last, and reached a low record point never before touched.

The marriage record has been established, principally owing to the war, many young men going through the ceremony of marriage to save their sweethearts from falling into other hands while they are in the fighting field and others going through the form of marriage to escape the recruiting officers' attention, as the unmarried naturally are to be called upon to serve before the married men. London has led the way in creating this marriage record.

The following figures show how the marriage rate has fluctuated per thousand of population for the June quarter, during the last ten years, 1906 to 1915:—

1907	16.1	1912	16.4
1908	16.8	1913	14.8
1909	16.3	1914	17.4
1910	12.7	1915	20.9

The actual number of marriages recorded during April, May and June last totalled 87,088, compared with 81,056 and 85,904 respectively in the second quarter of this year the total was 59,607.

In relation to population the marriage rate was 20.9 per thousand—3.05 above the rate for the corresponding period of 1914 and 4.7 higher than the average for the ten preceding second quarter. London had the highest marriage rate, which was 26.8 per thousand.

The births registered for July, August and September last, in comparison with the same period of 1914, is 3.2 per thousand below, and 4.5 below the average for the same quarter of the ten preceding years.

The actual number of births was 197,492, a decrease of 29,260 on the total for the September quarter of last year, and 28,009 less than in the same month of 1913. Of the 197,492 births 8,864 were illegitimate or 1,027 less than in the corresponding period of last year.

As a result of the heavy decline in births the natural increase of population was 23,409 below the total for the September quarter of 1914 and 25,976 less than that for the same period of 1913. Below are set out the numbers by which births exceeded deaths in the third quarter of each of the last four years:—

Deaths registered numbered 109,413 a figure which represents an annual rate of 11.6 per thousand persons living, this being 0.7 below the rate in the September quarter of 1914 and 1.2 less than the decennial average: Among males the death rate was 12.9 and among females 10.6. Out of equal numbers living the deaths of males were to those of females as 121 is to 100, the mean proportion in the third quarter of the ten preceding years being 118 to 100. Mortality in the infant section was equal to 98 per thousand, or 28 per thousand below the ten year's average.

In the three months ending June 30 last, 269,568 births and 178,798 deaths were registered. The natural increase of population, therefore, was 90,770. The total number of persons married in the United Kingdom during the same quarter was 234,922. The birth rate in the second quarter of 1915 was 23.3, the death rate 15.4 and the marriage rate 19.4 per thousand of estimated population.

CHILD HID HIMSELF IN BURNING HOUSE

STRATFORD, Dec. 17.—A fire which did $180 damage to the home of Philip and Mrs. Schlattman, Jarvis Street, this afternoon, came near terminating the life of their little four-year-old son. The child had been playing with matches in one of the upstair bedrooms, when he ignited the quilts on the bed. Instead of giving the alarm, the child ran out of the room and crept into the bed in the next room and pulled the quilts over his head. In the excitement of saving the furniture the child was forgotten by his parents, and it was not until the firemen arrived that he was discovered and rescued from the smoke-filled room.

STRATEGIST ON GENIUS WAS GENERAL FRENCH

His Aisne-to-Flanders Movement Saved France's System of Defence.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Among the many tributes paid to Sir John French is the following by a writer in The Manchester Guardian, who is known to be especially well informed and noteworthy.

"The writer does not share the ordinary view that Sir John French was a glorified cavalry officer. He was a strategist of very considerable insight, and had he always been able to get all his own way, a thing that was impossible in war, and especially in the war in which we are taking part as one of a coalition, this insight may have been generally recognized as amounting almost to genius. The movement from the Aisne to Flanders, which was Sir John French's idea and his alone, was an inspiration. It saved the French system of defence, which must otherwise have gone to pieces entirely. This movement is one of the few instances in war of our having divined in advance and forestalled an enemy strategy. The full story of General French's command cannot be told yet, but it is safe to say that the more that is known of the difficulties with which he had to deal the stronger will be his claim to the country's gratitude for his services."

Hunger Stalks Through Poland

BERNE, Dec. 16.—All news arriving from Poland and Lithuania agrees that the misery prevailing in those countries is positively appalling. In the governments of Grodno, Kowno and Wilna the population is literally dying of hunger. The Jewish town dwellers, who are the greatest sufferers, have appealed for food to their co-religionists in Germany and Austria, but the Austro-German authorities refuse to allow the sending of any supplies.

In the governments of Warsaw and Suwalki the German authorities made a plentiful distribution of tickets entitling the people to obtain bread, but do not think it necessary to provide any bread. The Warsaw authorities hold meetings incessantly to discuss the food question, but if any representations be made to the military governor, Von Grazenapp, his invariable reply is that the German government has done all in its power to obtain food, and that if a dearth exists it is the fault of the Russians, who left an insufficient quantity of provisions for Poland.

Several hundred women, the wives of soldiers serving with the Russian army, went with a petition to the civic committee for food, and were addressed by Prince Lubomirski, who said that he was doing all that was possible, and finally gave twenty copecks to each woman. Fully forty women in the crowd fainted from exhaustion. Owing to the extreme dearness of provisions servants and employees are being dismissed as much as possible, and consequently the female population is at the mercy of the German soldiery.

The effect of the postal savings fund in this country has been to cut down the amount of money heretofore sent abroad.

HINDENBURG IN NEW RIGA-DVINSK OFFENSIVE

PETROGRAD, Dec. 20. — Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has undertaken a new general offensive along the Riga-Dvinsk front.

The German troops opened a terrific bombardment Wednesday, and it is still in progress.

The Russians are replying vigorously, and have repulsed several infantry attacks, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

FIRST TROUSERS LED TO LAW AGAINST USE

Some German Rulers Forbade Subjects to Wear Them.

The latest instance of a European country enacting laws concerning dress occurred at the time of the French revolution, when some rulers of German states forbade their subjects to wear trousers, these being held to indicate revolutionary opinions. The elector of Hesse-Cassel, besides prohibiting the obnoxious garments, had the convicts employed on road sweeping dressed in trousers so as to inspire disgust for sans-culotte fashions.

The term "sans-culotte" means "without breeches," and during the French revolution the "sans-culottes," who denounced every one who wore breeches, finally went beyond their opponents and wore twice as much cloth around their legs—in a word, adopted the modern trousers and made them the badge of a party.

Napoleon wore trousers on state occasions after he had been crowned emperor. His army was the first that adopted trousers, and they kept progress, step by step, with the march of the French legions. The Duke of Wellington would insist on wearing pantaloons—or trousers, as they are now called—when he attended certain social functions, although he was almost alone in so doing. This was about the year 1814, but by 1830 trousers were worn by almost everybody.

BACKACHE, LUMBAGO AND RHEUMATIC TROUBLES.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to state that I suffered greatly from backache, lumbago and rheumatic troubles. I used "Anuric," the latest discovery of Doctor Pierce for backache and kidney troubles, and I can cheerfully recommend the "Anuric Tablets" to anyone suffering from any of these maladies.

Yours truly,
J. F. GARBER.

NOTE: It is now asserted with confidence that these painful effects due to uric acid in the system are entirely eradicated. A new remedy, called "Anuric," has been discovered by Dr. Pierce, and is the cause of a drainage outward of the uric acid with which it comes in contact within the body. It will ward off backache, headache, and the darting pains and aches of articular or muscular rheumatism—of those diseases which are caused by too much uric acid, such as gout, asthma, sciatica, renal calculus. "Anuric" prolongs life because old people usually suffer from hardening and thickening of the walls of the arteries, due to the excess of uric acid in the blood and tissues.

Dr. Pierce, who is director and chief physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been testing this wonderful medicine for the relief of over-worked and weakened kidneys. The relief obtained by sufferers has been so satisfactory that he determined to place "Anuric" with the principal druggists in town where people could get this ready-to-use medicine. "Anuric" is not harmful or poisonous, but aids nature in throwing off those poisons within the body which cause so much suffering, pain and misery. Scientists assert this remedy is 37 times more potent than lithia. Send 10 cents for large trial package.

"Anuric" is building up a reputation as good as Dr. Pierce's other well-known medicines which have been proved reliable during nearly fifty years, such as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the ills of women, Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the liver regulator and Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for red blood.

To the Living From the Dead.

(J. P. A. W., in the Spectator.)

We who were once such men as you are, brothers,
Have one last word for you ere we are sped
Upon our journey through the silent spaces,
The dim and shadowy places of the dead.
Scarce can the soul of mortal men discover
Strength to disperse the veil 'twixt us and you.
Yet we, by this desire that lies within us
To speak that word have rent that veil in two.
We fought and fighting fell in France and Flanders;
Giving all we possessed to stem the flood.
The hellish flood of hell inspired barbarians.
Who sought to win the world through seas of blood.
We penned it in and checked it for a moment,
Seeing through sweat as we lay down to die
The first mad surges ebb but also hearing
Thunder of great surges down the sky.
We know that all we did was very little
Toward the sure safe-guarding of our race.
And, knowing that, we cry now from the darkness
This last appeal—Go you, and take our place!

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

No style is better liked than that which combines two materials in one costume. Whenever possible the new plaids, which are mainly in dark colors, are preferred, but stripes and other colors are also seen.

In the frock shown in this illustration we have a model which has the front and back of the blouse in one, without shoulder seam. The side body and sleeves are also in one. The sleeve is plain and long, with a rather deep cuff at the wrist.

The same idea is carried out in the skirt, which has a gathered upper portion, made with both edges straight and a circular lower portion, joined to the upper without fulness. The lower edge of this skirt measures 3 yards in the 16 year size.

Two patterns of serge or taffetas with serge, gabardine or velveteen will be handsome made in this manner, or one color in taffeta and broadcloth will be very rich or the whole may be made of a single fabric.

The dress pattern, No. 7,418, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 2⅛ yards of 36 inch plaid and 2⅝ yards of 50 inch serge.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous and you appear years younger.

"GOING A PIECE"

Always, when I went away—
Were it night or were it day—
You would "go a piece" with me
To the corner maple-tree;
Or, if I were going far,
You would see me to the street
Where I'd catch my depot car,
You have never known how sweet
Till I hurried home again,
Did this memory remain!

Through the travel loneliness
Life was never pure distress;
Never did my cup seem all
Filled with wormwood and with gall
No, for everywhere I went—
Homesick ever, as you know—
Pining was with loving blent.
For it comforted me so,
When my heart looked back, to see
You had "gone a piece" with me!

When my last long trip I take—
Lagging, for my loved-ones' sake—
Faring forth into the murk,
All the phantom shapes that lurk
In the darkness round my way
Will be terrorless if I
(When the others come to say
Through their transient tears,
"Goodby")
In that twilight hour, may be Sure you'll "go a piece" with me!

A Complete Statement In Regard To Pro-German Dynamite Plot

Fred Metzler, Secretary to the Head of the Hamburg American Line Secret Police Unfolds the Arrangements by Which it Had Been Hoped to Blow Up the Welland Canal---Considerable Fighting on Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—A complete statement regarding the pro-German plot to dynamite the Welland Canal was made to-day by Fred Metzler, according to Federal authorities in charge of the investigation. In the confession covering Teutonic conspiracies Metzler involved Captains Von Papen and Boy-Ed, attaches of the Germany Embassy, the government's agents said.

Metzler was secretary to Paul Koenib, head of the Hamburg-American lines, secret police who is charged with being the "brains" of the alleged conspiracy. Indictments based on Metzler's story are expected by Wednesday it was reported this afternoon. Metzler's collapse under a co tant fire of questions since his arrest last week was regarded by the government as clinching the case they are to put before the Grand Jury.

Unfolding arrangements to dynamite the Welland Canal, Metzler is said to have described movements of Geo. Fuchs, an employee of Koenig's, when Fuchs made a trip to Niagara Falls last September. This trip was for the purpose of finding the canal's weak spots, Metzler is said to have declared, but resulted in a report to Koenig that though the canal had vulnerable points it was too well guarded for a successful dynamite "plant."

The Government's information also dealt with activities of Koenig in Portland, Maine, and Quebec.

Four witnesses from Niagara Falls were in the corridors of the Federal Building to-day waiting to go before the Grand Jury in the Canal Conspiracy case.

PARIS, Dec. 20 (French Official Communique)—French troops were forced to evacuate a small post southeast of Skilly last night.

The works had been taken by us last Thursday.

"In the Artois region there was grnade fighting last night. North of Boisen Tranche there was artillery fighting.

"In th Fay region we silenced an enemy battery at Sainte Leocade.

"In Woevre Mortmare and Le Pretre woods, our batteries shelled the enemy's communication trenches.

"In Lorraine, Onon, the Nomeny and Bioncourt sectors, there was a mutual cannonade."

ROME, Dec. 20.—Italy has two million men in the war, and is preparing to add another million. About a million are in the fighting line stretched along the mountains from Trentino in the west to the Austrian's stronghold of Gorizia in the east. Another million is in reserve for emergencies and to fill the gaps in the fifhting line as needed, or for operations in the Balkans.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—H.M.S. Cambria has apparently been lost in the English Channel where another L. and N. W. boat, Anglia, was recently sunk. Like the Anglia the Cambria was probably a hospital ship. The first word of the disaster was received in a cablegram from Lt. Chas. E. Hafmer, a Toronto man, who was on board the vessel. The Cambria was a London and North Western Railway Lines vessel. She has been used as a naval auxiliary and has apparently been plying recently between France and Dover.

ATHENS, Dec. 20.—A small detachment of Greeks have clashed with Bulgarian scouting parties near the boundary line. Shots were exchanged and there were some casualties on boht sides. It is understood here if the Bulgars cross the boundary the Greek army will oppose them at all costs.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—General Von Bissing, German Governor of Belgium, will retire from the governorship on January 1, on account of ill health. He is held responsible by the British for the shooting of Miss Cavell.

Despatches from Berlin say the Kaiser has refused to accept Christmas greetings or permit public Christmas celebrations in Germany this year. It is said he plans to spend Christmas in Brussels, or at the Crown Prince's headquarters in France.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—British losses in the Serbian fighting until Dec. 15th totalled only 1,278, Under-Secretary Tennant declared in the Commons thas afternoon, including only one officer and 85 men killed.

ATHENS, Dec. 20.—Allied gunners shelled a Bulgarian scouting party that approached the Serbo-Greek frontier yesterday. The Bulgarians withdrew.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Robert Spencer, Canadian, and Allen Brown, an American, a prise fighter, were remanded in $250 bail each in Westminster Police Court to-day charged with making false statements in attempting to obtain pasports.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—In the weekly report from the Canadian Eye Witness, it is noted that Company Sergt. Majors. B. Benton and J. D. Matheson, and Pte. J. Donoughe, of the Fourth Ontario Battalion, have been awarded a distinguished conduct medal for conspicuous gallantry.

D. S. O.'s and Military Crosses were also awarded to several officers from Western Canada. A successful attack and the capture of a German barricade, and several other exploits, also chronicles of Canadians.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—All British troops at Suvla and in the Anzac region of the Dardanelles, together with guns, have been transferred to "another sphere of operations," the War Office announced to-day.

The Transfer was accomplished "with insignificant casualties," the War Office added, indicating that the Turks launched a furious attack when the troops began re-embarking. It is assumed that British and French warships covered the retreat.

"Presumably British troops are being withdrawn for service either at Salonika or in Egypt. The withdrawal affects more than 100,000 Australians and New Zealanders, who have been vainly attempting for several months to advance against the Turks on the west shore of Gallipoli Peninsula. The withdrawal may be a forerunner of the abandonment of the whole Dardanelles campaign in favour of the Balkan operations, or to defend Egypt against an expected Turko-German invasion.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Dec. 20.—Judge Ben. B. Lindsey of Denver, one of the most prominent figures aboard ship, to-day advised Ford to abandon the peace mission altogether. Lindsey is convinced that peace efforts will be hopeless, and he begged Ford to change his plans and turn the enterprise into one for finding homes for war orphans. Ford refused to consider the suggestion. He is not at all downcast. He had his emmissaries busy to-day trying to arrange an audience with the King of Norway. Rumours of important developments are current, however. Ford's Heutenants admit that peace plans are no better developed than when the party left Nw York. The cost of the peace expedition so far is $125,000, and Financial Manager Plainstiff estimates that the final total will reach half a million at least. The attempt to oust several newspaper correspondents from the party has failed. The executive committee finally agreed that to expel the correspondents would tend all the more to damaging publicity for peace enterprise and seriously impair the success of the expedition.

SALONIKA, Dec. 20.—Mrs. Walter Farwell, Chicago society woman, was roughly handled by Bulgarian soldiers who attacked Dr. Harry S. Forbes of Boston, an American Red Cross worker, in a raid on American Red Cross headquarters at Monastir, Serbia, according to word brought here to-day. The American flag was torn from the building and Red Cross stores for the relief of the Serbians seized for use by the Bulgarian army. Bulgarians repeatedly demanded that Forbes sell flour to their troops, offering double prices. Forbes refused, explaining that the flour was the property of the American Red Cross for distribution among civilians. When the Bulgarians threatened to confiscate the flour Forbes hung an American flag over the door. Several officers, with thirty soldiers suddenly descended upon the building and tore down the flag. One officer, who said he was a former deputy-sheriff in Kansas, exclaimed to Forbes: "I know that rag. It is only good enough to scare Mexicans, not Bulgars."

CHRISTMAS BOX FOR THE SOLDIERS

To-day's orders of the 93rd Battalion contain the announcement of a Christmas box from the Government. This is the payment of 25c extra allowance for rations on Christmas day. A NEW LIBERAL ORGANIZATION IS BEING FORMED

National Liberal Committee Will Make Themselves Fully Acquainted With the Serious Problems Which Confront the Country

AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.— The National-Liberal committee intended to be of a permanent character called into being this morning at a meeting of Liberal delegates at Ottawa for the purpose. The organization was effected at a meeting held in the office of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the Parliament Buildings. The committee will consist of fifty members and will be representative of the Senate, House of Commons, Federaled Liberal Clubs and other recognized Liberal organizations.

It is stated that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in a preliminary address to the delegates explained the steps which had been taken to create representative organization with advisory powers, whose chief duty it would be to study the various problems confronting the country, many of them arising out of new conditions created by the war. It was not the purpose of the gathering, Sir Wilfrid said, to formulate a policy. In view of existing circumstances this could be left in abeyance for the present, but it was the duty of Liberals to make themselves fully acquainted with the serious problems which confront the country and which must be dealt with. These committees will be named at a meeting to be held this afternoon.

PERMANENT COMMAND OF 93rd BATTALION FOR LT.-COL. JOHNSTON

Commanding Officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons Will Be at the Head of the Peterborough Battalion the Examiner is Informed From Ottawa To-day ---Second Hospital is in Use at the Armouries---To-day's Military News.

The Examiner to-day received the following despatch from its Ottawa correspondent. It will be read with great interest, not only by the officers and men of the 93rd, but by citizens generally:

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—Lieut. Col. Thomas Johnston, who was temporarily placed in command of the 93rd Peterborough Overseas Battalion, pending the return of Lieut. Col. Mills of the 2nd Battalion from the front, will take permanent command of the new regiment. Lieut. Col. Mills was requested to return for that purpose, but as no reply of acceptance was received, Col. Johnston was temporarily appointed to command. Col. Mills has re he requested that Col. Johnston remain in command. Col. Mills has received a new position, and will be Inspector of Transport and Supplies for No. 2 division.

The above despatch, received by the Examiner from Ottawa, is confirmed by the following telegram received to-day by Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., from Major-General Sir Sam Hughes:

"Owing to the fact that Lieut. Col. Mills has been appointed as Inspector of Supplies and Transport for No. 2 Military District, he is unable to retain command of the 93rd Battalion. It will therefore devolve upon Lieut.-Col. Johnston."

SAM HUGHES.

A number of the men of the 93rd Battalion are suffering from la grippe, with the result that the armouries hospital is crowded, and this morning additional hospital accommodation had to be provided, "E" company room being requisitioned for this purpose.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

HOW SCHOOL INSURANCE PREMIUMS WERE PAID

Cheques Made Out to Insurance Company and Endorsed by Clerks in W. H. Hill's Office With Power of Attorney From Mr. Hill—Investigation of School Board Under Way.

LIMITED BY RESOLUTION

The investigation of the charges made by Mr. G. N. Gordon on the eve of last year's municipal elections against members of the Board of Education and their methods of conducting the business affairs of the Collegiate Institute and Public schools, was opened this morning at 11 o'clock in the Court House by His Honour Judge Huycke. A preliminary argument centred upon the scope of the investigation, Mr. E. A. Peck, representing the Board, stating that in Mr. Gordon's published letter he had made general charges of a serious nature reflecting upon the whole Board, the members of which desired that the whole matter be gone into.

Judge Huycke remarked that he thought the Board was quite right. He also stated that he did not think the City Council had any right to authorize an investigation regarding the Board of Education, but at the discussion before him a short time ago the parties concerned had consented to proceeding with the investigation and on that understanding the enquiry would be carried on.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, appearing for Mr. Gordon, agreed that there need be no question regarding the legal aspect of the investigation since all those concerned appeared before the Judge by mutual consent, but the subject of the enquiry had been set forth by the City Council and specified in their resolution. He suggested that the investigation proceed with the subject matter of the resolution, and if it was desired to broaden the investigation that the Council be asked to pass a resolution to that effect.

Mr. Peck replied that for the very reason of consent to the investigation, they could agree to investigate every charge made against the Board.

Judge Huycke—Has there been a charge against the whole Board?

Mr. Gordon—No, your Honour.

Judge Huycke read the resolution passed by the Board of Education on Jan. 14, which confined the enquiry to Mr. W. H. Hill's connection with insurance on school property, also into the matter of any member who has received pecuniary benefit through school contracts of any kind.

Mr. Peck pressed his request that the scope of the investigation be made wide open. Mr. Gordon had made certain statements, and must have had some grounds for them. Let him give whatever testimony he had in mind when he wrote the letter than appeared in the press.

Mr. R. R. Hall, counsel for Mr. W. H. Hill, member of the Board, stated that the scope of the investigation was wide enough to enquire into every matter, and the Judge could make it as broad as possible.

Mr. W. H. Moore stated that he apepared in behalf of Mr. B. F Ackerman, member of the Board, and although no specific charges had been made, yet there had been an insinuation which he did not wish to be allowed without an enquiry. He expected that the investigation would be a broad one.

Judge Hoycke stated that anything that came directly within the purview of the resolution from the Board would be investigated.

Mr. O'Connell pointed out that Mr. Peck had opened the ball by stating that the investigation was ont broad enough, and requesting that its scope be enlarged; Mr. Hall followed by pointing out that Mr. Hill's request was unnecessary; and Mr. Moore wanted it made wide open. Personally, he would accept Mr. Hall's statement that the resolution is sufficiently wide.

Mr. Peck— I represent the Board, not Mr. Hall, and I desire that a full investigation be made.

Judge Huycke brought the introductory jockeying to an end by reiterating that the enquiry would be as full as the resolution directed.

The arena having thus been cleared, and a general understanding of the limits of the enquiry established, Mr. O'Connell called Mr. Alex. Weddell, junior partner of Hill, Weddell & Co.

A Partner Since 1911.

Mr. Weddell said he was an insur-

NARROW ESCAPES FOR LOCAL BOY ON FIRING LINE

Shell Burst Near Him, Damaging His Rifle and Covering Him With Dirt—The Mud is the Worst They Have to Contend With Says Pte. Darling

WANTS FRIENDS TO WRITE

Mrs. F. Darling, 542 Water street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Pte. Norman Darling, who left Peterborough with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., and is now at the front with the 1st Canadian Mounted Rifle Brigade:

Dec. 1st, 1915, Belgium.

Dear Mother,—Just before I go to bed I have time to write you a few lines. It is pretty early to go to bed as I have just had my supper, but I've lost so much sleep these last few days that I'm trying to catch up again. We came back into supports last night after four days in the front line, and as I only had half an hour's sleep while in there I was about all in when we got here. The last night and day I had an awful time keeping awake, even on the firing step. Things were pretty lively while we were in, and narrow escapes were so frequent that I'm beginning to think I bear a charmed life. Heavy artillery has been going on by both sides, and our trenches were battered up something fierce, and I had one shell burst right alongside me, tearing everything up and damaging my rifle some, but got nothing myself but a shower of mud. Another shrapnel shell burst above where three of us were hugging the trench wall, raining shrapnel around us and hitting one of the boys on the head, luckily not very bad. The worst we have to contend with is the mud. Everything is swimming, and although we have hip rubber boots our clothes were always soaked, and you can about guess how pleasant we felt. We are now back in a big barn, nice and dry, with lots to eat which makes up for the other. Expect to be here for four days, and then in the trenches again. Spent the afternoon trying to dry my blanket and overcoat, and I bet I scraped two pails of mud off the coat. It was matted on so thick it took me half an hour to find out whether I had a coat or a pile of mud. Wish I could have had a snap taken just as I was, so you could have some idea of what I looked like. Hadn't washed or shaved, and I was some real sight. I see by The Examiner that Peterborough is to have quite a large number of soldiers stationed there for the winter.

We have had a little snow here, but it only helped to make the mud a little deeper. Haven't seen Butcher for about a week, although he is around somewhere close. Dave Darrah has been in the next trench by, so I saw him often while dodging shells. Give my address to The Examiner so that some of the people I know could drop me a line, as I like to keep in touch with old friends.

Pte. Darling's address is as follows:
No. 118010
Pte. Norman Darling,
1st Regiment,
1st C.M.R. Brigade.

NO NEUTRALITY.

The United States is making a brave try to be neutral in this war; but it fails. It may be diplomatically neutral, but the people's sympathies are in the fight. The Teutons won't allow neutrality either. They are forcing war upon the United States. With their plots matured under the shelter of Uncle Sam's flag, with their plots against Canadian public works they force the United States into a belligerent attitude, if not of material military activity. The United States thought it could stand aside and be a neutral onlooker. It cannot do it. The German militant programme includes world domination and subjection of world-free government to the slavery of militarism. The United States, if undisturbed, and integral, after Germany conquers Europe, would be a mighty protest against German ideals—a thorn in the flesh of absolutism and its time would come. Thus the United States is forced to consider self-defence against the threatened danger. Her unpreparedness, in naval matters, especially, is emphasized. The United States sent a man to get particulars of the British navy, by way of "pointers". This man, Commander Symington, reports that every available yard in the British Islands is at work turning out ships of battle. He declares that "Great Britain has laid down or completed more vessels since the war began than the whole tonnage of the United States navy." Uncle Sam, try he never so hard, cannot keep out of the danger zone. He is in danger and must prepare to meet it. Virtually, Great Britain and her allies are fighting for the United States, but the latter must expect to do her share. She can't—she won't be allowed to be neutral

HONEST METHODS DEMANDED.

If there were such a thing as the political Victoria Cross, given for a statesman sticking to his post and doing his duty with exceptional courage, it would not be awarded to Sir Richard McBride, erstwhile premier of British Columbia. He has got the ship of state among the breakers, and instead of being the last to leave the ship, he is the first. He takes the first life boat and scuttles to shore and shelter, leaving the ship to flounder as well as its crippled condition will permit, leaving crew and passengers to make the best of a bad situation. Sir Richard has seen the storm coming. He has seen that the people of the province are angrily awaking to a realization of the disastrous results of the reckless administration, Sir Richard McBride has been giving the province of British Columbia. The public domain has been alienated and squandered. Subsidies have been scattered right and left, and the property of the people has been hopelessly hypothecated to political profiteering. An election is in the offing—the day of reckoning is at hand. Instead of meeting the situation; instead of facing the ordeal which his misgovernment has deserved, he resigns his trust under a cloud and goes to London to drop into the fat sinecure of agent-general of the province, replacing a man who does not wish to resign the position. People admire courage and scorn cowardice. Sir Richard has been in public life nearly twenty years, twelve of which have been spent as Premier of British Columbia. With his great abilities he has had excellent opportunities to make a high name for himself. He was the ruler of a province of vast resources and great promise. Instead of conserving, utilizing to public advantage, and to public advantage developing these resources, he has squandered them, prostituted them to political advantage. At least that is the charge that is to be tried at the coming elections, which might hold for him the fate that overtook Sir Rodmond Roblin. In British Columbia, as everywhere else, the people are getting impatient with wrong-doing, and wearied of being disastrously misgoverned; and, hereafter with the public conscience aroused with the universal fight against crookedness of method, unfaith, as revealed in German methods of both diplomacy and war, the people will not tolerate the enemy at home who uses similar methods. The public man that gives his country, in ruling it, the "double cross," need not expect the Victoria cross of popular approval and honest, good name.

SIMPLE FAIR PLAY.

The most difficult and the chief work of the Canadian Parliament at its next session will be the dealing with the financial problems involved in meeting the obligations created by the war. While it is inevitable that new sources of revenue must be created, there is one that, with both advantage and justice, might be well employed. Last session we had increase of the tariff and many other special imposts levied. The people can't write a cheque, post a letter or buy a box of pills without paying war taxes. The people loyally submit to these increased levies, and at the same time make other sacrifices of means to maintain agencies designed to help solve the war problem—the Patriotic Fund, the Red Cross Fund, etc., etc. With all these the mass of the people are making great sacrifices and doubly paying their share of war cost. It is only justice to demand that no Canadian should be exempt when the mass are making sacrifice; the few should not be allowed to make profit, and not sacrifie. There should, in fairness, be an imposition of tax on war profits. War contractors have made immense profits, while the people at large have paid to the last penny. General Bertram, late chairman of the late Shell committee, tells us that undue profits have been made to the amount of 150 million dollars out of shell contracts. He says that huge sum is the difference in the price at which similar orders are now being filled in Canada, and the price for the original orders placed by the Shell committee. That is to say that legitimate orders of proportionate size can be filled at a price 150 million dollars less, and leave excellent profits. The Shell committee allowed such extravagant profits that

TEUTONS JUSTIFY INSTEAD OF DISAVOWING THEIR BARBARITY

There is something tragically comical about what may be called the Doctrine of Diplomatic Disavowal. It reminds one irresistibly of the principle governing the debates of the immortal Pickwick Club, and of certain Houses of Parliament whose rules of procedure seem to be governed upon that same great principle. "Did the honourable member use that expression in a Pickwickian sense? Otherwise the chair will be compelled to take cognizance of the unparliamentary expression, and it may even be come the duty of the Chair to name the honourable member." The Speaker's threats are like thunder—awful to hear, but seldom dangerous. What would be the effect if you did name the honourable gentleman, the Speaker of the British House was asked? He piously and piteously admitted "The Lord only knows." But Speakers have always shrunk from going to this terrible extreme, and honourable members from time immemorial have bowed to the threat. There are only three courses open to the honourable gentleman; he can disavow the expression; he can withdraw it or he can suffer the crushing penalty of being named. He nearly always starts by disavowal.

We have heard a good deal about "disavowal" during the present unpleasantness. The German and Austrian Governments have rather accentuated the importance of disavowal by their reluctance to disavow things. At the constant and imminent risk of being named, the Kaiser Government has refused to disavow, or, perhaps we should say, has so far refrained from disavowing the Lusitania crime. The New York Journal of Commerce, with sublime disregard of Pickwickian etiquette, said of this crime no longer ago than last Monday: "The fiendish malignity of this monumental act of barbarity, to which history yields no parallel, was sensibly enhanced by the insertion in American newspapers of announcements, on the authority of the German Embassy at Washington, that the ship would be attacked." So far from disavowing the deed the Kaiser and his Government were as proud of it as a young member of Parliament is of "tassing" the Speaker. The commander of the submarine which torpedoed the Lusitania, and the president of the rival steamship company who was the chief murderer, were both decorated by His Imperial Majesty, and public holidays were held to celebrate the glorious victory of German arms. Of course, there is nothing even now to prevent the Kaiser from disavowing the act, of withdrawing the affront or of explaining that the crime was only intended in a Pickwickian sense, if, on mature consideration, he should decide it to be good policy to adopt either of these courses.

Meanwhile the incident has been adopted by Austria as a precedant in the Ancona case. The Austrian Admiralty has made a report to the effect that it has received the report of the gallant officer who is directly responsible for the Ancona murders and sees no reason to find any fault with his course of action. "It is clear from his report," says the Admiralty "that his ship was in danger first from the fact that an enemy boat was approaching on a line that threatened to cut off his retreat and the enemy boat and the ship could have established his radius of action and could have set a torpedo-boat flotilla or him; and, second, there was danger of the Ancona escaping which, according to his instructions, was to be prevented in all circumstances."

It is difficult to see how the Speaker can refrain from naming the honourable gentleman in the face of such a frank avowal, and what will happen then the Lord only knows.—Montreal Herald.

HOW GERMAN-

The Germans refuse to release Dr. H. S. Beland, ex-Postmaster-General of Canada, who fell into their hands at Antwerp, where he was engaged as a medical volunteer in the Belgian hospital service. But they offer to exchange him for Lieut. Rintalen, under sentence of death for espionage. How German that proposal is! They will not release a physician whom they captured when he remained behind to care for the wounded and dying unless in exchange they get a malignant spy and conspirator, whose life, according to the rules of the game, is forfeit.—Toronto Star.

SUPREMACY ON THE SEA.

If Germany wishes to take to the seas again for purposes of trade she will have to buy England's consent in the peace terms, either by indemnities or other concessions. Before the war she enjoyed the freedom of the seas, in spite of her hollow pretenses to the contrary. At sea England's conquest over her is complete and that immense advantage will not be surrendered because of any further successes the imperial arms may win in land operations. If the German people fully realize what this means the desire to know what the Empire is fighting for will grow among them. It is a gloomy prospect and one not to be made brighter by any possible victories on land.—New York Times.

"ALL MUST BE UNITED."

"I have given you my reasons for supporting the Government, but so that no one may criticize me, I will say that I should like to have done better, and I don't think it would have been difficult. If we were in power they would not approach us for the faults and the scandals we hear of. (But I will not enter into these things; it is not for this that I have come to Montreal. These things will be discussed later, never fear. I will speak only of the duty of the Liberal party. All men must be united for the general good; they must be ready to condemn without fear, for the general good, when condemnation is required, and they must also approve when approbation is deserved. We have always maintained that duty in power, and we still maintain it in defeat. When we fell we fell with high brow and hearts firm for justice. We are confident that a day will come when the people will know those who speak the truth to them and those who deceive them odiously, and I am certain the duplicity will be found out. The day we fell we were conquered, but not killed."—Sir Wilfred in Montreal.

the agent of the British government who came over to investigate, denounced the high price charged, and declared "that public opinion would be met by the retirement of the Shell committee," and the Shell committee had to retire. There is, therefore, no doubt of the high profits made at a time when the people, as a whole, have to pay through the nose. It is only simple justice, it is only plain duty that the government, which, ignorantly and innocently perhaps, permitted this extortion, should procure legislation to impose a swingeing tax upon these profits, and upon all profits made in the manufacture of war supplies. We are all willing to make financial sacrifice and where all get the benefit, all should share the burden. We are fighting for the prevalence in international as in domestic matters of the principle of British fair play, honesty and square dealing.

How the Boy Scouts Are Doing Their Bit In the World War

The following letter has been addressed to the officers and members of the Boy Scouts Association throughout Canada:

An appeal was made early in the war from both the British and Canadian Headquarters of the Boy Scouts Association for the performance of any services which the officers and membership of this organization could usefully render in aid of the war cause. The ready general response thereto has shown that in war as in peace the Association is trying to live up to its principles with resultant benefit to the boys themselves and to the community at large.

To the Boy Scouts throughout Canada I am charged to convey this year end message from His Royal Highness the Chief Scout:

"Thank you Boy Scouts each and all for all that you have done and are doing. The inspiration of your youthful example means far more to many of us seniors than you yourself know."

During the past year there has not been a spot in the whole Dominion in which the Scouts have not had some opportunity of service related to the war. The opportunities for boyish good turns in aid of the many worthy appeals connected with the war have, indeed, increased with the progress of events and are likely to still further increase with the continuance of hostilities, the raising of larger forces, the extension of the battle line and the return of so many invalided soldiers from the scene of conflict overseas.

When the invalided men began to arrive at Quebec last summer the Boy Scouts of that city, 140 strong, volunteered, on their own initiative, in a body, for any service they could perform, and soon made themselves so useful that they were cordially welcomed by all the authorities concerned. "A squad of twenty," writes Colonel William Wood, "was waiting for a draft to land just after daylight this morning. The boys go aboard and held the crippled men in every way they can. Some go every day to the Immigration Building to see what is wanted— shopping for men who don't go out, guiding others about, etc. Others help at the Khaki Club and the Overseas Club which latter is for invalids only." Here is work worth doing during the coming months at the winter ports of debarkation and not only at these points alone but elsewhere wherever returned Canadian soldiers are arriving, about, or in any need of help. The ways and means of developing can perhaps best be left to local thought and action.

In some parts of the Dominion the school children are already making scrap books of pictures, short stories and other reading matter such as would be likely to interest the soldier boys overseas. Advices from the front are to the effect that it is well nigh impossible to fill the demand for reading matter in the camps and hospitals. Perhaps this is a want which some Boy Scouts would like to help in meeting. The local branches of the Red Cross Society in Canada will welcome reading matter of this character intended for the sick and wounded soldiers and will also give free transportation to scrap books for Canadian soldiers in the training camps overseas, provided the same are so marked and packed in separate cases.

The suggestion is made that letters of cheer and encouragement from Boy Scouts in Canada to sick and wounded soldiers whose names appear in the published lists of casualties among our fighting forces would be both heartening and helpful. If this were to be done each locality might so assist in remembering the lads from its own midst who shall suffer until the casualty lists are finally closed and the blood bought treasures of liberty and justice for which the allied armies are now so worthily contending have been saved from those who sought their destruction.

In conclusion, on behalf of His Royal Highness the Chief Scout and the Canadian Council of the Boy Scouts Association, I am to extend their congratulations to all ranks on the results accomplished during 1915 and their hope for even better things in the year to come.

By direction,
Gerald H. Brown.
Honorary Dominion Secretary.

TOO MANY PRISONERS FOR FRANCE TO KEEP

Some Are Turned Over to Great Britain—Germany Frees a Few

LONDON, Dec. 20.—France suffers from an embarrassment of prisoners of war. She already has begun to transport large numbers of them to Britain, but as quickly as the number is diminished to any great extent fresh delegations arrive from the battlefront.

From German sources it has been learned that Germany is allowing large numbers of British subjects, interned or imprisoned in Germany, to return to Britain in groups. This is believed to be due to the seriousness of the food situation in Germany.

The War Office made public the news of the transfer from France in explaining the presence in the Dorchester concentration camp of several hundred soldiers from the Argonne army of the Crown Prince. Prisoners taken by the French along other sections of the battlefront also have been brought to Britain.

It is reported from Marseilles that 750 Bulgarian, German and Austro-Hungarian officers taken prisoners by the Serbs and 40,000 soldiers captured in Serbia, have arrived there. They are being taken to a prison camp.

33,000 MEMBERS ON ACTIVE SERVICE

The "Hearts of Oak," a fraternal society in England, has 33,000 of its members now on active service. Pte. George Cobb of the Army Ordinance Corps, now in France, and son of Mr. T. Cobb, 547 George Street, is a member of the Society, as is also his father.

HOW THE GERMANS TREAT PRISONERS

Report is Issued by Russian Commission of Inquiry

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.— An appeal just issued from the Imperial Russian Consulate General here reads as follows:

The Senator-President, A. N. Krivtsov, presiding over the Extraordinary Commission of Inquiry, appeals respectfully to all organs of the press to give the very widest publicity to the fact that among the papers found on dead soldiers of the German army and now in the possession of the Russian Extraordinary Commission are two unposted letters, in which the German soldiers, who write them, make the following statements: "Whenever an attack becomes too difficult we take Russian prisoners and drive them on in front of us against their own countrymen; in this way, at least, they somewhat lessen our losses. . . we do not know where to put prisoners. Henceforth every Russian surrendering as a prisoner of war will be turned out in front of the line of our fortified positions to be shot."

These letters, in which our enemies themselves testify to their terrible methods of making war, will be photographed, translated into French, English, Italian, Danish, Greek and Japanese languages and distributed in many thousands of copies in every country of the world.

SPECIAL XMAS PICTURES

The Royal Theatre has completed arrangements for a special service of highest class pictures for this week. See our display advertisement, in this paper, from day to day. This series will surpass all former presentations.

SAYS GERMANS MUST DRIVE OUT BRITISH TROOPS

BERLIN, Dec. 20. — The Berlin Deutsche Tageszeitung publishes a demand from Count Reventloy for a Germanic advance to Salonika. He writes:

"If the Greek government accepts the demands of the Entente, the result will be that Salonika and its neighbourhood will become allied bases like Calais and Boulogne. The existence of Salonika will be imperilled and its hinterland liable to be laid waste."

After declaring that all the English and French troops on Greek territory ought to be disarmed and sent home, Count Reventlow proceeds:

"According to English custom, Salonika is covered from the sea by a British navy and is to remain a permanent fortified gate of invasion into Greece and the Balkan peninsula. The idea is that if Britain holds Salonika fast, makes all her preparations there and fortifies it as strongly as possible, there will always be the possibility of initiating a new expedition into the interior.

"Such intentions constitute one reason more why the troops of the central powers should push on at their greatest speed and settle the matter."

Rev. Mr. Webb Decides To Remain With the Murray St. Baptist Church

Announcement Made at Morning Service—Pastor Delivered a Delightful Sermon on "The Wonder of Christmas"

"While appreciating your confidence, and realizing Broadway's great opportunities, by responsibilities to Murray Street make it necessary to decline." Such was the text of the telegram sent last week to the Broadway Church, Winnipeg, by the Rev. Mr. Webb, in answer to the recent call which he received from that congregation. It must be great comfort to a minister to know that his services are appreciated in such a loyal manner as expressed in the resolution of confidence presented him last Sunday by the members of his congregation.

If there is one thing more than another that stamps the pastor of the Murray Street Church with an individuality it is his fearlessness in "calling a spade a spade." A minister without boldness, is like a smooth file, a knife without an edge, a sentinel afraid to let off his gun. If men will be bold in sin, ministers must be bold to reprove.

Wordsworth has very beautifully expressed for us the dignity of a "preacher with a message."

"Can earth afford
Such genuine state, pre-eminence so free,
As when array'd in Christ's authority,
He from the pulpit lifts his powerful hand;
Conjures, implores, and labours all he can
For re-subjecting to Divine command
The stubborn spirit of rebellious man."

"The Wonder of Christmas."

Choosing as his text John 1:5, "And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehendeth it not," the Rev. Mr. Webb preached a thought-inspiring sermon on the "Wonder of Christmas."

Emerging from this saying of the mystic John are three truths: When Christ came into the world, the world was in a condition of darkness; when He came He brought light into darkness; and the light He brought did not illumine the darkness of which John is speaking.

Not only did Christ come to Israel, itself a picture of darkness, but he came to Israel, in Palestine, a country of densest darkness. Matheson, the poet, said: "I never saw so great a picture in such a contemptible frame"; and in referring to the birth in the manger, he said: "I never saw such a work of art hung in such a room."

Humanly speaking Palestine was the last place on earth for one to be born in who was to become the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Palestine was a prison: On the north, Mt. Lebanon; on the south, Sinai; on the east, the Valley of Jordan, and on the west the Mediterranean; shut up, closed in, separated from everything that would tend to make it great. Geographically it was No Man's land; politically it was a conglomeret people, they never knew who ruled them; socially it was without distinction. Yet, in the face of these facts it was prophesied that from this country would come a King who would rule every part of the world.

To-day we are living in an age when to be astonished is a rare thing. We pause for a moment in astonishment at the sayings of one monarch and his monstrous claims, yet these are nothing compared with the inexpressable audacity of the claims put forth by Palestine regarding her future. While Egypt revelled in her learning, while Greece gloried in her art, and while Rome looked for conquest, this little 121x40 miles cared for nothing but God. The nations looked on in sympathy while she peered out into the darkness always expecting what these other nations considered absurd.

"His Name Shall Be Called Wonderful."

"The light shineth in darkness." It is the light of a new born baby's eyes, a light to illumine all the world. It is the light of the star guiding the wise men. It is the light which arrested Saul, the fire-brand, and converted him into Paul the torch to illumine the Gentiles. It is the "Light of the World," which shall burn brighter until "there will be no need of the sun, neither of the stars," to illumine the word, "for the Lamp is the light thereof."

He came exactly as prophesy said He would came. Isaiah said He would be born of a virgin. So He was. Micah said He would be born in Bethlehem. So He was. Malachi said He would come suddenly. So He did. Another said He would be a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief. So He was. David sang: "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their hands asunder, and cast away their cords from us." We know that the rack, the thumb screw, the flame, the cross, the boiling oil, the tearing of men asunder, because they named the name of Christ, has not stifled His light.

Wonder of Wonders.

After generation and generation of Jews peering in the darkness for the promised Messiah, they were the first ones to regret Him. The enemies of Christ put Him on the throne; His friends put Him off.

The spirit of Christmas fills the earth. Everyone is affected by it one way or another. Yet we have a picture of the Rothchilds, the Cohens, the Abrahams, the Bernards, despising Him. Why is it that while organs are playing, choirs are singing, and gifts are being exchanged in commemoration of the greatest gift to mankind, these people ridicule it all?

For answer we have the great lesson that while Christ is the light of the world, it all depends upon how we receive Him when He comes.

"Come to my heart Lord Jesus
There is room in my heart for Thee."
—PAUL PENMAN.

Voice of The People

Dear Editor,—In the hope that this may reach the eyes of the people for whom it is intended I crave your indulgence in printing this complaint. On Saturday evening I attended the concert given by the 93rd Battalion Band and had the misfortune to sit near a young couple who managed to fairly well spoil the evening not only for myself but for practically everybody in that section of the theatre. The two, one a young man in khaki (I hate to complain about anything one of our soldier lads does) and his companion, a young—I was going to say lady, but that description hardly seems to fit—girl, evidently had no idea that anyone had come to the opera house for the purpose of listening to the programme, for they kept up a continuous conversation in loud tones, interspersed with silly laughter that spoiled some of the most harming music of the evening. There was no whispering about it—the pair chattered along at the same degree of loudness that two housewives use in discussing the gossip of the neighbourhood over their fences and two back yards, while the rest of the audience suffered. If this letter should come to the notice of the guilty parties, as I hope it will, I would just like to point out to the young soldier that consideration for the rights of others is a feature that is insisted on in army life, and that conduct such as his of Saturday night, not only brings discredit on himself but on the uniform he wears. To the girl who assisted him in annoying those around them it may not have occurred that people are liable to judge harshly a young woman who conducts herself in a noisy manner in a public place:. If they will remember the next time they go to a concert that foolish as it may seem, some of the people really want to listen to the music, this letter will not have been written in vain.

Yours,
Sufferer.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of December 17th there appears a reply to my letter of December 8th, 1915 re the purchase of the Exhibition grounds, in which Exhibition Director states that I admit, that the property is a decided bargain. I beg to correct that statement. My statement reads (that while everybody may admit that the property is a decided bargain), thereby implying a doubt, based upon what the property is to be used for, and the direct revenue to be derived from such use by the ratepayers, who are asked to pay for it. Now, Mr. Editor, I submit, that from the statements of Exhibition Director, the purchase would be an extremely doubtful investment, as far as profits are concerned, to the ratepayers. Exhibition Director further states that the by-law shows that it would take $2,807.46 annually, for a period of twenty years, to pay for the grounds, at the purchase price, $30,000, and the interest on the debentures and proceeds to state that the city gives a grant of $600 to the exhibition, which would be discontinued, leaving a net cost to the city of $2,207.46 yearly for twenty years.

Now, Mr. Editor, taking the statements and the figures of Exhibition Director, provided the $600 grant is discontinued (of which we have no guarantee), the net cost to the city would be $2,207.46 annually for a period of 20 years and not $2,207.46, if I understand those figures correctly, and I think I do; or in other words, they mean that if the by-law is carried, that the grant of $600 (which is optional by the City Council) would be discontinued, and the city would be tied up to an annual payment of $2,807.46 annually for 20 years, no matter whether the fair existed or not, or a lump sum including interest, of $36,149.20, that the grounds would cost when paid for, a rather doubtful bargain for purchasers who would have his tax receipts on file.

Exhibition Director frankly states that all surpluses would be used for building purposes and other improvements until those buildings and improvements were completed and paid for. And to my query as to whether there was any guarantee of revenue to the city, Exhibition Director franky states that there is not. I am pleased to very frankly admit that there are gentlemen connected with the Exhibition Board or Association, who are held in high esteem, and justly so, many of whom I have the privilege of a personal acquaintance. Why not publish the names; the ratepayers would then know with whom they were dealing. As to the further statements in the reply of Exhibition Director, permit me to state that I am not short-sighted or narrow in regard to those matters, nor am I antagonistic in principle, I am opposed to the purchase of the present grounds for exhibition purposes and a race track as a bad business proposition. If the option is a valuable one, why not dispose of it at a profit and use that profit for the purchase of cheaper grounds further down on the banks of the beautiful Otonabee river, having direct communication with the Trent Valley Canal, unloading stock and other wares off the boats directly on to the grounds. I would favour an increase of the $600 grant for such a purpose. There is also suitable grounds north of the city and on the banks of the Otonabee that can be had for little more than one-third of $30,000. The present grounds, for exhibition purposes, are a direct detriment to the fine residential property immediately south of it, blocking the extension of our city streets in that direction, and in the not distant future causing greatly increased cost in extending the city improvements to the south of those grounds, all of which the already heavily taxed ratepayer would have to provide for.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, in advance for the publishing of this rather lengthy letter, I am,

Yours very respectfully,
M. H. Quinlan, City.

VISCOUNT FRENCH'S FAREWELL TO THE BRITISH ARMY

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Field Marshal Viscount French issued an order to the troops in France on his retirement from command of the British expeditionary forces, expressing to the officers and men his "heartfelt sorrow" at parting with them "before the campaign in which we for so long have been engaged together has been brought to a victorious conclusion."

Viscount French's order which was made public by the Official Press Bureau to-day, continues:

"I have the firmest conviction that such a glorious ending to their splendid and heroic efforts is not far distant, and shall watch the progress toward the final goal with intense interest and the most confident hope.

"The success so far attained has been attained by the indomitable spirit and dogged tenacity which does not know defeat, by the heroic courage of the rank and file of the splendid army which it shall ever remain the pride and glory of my life to have commanded. Regulars and territorials, old and new armies, have shown these magnificent qualities in an equal degree. From my heart I thank them all.

"At this sad moment of parting my heart goes out to those who have received lifelong injury from wounds. I think with sorrow of that great and glorious host of believed comrades who have made the greatest sacrifice of all by laying down their lives for their country."

Viscount French concludes with an expression of his "gratified and heartfelt devotion and good wishes to the glorious future," which he feels to be assured.

MORGAN HARDWARE

ance agent associated with Mr. W. H. Hill in the company known as Hill, Weddell & Co. The partnership was formed in January, 1911, but the articles were not drawn up until June, 1915. They were then registered. The public announcement of the partnership's establishment was made in June, 1915. Previous to that time the business was known as W. H. Hill & Co. Mr. Weddell said he was in Mr. Hill's employ since 1893 as clerk, stenographer, assistant and associate. His participation in the business in 1911 as partner was not generally known as it was a verbal agreement with Mr. Hill, but in June of this year the agreement was put into writing and a public announcement of the change was made.

In reply to Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Weddell presented a statement showing that the fire insurance on the Collegiate Institute and Public schools totalled $187,500, of which $54,500 represented the portion carried by companies of which which Hill, Weddell & Co. are the agents. These figures were drawn from a statement of the insurance on the schools, June 24, 1914.

Mr. Weddell also stated that his company as agents of the Canadian Casualty & Boilers Insurance Co. carried about $8,500 accident insurance on the boilers of the schools.

Mr. O'Connell— Did the insurance companies know that you were a partner of Mr. Hill's prior to June, 1915?

Mr. Weddell—No.

Witness had stated that one of the exhibited lists of insurance policies issued through his office had been prepared in 1914 about the month of June. Reading the list Mr. O'Connell observed that after some policies were written the words, "formerly held by W. H. Cluxton and J. J. McBain and taken over by me."

Mr. Weddell explained that the personal pronoun "me" referred to Mr. Hill.

Following up this point Mr. O'Connel asked if it was not a fact that the list of policies was prepared since Mr. Gordon's charges were made.

Mr. Weddell replied that it would be safe to say that they had been prepared in the latter part of 1914 or the early part of 1915.

Mr. O Connell requested that a statement be produced showing the amount of school insurance carried by Mr. Hill in 1913 and 1913, and a comparative statement of that held in the past twelve years.

Presenting Insurance Accounts.

Mr. O'Connell spent considerable time dealing with the manner in which insurance accounts were presented to the Board of Education. Mr. Weddell, continuing his evidence, said that in the usual cases of presenting insurance accounts a billhead bearing Mr. W. H. Hill's name was sent out, but the bills to the Board of Education were made out on a plain sheet of paper, which indicated that the Board was indebted to one or other of the insurance companies of which Mr. Hill was agent. These accounts for insurance premiums on school property were presented to the Board of Education, and the cheques in payment were not made payable to Mr. Hill but to insurance companies he represented. They were endorsed by Mr. Weddell or one of the clerks in the office on the assumption that they had the authority by reason of the fact that Mr. Hill was the agent, and that the Bank accepted the endorsations.

Mr. Weddell stated that the clerks had the power of attorney from Mr. Hill for the depositing of the cheques.

Mr. O'Connell presented as exhibits a number of these cheques. Of the first one he asked Mr. Weddell where it had been deposited.

Mr. Weddell—At the Royal Bank. Who is the manager of that bank?

Mr. Eastwood.

To Jas. Huycke, witness stated that the power of attorney he mentioned was not received from any of the Fire Insurance Companies, but from Mr. Hill.

The Afternoon Session.

James Carolan, representative for the Underwood Typewriter Company was put into the box at the resumption of the investigation this afternoon. Witness said the School Board purchased nine or ten machines some time during the year 1914. Carolan interviewed a number of the school trustees relating to the prospective deal. Witness also sold Mr. Hill three new machines for his own use.

Examined by Mr. Hall witness said it was to the advantage of the School Board to instal one uniform machine. The three machines sold to Mr. Hill had nothing to do with the deal made by the School Board. Mr. Hill secured his machines at a lower price.

Insurance Mentioned.

Re-examined by Mr. O'Connell Mr. Carolan said he was asked by Mr. Hill to take out some life insurance. This he consented to do and signed an application for two or five thousand dolalrs. Witness could not recall the exact amount or the name of the company. Witness was turned down. This suggestion came from Mr. Hill after witness had sold three machines to Mr. Hill. According to witness Mr. Hill said: "I have given you some business now you give me some business.

Mr. Weddell Recalled.

Mr. Weddell, in reply to a question asked by Mr. O'Connell, said that the company which he represented carried two policies bearing the name of Mr. R. F. Downey, school teacher in one of the Public schools of the city. One policy was for $1,800 placed on the house, and the other for $1,250 placed on the furniture. The same company also had a life insurance policy for $1,000 on Mr. F. D. Kerr, and a fire insurance policy for $1,200 on the furniture of L. J. Collin, principal of the South Central school.

A number of other teachers were named as policy holders of the company represented by Mr. Hill and Mr. Weddell.

Japanese Fleet At Suez Canal?

Former Egyptian Official Says So and Scouts Invasion Stories

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 20.—Japan has entered the European theatre of war with a powerful fleet which has been sent to the Suez Canal, according to A. M. Papajian Bey former Minister of the Interior in Egypt, who is at present in Los Angeles.

"Great Britain realizes that she cannot lose the canal, which is a vital element in her life as a unified Empire," declared Papajian Bey. "For that reason the canal has been remarkably fortified, and a Japanese fleet is on hand ready for business.

"Every effort has been made to keep the news of the presence of Japanese battleships at the canal from spreading, and I have heard nothing of the fleet in this country. They are there, nevertheless."

In speaking of conditions in Egypt to-day, Papajian Bey said:

"A rebellion may and probably will break out almost any day in Egypt. However, it will not be successful. There are about 60,000 British troops there and some 60,000 Egyptian troops in the interior there are several regiments of blacks who are the fighters, and who fight for the Empire."

Papajian Bey scoffs at the idea of a German invasion of Egypt.

"Only in January and February the least hot months, is it possible for an army to cross the desert sands between Turkey and Egypt," he asserted. "Then, too, the Red Sea forms a natural barrier as efficacious as an army. Many ships and transports would be needed, and Germany could not procure them."

THE WOMEN'S MESSAGE

This is the women's message, they that have given their all,
Husbands and sons to the battle, lest the faith of an Empire fall.
Well have they borne their burden and paid the bitter cost,
This is the women's message in the name of all they have lost:

"Oh ye who might have been soldiers, and yet have stood aside,
What is your place in Canada for which our men have died?
Shall ye share in the day of triumph the peace that dawns afar,
We who have hidden your manhood under a coward's star?

"Now, by the joy of women when Love walks light upon earth,
And by the mother courage that fought to give you birth,
Throw back these doubts that hold you, stand forth and play your parts,
Lest shame for having loved you wake in the women's hearts.

"So in the years that follow, your children's sons shall stand,
In might and peaceful honour, because you loved the land.
Has death so grim a portal? God holds the souls that stake
The lives He gave them nobly, when men die for honour's sake!"

THE BLIND ALLEY OCCUPATIONS

By Charles F. Thwing, President Western Reserve University, Cleveland

"It is now twenty-five years since I began to ride with you," I said to an elevator man yesterday.

"Yes," he replied in a melancholy tone.

After twenty-five years' experience he runs an elevator no better than in the first year. In twenty five years this man has passed from boyhood into full maturity.

In twenty-five years, moreover, he has lost rather than gained in strength. Hopefulness has passed into the sadness of non-achieving. The possibility of doing something worth while has faded into a fixed certainty of comparative failure.

At the age of eighteen he had entered into a blind alley and for twenty-five years he has been coming nearer and nearer to its dark, impenetrable wall.

What should this man twenty-five years ago have done?

What should the tens of thousands of boys, who are thinking of how to learn a living or of choosing a vocation, do? They should put before themselves formally and constantly the thought of entering a calling in which the demand is for power to work hard and even harder, for a brain ever clearer and stronger, for a resoluteness higher, and for a capacity always becoming deeper and broader. They should require of themselves the best that lieth in them. They should spurn the easy job. They should covet a hard one. They should transmute possibilities into powers and powers into achievements. The late Booker T. Washington said to me once: "It is a very good thing for a man to have a very hard job."

These boys should also set their faces toward a calling of increasingly progressive returns. Their earnings they should double every decade.

They should chose a work of which the demands become severer the longer it is pursued.

They should follow a calling which allows a better doing of its work every year and which makes the laborer a better man each year of his labor. Such a work returns, with values in money, in direct results, in the regard of friends, and in the respect of the community.

The advisers of youth—parents, teachers and ministers—owe to boys a high duty in making keen and distinct the difference between an occupation which is a blind alley and an occupation which is an avenue leading to larger opportunities, wider vision and richer service.

They should ever hold up the ideal of a calling which demands the noblest qualities of intellect, of heart, or will, and of the whole character.

The blind alley cannot lead to positive destruction. Its end is not a precipice; but rather the blind alley is a prison in which the higher life is both smothered and starved.

The constitution of the league was amended, and hereafter when a player is suspended his salary will also be suspended.

The league listened to a proposition for an interleague series in midseason, but no action was taken on the matter. As this series would detract from the interest in the world's series at the end of the season, it did not receive much consideration from the club owners.

FEWER PASSES FOR FANS.

National League Plans to Restrict Free Gate at Games.

The National League, at its adjourned meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, discussed only minor questions. The matter of limiting the number of passes to championship games was placed in the hands of a committee consisting of Harry N. Hempstead of the New York Club, and William F. Baker of the Phillies. This matter was discussed at some length, but the club owners could not reach a definite agreement. One thing is certain, however, and that is that the number of passes next season will be reduced.

THE HEART OF BRITAIN IS RIGHT SAYS DERBY

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Lord Derby, Director of Recruiting, and Ben Tillett, Secretary of the Dock Workers' Union, representing the opposition, appeared on the same platform in a music hall meeting here to-day when Tillett described his recent visit to the British front. The Earl of Derby, who presided, said, on introducing the speaker:

"When it comes to the question of the number of men who have enlisted, I must not anticipate in any way what will be said Tuesday by the Prime Minister. I think the country will feel when he makes that statement that the heart of the country is right.

"I hope the New Year will show a brighter outlook than is discernible at the present moment. Probably the result will come sooner than many expect, but not sooner than they hope—a result which will be a victory for the allied forces. I am not the least pessimistic about the future."

The military critic of The Weekly Despatch hints that Lord Derby's recruiting scheme has not saved conscription.

"Thousands of single men have refused to join the colours," he asserts. "Nothing short of compulsion will bring them to a sense of their duty With thousands of single men wrongly allotted to the reserved trades, it will be impossible for the Premier to hold married men to their pledges."

The Times, commenting on the calling out of four classes of Lord Derby's recruits, namely, groups 2, 3 4 and 5, says:

"From a strategical point of view it is a false move by the Government. It is certain to arouse suspicion regarding the good faith of the Ministerial intentions."

The Observer says: "By hook or crook the enrollment of single men must be completed without a day's unnecessary delay."

ASK LONDON TO DROP GERMAN STREET NAMES

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Petitions to rename streets bearing German names have met with a cold reception from the London County Council. One of the latest of these petitions came from the residents of Wiesbaden road, who wanted either an English name or an allied name. Among the signers of the paper were a Rothstein, a Meyer, a Rubinstein, an Aaronburg and a Finkenstein, and altogether about forty family names of Germanic origin. People who themselves bear German names are declared to be among the main promoters of these petitions, apparently with a view of establishing their own patriotism.

At the Council meeting when this matter came up Sir John Benn asked: "How far back are we asked to go in altering names? What should we do with Martin Luther street, Beethoven street, Handel street and Hanover square?"

The scheme was branded as ridiculous by most of the Councilmen. Nevertheless, on the broad principle that each borough of the Council had a technical right to control its own names, a motion was carried by a narrow majority giving the Borough Councils authority to make changes if deemed advisable.

Teutons Protested Against the Erection of Fortifications

At Salonica—Reply of Greece to Germany—Has Guaranteed the Safety of the Anglo-French Forces

LONDON, December 20.—Athens despatches say that the work of fortifying Salonica against the expected Teutonic attack continues night and day with feverish haste. Transports are arriving daily with ammunition, food and additional troops. The allies are now credited with having an army of 200,000 at Salonica, and along the Vardar, south of the Serbian frontier.

The railway from Gueveheli, just inside the Serbian border, south through the Vardar valley to Salonica, is being destroyed by the French troops. This will be the route of the principal attack toward Salonica. The allies have moved heavy artillery forward from Salonica and stationed it on the heights near Stariculi and Kilida.

GREECE ANSWERS TEUTONS

Greece has issued a formal reply to Austro-German representations protesting against the erection by the allies of fortifications around Salonica. The Greek government replied to the protesting Teuton diplomats that Greece was powerless to prevent the fortifications as they were "indispensable to the safety of the Anglo-French troops." The safety of the Anglo-French troops, the Greek reply is quoted as pointing out, has been formally guaranteed by Greece. The reply also emphasizes that Greece is still Serbia's ally.

This newly dangerous the crisis in the it increases the danger of a German invasion of Greece with the object of driving out the allies. It is not the presence of the allied troops but their fortifying Salonica that forms the chief point at issue in the German representations at Athens.

In some quarters here there is a tendency to the belief that Germany under a silent agreement with Greece proposes to allow the situation to proceed to a point where the Hellenic government will be forced to admit that the allied forces and fortifications have become too strong for Greece to successfully cope with, especially in view of the menace to Greece from the allied fleets. When that admission is made, it is argued, Germany will ostentatiously assume the role of Greece's liberator and with Greek consent, move against Salonica. Pro-Germans here do not conceal the fact that this is also the view held in Berlin.

The Germans in addition to massing additional troops on the Greek border, are accumulating enormous stores of ammunition, war materials and supplies carried southward along the Belgrade-Salonica Railway.

The Greek elections, which took place to-day, are not believed to have any bearing on the situation in view of the fact that its outcome necessarily is a strengthening of the government's policy, the Venizelos, or pro-ally party, having no candidates in the field.

The German plan is believed to be to say to Greece: "If the allies fortify a Greek seaport they therefore violate Greek neutrality and force us to invade Greece, and drive them out." With the express promise that after having driven the allies out the Germany will immediately clear Greek soil, Greece is not expected to object to that plan.

No Teutonic or Bulgarian troops have yet crossed the Serbian border into Greece.

Saturday night was slightly larger than on the previous evening, but was far below the proportions that the merit of the entertainment deserved. The numbers by the band were given in magnificent style, while the individual numbers were enthusiastically received. Lieut. Bailey and Quartermaster Sergt. Goodhouse, who had contributed to the programme on Friday night, were both absent from the city. In their stead the little recruiting Sergeant, Master Percy Luther, was of great assistance, reciting two of his favourites, "Join the 93rd To-night," and "Fill up the Gaps," in fine style, while he also sang "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" to advantage. Mr. T. Stratton scored heavily again in his Harry Lauder imitations, having to respond to three encores.

The band wish to express their hearty thanks to all the entertainers who assisted so effectively in the programme.

A feature of this week's work at the Armouries will be training lectures by Captain Dick Ponton of Belleville and Capt. Chas. Ackerman of Peterborough, both of whom were at the front with the 2nd Battalion. The invalided officers will lecture upon various phases of training necessary for use in the present war, and one of the subjects to be taken up will be bomb-throwing—one of the most important features in trench warfare. Some demonstrations in the use of bombs may be given.

The 93rd Battalion attended divine service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday. An eloquent sermon was preached by Capt. The Rev. Jas. Rollins, Quartermaster of the 93rd. The parade was in charge of Lt.-Col. Mills.

Lieut. Hubert Eastwood of the 57th Regiment, and son of Major Eastwood, A.M.C., has been attached to the 93rd Peterborough Battalion.

Lieut. G. R. Browning of Lakefield, who has been attached to the 93rd Battalion, has been transferred to the 136th Durham County Battalion, and will have the rank of Captain.

Pte. Frank Seaton of the 93rd Battalion, who was removed to Nicholls Hospital a few days ago, seriously ill with pneumonia, was slightly improved yesterday.

Lance Corp. Davis was transferred from the armouries hospital to Nicholls hospital this morning. Orderly Room Sergt. C. W. King, who has been in the armouries hospital was discharged yesterday.

Among those confined to the armouries hospital are Corps. Geo. Melton and H. Wood, Bandsmen Vic Dallin and W. Harkness, Pte. W. Russell, Simpson and McWilliams.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 18.— Lieut. Wm. Smith, a former resident of Port Hope, who left Canada with the 5th Field Battery in the first contingent, arrived home Friday afternoon from the front, and was met at the station by the Mayor and escorted up town by the local detachment of the 136th Battalion, C.E.F., and High School Cadets. Lieut. Smith was in action at Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy, and developed neuralgia, which caused him to be invalided home for three months.

Major R. P. Watt is in command of the 93rd Battalion to-day, Lt.-Col. Mills and Lt.-Col. Johnston being both absent from the city.

A number of officers of the 93rd are attending the Red Cross entertainment at Warsaw to-day with a view to securing some recruits for the battalion. Lieut. Raymond and Master Percy Luther are to take part in the programme.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19. — Recruiting figures up to December 15 show that Canada has now called to the colours more than 200,000 men. During the past three months about fifty thousand men have enlisted, and at the present time recruiting is reported to be brisker than it has been for months past, especially in the rural districts. During the first fifteen days of December about 18,500 recruits were obtained, or at the rate of nearly 1,000 per day. Of this total Ontario contributed nearly 6,600, Quebec furnished about 1,000 recruits, the Maritime Provinces about 1,200, Manitoba and Saskatchewan about 2,300, Alberta 2,200 and British Columbia and the Yukon 1,150.

205,000 Enlisted to December 15.

Returns from the several military districts in Canada show that up to December 15 the number of recruits enlisted for all purposes since the outbreak of the war totalled about 198,000 men and 7,000 officers. This makes a grand total of 205,000 officers and men, including about 12,000 men employed on home guard duty, etc., and eight or nine thousand who have been permanently put out of commission by death, wounds or illness at the front. Canada's present fighting army now on active service is, therefore, about 185,000, all of which has been raised and equipped in a little more than sixteen months.

Exclusive of officers, which would add about four per cent. to the total, Ontario has raised about 77,000 men, Quebec approximately 20,000, the Maritime Provinces 20,000, Manitoba and Saskatchewan 37,500, Alberta 21,200, and British Columbia and the Yukon 19,700.

Out of the total of 77,000 men raised in Ontario, the 1st Military District (headquarters at London) has raised approximately 15,000; the 2nd District (Toronto), 42,000, and the 3rd District (Kingston), 20,000.

Gunner Alex Butcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher, Burnham street, who went to England with the first draft from the 53rd Battery, has been transferred to the first divisional ammunition columns, and is now in France. A card received from him this morning stated that he was quite well.

Sergt. Jay is Battalion Order Sergeant for the week, while Corp. J. Vollans is orderly corporal.

The 93rd Battalion hockey team will practice on Tuesday night at 7 o'clock. A big turnout is expected.

URGED TO QUIT DRINK NOW

Warning to Miners in the Coal Camps of Colorado.

DENVER, Dec. 18.—"Why wait until the first of the year to quit drinking? Why not quit now," is part of the wording of a warning that has been posted in the coal camps of Colorado controlled by the Rockefeller interest and other large companies, notifying the miners that the question of beer or other liquor on and after Jan. 1 will be sufficient grounds for dismissal.

The notice reads in part as follows:

"Whiskey and beer have never done anything for you but to take shoes from your children, clothing from your family, and food from your table."

The new State prohibition law goes into effect the first of the year.

THE VOLUNTEER.

I have chosen my path, for the ways were divided;
Brief space for my choosing! I saw but the one
Where duty through doubt and obscurity guided
I followed; what else could a Briton have done?

Yet soon the clear message that answered so plainly
My heart's silent question will faint and grow still,
And voices of weakness, reproaching me vainly,
Will mock the proud words and the faltering will.

For, though fate with the choice, was it hard to have chosen
When the blood through my pulses exultingly flowed?
Will my boast be as high, with a heart numb and frozen,
And faint limbs outworn on the difficult road?

When the glory seems far, and the bitterness real,
Will I curse the glad impulse of conquering pride
That bartered its peace for a splendid ideal,
And left the still haven to stem the fierce tide?

Yet I pray that when Death with his dread crown of terror,
Looms near, from my heart's deepest fountain, a voice
May cleave the dark waters of blindness and error,
And answer: "I chose, and I stand by my choice."

H. H. Wade.

SHOP EARLY, LADIES!

Shop early, ladies! You who blessed with ease
Of gold-paved moments, can your way pursue
In search of gifts, rare, beautiful, and new,
Exactly when your precious fancies please!

Recall, I pray you, how much one of these
Who waits upon you labors day by day
With little rest and only measure pay,
And with your thought their woes of life appease.

Shop early. Wait not till the latest day
When hands are clumsy through great weariness;
When the tired feet shuffle slowly on their way
And every minute means increased distress.
This brings to you no burden great or small;
Have mercy, then, and show good-will to all.

HANG UP THE BABY'S STOCKING.

Hang up the baby's stocking,
Be sure you don't forget;
The dear little dimpled darling
Has never seen Christmas yet.
But I've told her all about it,
And she opened her big, blue eyes,
And I'm sure she understood it—
She looked so funny and wise.

Dear! what a tiny stocking!
It doesn't take much to hold
Such little pink toes as baby's
Away from the frost and cold.
But, then, for the baby's Christmas
It will never do at all;
Why, Santa wouldn't be looking
For anything half so small.

I know what will do for the baby—
I've thought of the very best plan—
I'll borrow a stocking of grandma.
The longest that ever I can;
And you'll hang it by mine, dear mother,
Right here in the corner—so:
And write a letter to Santa,
And fasten it on the toe.
Write, "This is the baby's stocking
That hangs in the corner here.
You never have seen her, Santa,
For she only came last year.
But she's just the blessedest baby!
And, now, before you go,
Just cram her stocking with goodies
From the top clean down to the toe."

FANCY AND USEFUL.

Many people do not know that we have a line of goods suitable for Christmas presents for all the family. Come and see them at the corner of Rubidge and Wolfe streets, near Knox church. Read Bros., the store without window display, but full of good values. 'Phone 1416 for cleaning and pressing.

YESTERDAY AT MURRAY STREET CHURCH

The services, yesterday, at Murray Street Baptist church were of a special Christmas character and unusually good music was furnished by the choir, both night and morning. At the morning service the Pastor, Rev J. E. Webb, preached on the subject "The Wonder of Christmas," and his theme was an eloquent presentation of the subject of Christmas, as it effects men and women, generally. At night he approached the subject of Christmas as it effects young men and women, especially, and his sermon was a strong appeal to the young people to follow Christ. Beside special anthems by the choir there were solos by Mr. Harold Lee and Miss Clara Kidd, and in the evening a violin obligato was furnished by Miss L. Logan. Much credit is due to Mr. Asa Huycke and Miss Ida Sanderson for the excellent music rendered.

Janet and Her Minister.

A Perthshire parish minister was visiting one of his parishioners, an old woman, afflicted of late years with deafness.

"The fac' is, when I gang to the kirk I canna hear ye, sir," she said.

Desiring to be sympathetic, and to say something consoling, he replied, "Weel, Janet, perhaps you don't miss much."

"That's just what a'body tells me," was the disconcerting reply.

CONSTABLE COOKMAN HAS RETURNED

Spent Six Months in the Old Country as a Munition Worker

Charles Cookman, who six months ago temporarily relinquished a position on the Peterborough Police force, in order to place himself at the disposal of his King and Country in the capacity of a munition worker has returned to the city after having completed a six months' contract. During that time he has been employed by a shipbuilding firm in the Old Country, and among other things, has engaged in the hazardous work of mine sweeping. The work was strenuous to a degree and only allowed of four nights' sleep each week.

P. C. Cookman will resume his position with the local police force.

Conviction Is Confirmed

At the session of the County Court held on Saturday Mrs. Tyler appealed against a conviction made by Police Magistrate Dumble for vagrancy.

The hearing of the evidence occupied the attention of the court all day.

Mr. D. O'Connell for Mrs. Tyler argued that the conviction be set aside. Mr. Crown Attorney Hatton contended that the Magistrate's ruling was right and Judge Huycke agreed with the latter confirming the conviction. The appeal of Mrs. Hanlon on a similar charge will be heard on December 27th.

WEDDING BELLS

SHAMBO—ANDERSON.

The marriage of Miss Annie Anderson and Mr. Frank Shambo, both of this city, was solemnized last Wednesday evening at All Saints' rectory by Rev. Mr. Grobb. The bride and groom were unattended and left later in the evening for a honeymoon trip to Watertown, N.Y. They will reside at 238 Bethune street.

PERRIN—ARMSTRONG.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Christ church, Bailieboro, on Wednesday, December 15, at 12 o'clock when Miss Myrtle Emily Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. W. Armstrong, was united in marriage to Mr. John Reginald Perrin, Bensfort, son of the late Herbert Perrin. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Allen, Millbrook.

Miss Mildred Armstrong, cousin of the bride, made a very pretty bridesmaid, attired in a suit of navy serge and carrying a bouquet of pink roses and carnations. Mr. Ross Mourier made a very efficient groomsman.

The bride looked charming in a semi-military suit of navy blue serge with sabe trimmings, carrying a bouquet of white roses and carnations, and was given away by her father. The wedding music was played by Mrs. (Canon) Allen. The ushers were Mr. Reginald Armstrong, brother of the bride, and Mr. Herbert Perrin, cousin of the groom. The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and carnations.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and a buffet luncheon served to some seventy guests. Congratulatory speeches were made by Rev. Canon Allen, and Mayor Buller, uncle of the bride. Congratulatory telegrams were also received, one coming from the bride's sister, Miss Carrie Armstrong, Ashland, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Perrin were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts, testifying the high esteem in which the young couple are held. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold pendant set with diamonds and pearls, to the bridesmaid an amethyst and pearl pin, to the groomsman a watch fob, and cameo tie pins to the ushers, to the organist a piece of Royal Dalton china.

The young couple left for the 9.20 train accompanied by a number of the young people, amid showers of best wishes and confetti, for Toronto and points west. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Perrin will reside at "Maple Hollow," South Monaghan.

What He Did.

Pat had returned on seven days' leave from the firing line, and was relating his experiences round the fire one night.

"The enemy was creeping up in their thousands, and Oi was simply itching to get at them."

"And what did you do?" asked his father.

"Oh, Oi just scratched myself," replied Pat.

The young minister feels it a weak thing to say to the young men of the parish "Go." It is a far more powerful thing for the young minister to say "Come."—Rev. Dr. John Brown.

The Germans Lose Heavily in Attack on the British Lines

GREEK TROOPS OCCUPY DOIRAN, SAYS ATHENS REPORT

Operations To Be Continued On The Gallipoli Front

Only Partial Withdrawal of Troops—Field Marshall French Received by the President of France—Bulgarian Losses Very Heavy—Life of British Parliament Extended for Eight Months—Austrian Cruiser Sunk.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Operations are to be continued on other Gallipoli fronts than those from which troops were withdrawn, says the official statement. The withdrawal was effected without the Turks' knowledge.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Field Marshal French was received by President Poincare. Large crowds cheered the retiring commander on his arrival and when leaving the palace.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Allies' General staffs at Salonika estimate the Bulgarian losses to date at 130,000.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Premier Asquith's suggestion for prolonging the life of Parliament for eight months was carried in the Commons yesterday afternoon.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Admiralty claims to have destroyed 734 enemy ships with tonage of one and a half millions.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Speaking in the Commons yesterday afternoon Lloyd George said the Allies are now beating the Germans in the production of munitions.

ROME, Dec. 21.—Italian torpedo boat sunk an Austrian cruiser off Naples. All hands lost.

ABYSSINIA OFFERS 200,000 SOLDIERS TO THE ALLIES

French Railroad to Jibuti Would Make Rapid Transportation of Troops Possible

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Lidj Jeassu, the young Emperor of Abyssinia, is so favourably disposed toward the Entente Allies that he not only resisted efforts of German agents to induce him to abrogate treaties with Great Britain, Italy and France last year, but offered 200,000 soldiers to be used by the Allies as their military necessities demanded, according to Mr Pierre Alype, a member of the Colonial Committee of the Chamber of Deputies.

Mr. Alype made this assertion in connection with the resolution now before the Foreign Affairs and Colonial Committees of the Chamber, offered by Mr. Gratien Candace, a coloured Deputy from Guadaloupe, that the French government, in accord with the allies of France, seek immediately the means of obtaining the co-operation of Abyssianian troops under a guarantee of the independence of that country. With regard to this proposition it is recalled that the late King Menelik concluded a treaty of alliance with France in 1807.

Mr. Alype shows that the French railroad connecting the French port of Juhuti with Addis Ababa in Abyssinia would make possible the rapid transportation of troops to the coast where within four days they could reach Suez, or in five days Bassora in Mesopotamia. The Abyssinian troops, he also noted, are already well armed, having from 80,000 to 1,000,000 modern rifles, all manufactured since 1911, partly in Germany but for the most part in Belgium.

The co-operation of the Japanese fleet is suggested for the transportation of Abyssinian troops to Egypt or Mesopotamia.

Rains Flood The Valley of the Lys

PARIS, Dec. 21.—As the result of continuous rains, the region around Hazebrouck and the valley of the River Lys at Steenwerck, in the Northern France zone of military operations, are flooded. The water has risen six feet at Estaires and the current is flowing at a rate of seven miles an hour.

At Steenwerck soldiers are reported to be losing their way over the roads which are under water. Several men barely escaped drowning in the ditches.

All the roads in lower Hazebrouck and many fields, are under water. Heavy rains continue, threatening an increase of the flood.

GERMANS MAY TRY TO CROSS CHANNEL OBSERVER SAYS

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Taking into consideration the extremely heavy rains in France and Flanders, which have brought all the rivers to a state of flood and have turned the plains into marshes, and the extensive movements of German troops in Belgium yesterday's Observer decided an attempt to invade England is more than a possibility. The newspaper believes the effort might be made as a desperate German gamble. Embarkation, it says, might be undertaken at Zeebrugge or along the Scheldt.

Officers from the front express the belief that fighting there on a big scale is impossible because the country is even muddier and altogether is in worse condition than last year.

Two German Aeroplanes Captured

LONDON, Dec. 21.— The German death roll as a result of yesterday's attack on the British lines at Ypres was very heavy. Two German aeroplanes were captured.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 21.— Socialist leaders in Berlin say it will be necessary to double Germany's income by taxation in order to pay a national debt interest.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 21.—The Ford peace party was refused permission by the authorities to hold meetings at Copenhagen.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.— A returned aeroplane assembler for the British army at London, says a monster air raid is to be made shortly on the Kiel canal.

GENERAL HAIG PLEASES FRENCH

PARIS, Dec. 20.—The employment of General Sir Douglas Haig as British commander in chief in place of Field Marshal Sir John French, was entirely unexpected in France, where it has made a great impression. The press is unanimous in expressions of regret at the change and lays particular emphasis on the services of Field Marshal French during his trying times of the opening period of the war.

The newspapers express satisfaction that Field Marshal French is succeeded by one of his most apt pupils whose proverbial good luck is mentioned, with the hope that it may prove to be a favourable omen.

"General Haig has been in close and constant relations throughout the war with the French General Headquarters, where his appointment is received with immense satisfaction," says the Matin.

GERMAN SOLDIERS HARD TO KILL

More Than 89 Per Cent. of Wounded Alleged Fit For Service

LONDON, Dec. 21.—According to the Times the German newspapers have been supplied with extraordinary figures concerning the low rate of mortality and the high rate of recoveries among the German wounded which, even if approximately correct would greatly impair the value of most of the rough calculations of German casualties made in England.

It is stated, for example, that in the first month of the war nearly 85 per cent of the wounded were able to return to military service, while three per cent. died and the remaining 12 per cent. were discharged.

It is further claimed that month by month there has been a steady improvement on these figures, and that the monthly average shows that for every 100 wounded 89.5 were fit for service, 8.8 were discharged or sent on leave and only 1.7 died.

The report says: "No army in the world can show such favourable returns."

The Teutons and Turks Are Ready To Attack The Allies in Greece

Athens Reports That Bulgarians Will Not Take Part in Operations—German and Austrian Subjects Warned to Leave Salonica.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—A despatch to the Temps from Athens says:

"The Central Powers, it is said, gave the Greek government assurances that Bulgarian troops would not participate in the event of any action against the Entente Allies on Greek territory, but that there is a question of an attack by the Austro-Germans with the aid of Turks. The participation of Turks in any operation on Greek soil would be strongly objected to by the government, notwithstanding an assurance that the territory occupied would be evacuated after the war.

"Galib Bey, the Turkish Minister, conferred at length with the Premier, Mr. Skouloudis, Sunday."

Telegraphing from Athens the Havas correspondent says:

Mr. Skouloudis declared to the representative of an Athens newspaper that the report that the German Minister had informed him the Central Powers intended to violate Greek territory was unfounded.

DIPLOMATIC INACTION.

"The inaction for four days of the German and Bulgarian troops on the Greek frontier, however," the correspondent adds, "is attributed as much to diplomatic as to military reasons, and it is thought the Germans are not sufficiently strong to attack the Allies alone and are trying to overcome the objections to Bulgarian action on Greek soil.

"In political circles it is stated that no official negotiations have begun. It is believed, however, the government has opened diplomatic conversations on this subject with the German Minister, setting forth the complications which are likely to result from the entry of Bulgarians into Greece, which would offend the pride of the Greek population and provoke the army.

"The optimism shown in official circles is explained by the supposition that Germany has given assurances that Greece's representations will be taken into account."

Another despatch from the Havas correspondent at Athens says:

"Government and diplomatic circles give the impression that the Central Powers will turn their attention to the Serbs and Italians in Albania unless the Entente Allies are reinforced at Salonika and so change the military equilibrium in the Balkans.

"News from Salonika is to the effect that the situation at the front is unchanged. Air scouts of the Entente Allies report the concentration of Bulgarian troops in proximity to the Greek frontier and the arrival of reinforcements at Doiran.

"The German and Austrian Consuls have left Salonika for Monastir with their staffs and the contents of the archives. Before leaving the Austrian and German Consuls warned the subjects of their countries to prepare to leave the Greek port within fifteen days.

EXPOSED SERBS TO ALLIES' FIRE.

"Bulgarian deserters declare that during the battle at Valandovo the Bulgarians exposed sixty Serbian prisoners of war to French artillery fire. All the prisoners were killed."

"Two hundred thousand out of a total of 700,000 voters in Greece are now mobilized and will be unable to take part in the elections," says a despatch filed at Athens on Saturday by the correspondent of the Havas News Agency, who adds:—"The Liberals, or Venizelos party, who carried 185 seats out of 316 in the Chamber of Deputies at the last election, also will be absent from the polls almost unanimously, according to the best indications.

"The government, however," continues the correspondent, "is urging all its partisans to vote, representing it to be their duty in the grave circumstances of the moment.

"The campaign has passed in perfect calm, the abstention of the liberals eliminating all passionate discussion. The number of votes cast is the only point of interest, and under the peculiar circumstances of the election predictions on this point are impossible."

BAGDAD DEFEAT IMPRESSES PERSIA

BERLIN, by Wireless to Tuckerton, N.H., Dec. 21. — Among the items given out for publication to-day by the Overseas News Agency was the following:

"The British defeat near Bagdad has made a deep impression in Persia. The Russian newspaper Dyen says the Persian Government, realizing the situation, has asked for a revision of the treaty of 1828, which allows Russia exclusively to trade on the Caspian Sea. Persia asks the re-establishment of trading rights and will maintain her own war ships on the Caspian Sea and in the Persian Gulf.

"The newspaper adds that there is slight probability of an amicable arrangement, although England has not altogether lost hope."

In comparison with the Crimean and other wars the British Government have managed the present war with the greatest skill ever known.— Mr. Chaplin.

British Withdraw From Suvla Bay.—It is with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction that we chronicle the evacuation of the principal allied front at Gallipoli after the exhibition of bravery of the Australian and New Zealand troops on this 12 mile front, which has failed to produce tangible results.

Used Frozen Bodies For Breastworks

BERLIN, (by wireless to Sayville, L.I.), Dec. 21.—Describing the defence by Hungarian soldiers of difficult positions on Krn Plateau, in the Isonzo region, 6,700 feet above the level of the sea, the correspondent of the Overseas News Agency, who reached the scene after the receipt of a congratulatory telegram sent by Emperor William to the Kaischau regiment, says:

"The Hungarians, with no sandbags at their disposal, at first took shelter behind frozen bodies. The whole plateau was covered with dead Italians, it being impossible to bury the bodies, as the Italians kept up a continuous artillery fire. The wounded soldiers perished, as it was impossible to assist them.

"The Hungarians have been defending the Krn positions for 200 days, in which some 180 attacks were repulsed without the Italians gaining the least success.

"A special road eighteen miles in length and nine feet in width was constructed by the Hungarians so that provisions and ammunition could arrive regularly. The Austro-Hungarian positions are provided with stoves and are comfortable."

The saving in the Soup Tureen

Bovril makes soups and stews so much more nourishing that they can often take the place of expensive joints. It saves many dollars in the kitchen. Bovril is the concentrated goodness of the best beef—so strong that it cannot possibly be manufactured in cheap cubes. Insist upon the real thing—Bovril in the Bovril bottle.

B.V.B.

THE REAL MYSTERY OF THE CASE.

By GEORGE A. PARKER.

We detectives have opportunities to see further into human nature than any class of men, except physicians, and I am not sure but that our opportunities are superior to theirs. One of the strangest insights that were ever accorded me came through the Gilbert case. I was called one day to the house of Joseph Gilbert, whose son Edgar had been taken suddenly ill after smoking a cigar. It was one of a small package received anonymously. An analysis showed that the cigars had been steeped in a deadly poison.

The young man was unconscious of having an enemy. I questioned him closely, asking him to mention any one who might have the slightest motive to injure him. I inquired as to his relations with the softer sex, and he told me that he had had several mild affairs of the heart, but none of them, at least on his part or so far as he could judge of the girls' either, had ever amounted to anything serious.

I left the remaining cigars on a table in the smoking room, establishing a watch upon them, thinking that if the enemy was a member of the household he or she would attempt to remove them. But after they had been there a week I took them away. I compared the handwriting on the package with that of every correspondent Edgar Gilbert furnished me, and those he did not have he procured on some pretext. I could see no resemblance in any of them to that of the address. None of the expedients I tried afforded me the slightest clew. At last I gave up the case, acknowledging myself beaten.

A year later I received a note from Mr. Gilbert, Sr., informing me that his son was about to be married; that the young man's mother had all sorts of vague apprehensions that some woman had tried to poison him through jealousy and she desired I would keep watch over him until the ceremony had been performed and his safety seemed to be assured.

I called at the house and was accorded an interview with Edgar Gilbert and his fiancee, Miss Withers, both happening to be there together. The moment the girl looked me in the eye a suspicion came over me that I had found the person who had tried to poison Edgar Gilbert. How or why I divined this I cannot explain, even to myself. She knew what I was there for and seemed interested in my protecting her lover. There was no betrayal of emotion, no shrinking toward me, no disposition to avoid my gaze.

But what a position I was in—my client about to marry a girl who I felt sure had tried to poison him and I not having a shadow of proof by which to prevent him! The wedding was to take place in three days. I must make haste.

Learning that a sewing woman was employed in the house of Miss Withers, I paid her well to secure me a specimen of the handwriting of every woman in the house and those who were the bride's bosom friends. There were three of the former and two of the latter. In the handwriting of the bride expectant's most intimate friend I found a chirography identical with the address on the package. Making the lady's acquaintance, I satisfied myself that she had only addressed the package as a favor and had no remembrance of having done so. From her I learned that young Gilbert's fiancee had at the time the cigars were sent received his attention, and he had jilted her, causing her great unhappiness. At that period, too, she was ill.

I learned all this without giving up any knowledge whatever. I was puzzled whether to stop the marriage or let it go on. After reflection I decided to shift the responsibility. Learning the name of Miss Withers' physician, I told him the story. He was greatly astonished, but soon recalled the fact that during the period of the attempted murder he had attended Miss Withers and had observed certain indications of a temporary aberration of mind. Indeed, for a brief season he had kept her under a strict watch. When the physical cause of the trouble passed away the tendency to insanity passed with it.

The doctor transmitted my report to the father of the groom, and so late as the day before the wedding was to come off a consultation was held between the parent and the physician, at which it was decided to call in the young man and impart to him the situation.

He suffered a terrible shock. He was about to rush away to confront the girl he was to marry the next morning with the accusation when his father stopped him, and the doctor explained that she might possibly be unconscious of ever having committed the crime. An accusation, especially at such a time, might be attended with serious effects. Before the conference was ended the young man decided, with his father's consent, that the marriage should take place without any postponement.

The doctor was to discover whether the bride was conscious of her act and promised to inform me of the result of his investigation. His report was that she had no consciousness of it whatever.

What was it that conveyed the information of it to me? That is a mystery I have never solved.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Mostly Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

GIVE US MEN.

By the Bishop of Exeter.

The following has been pronounced one of the most beautiful poems of the war:

Give us men!
Men from every rank,
Fresh and free and frank;
Men of thought and reading,
Men of light and leading,
Men of royal breeding,
The nation's welfare speeding;
Men of faith and not of faction;
Men of lofty aim and action;
Give us men—I say again,
Give us men!

Give us men!
Strong and stalwart ones;
Men whom highest hope inspires,
Men whom purest honor fires,
Men who trample Self beneath them,
Men who make their country wreath them
As her noble sons,
Worthy of their sires!
Men who never shame their mothers,
Men who never fail their brothers,
True, however false are others;
Give us men! I say again—again
Give us men!

Give us men!
Men who, when the tempest gathers,
Grasp the standard of their fathers
In the thickest fight;
Men who strike for home and altar
(Let the crowds cringe and falter),
True as truth, though lorn and lonely,
Tender as the brave are only;
Men who tread where saints have trod,
God defend the right!
Men for Country—Home—and God;
Give us men! I say again—again
Give us men!

Prune-Growing in B. C.

There are indications that the growing of prunes will become an extensive and profitable industry in British Columbia. At Grand Forks there is a prune orchard of nine acres, which produced seven carloads of prunes in 1912. These sold f.o.b. Calgary for $8,500. We are unable to say what the total expenses were, including the freight to Calgary, but the profit must have been very large. During the present year the same nine acres produced one hundred and forty-seven tons of prunes, equivalent to thirteen carloads.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

When Starching Began.

Starch was first made in Flanders, and it was introduced into England in the time of Queen Elizabeth. It was like our starch of to-day, except that it was made in colors—red, yellow, green, and blue.

Before Queen Elizabeth's time ruffles and ruffs were made of fine holland, which required no stiffening.

In 1564 a Flanders woman, Frau van der Plasse, came to London and established there a school for the teaching of starching. The school succeeded and the Flanders frau got rich. She charged £5 a lesson, and an extra 20s. for a recipe for the making of starch out of wheat-flour, bran, and roots.

Beasts of Prey.

Wild birds generally seek their prey in the daytime, while beasts of prey generally seek theirs at night.

FINANCIAL ECONOMY.

One Man's Scheme When He Found His Capital Was Shrinking.

What one man did when he discovered his capital was shrinking is told in the American Magazine:

"A friend let me into a secret of his financial economy which strikes me as valuable. He is of middle age, with a small family, and has an income of $3,500 a year. He has put by a few thousand dollars. His investments are in gilt edged securities.

"At the end of every six months he figures out exactly the value of his property. Each share of stock, each bond is reckoned at its present market price, and the sale value of his house is placed at the lowest figure. To the current value of his estate he adds his life insurance. The result is the capital which would be available for the support of his wife and children should he be suddenly die.

"At the last three reckonings my friend found that his capital was shrinking. There had been declines in certain stocks and bonds and a falling off in the value of his real estate. What did he do? Commiserate himself? Not at all. He went to a life insurance company and took out a policy large enough more than to cover the shrinkage in his capital. Comparatively speaking, it cost him very little, but it added a neat sum to the value of his estate and guaranteed an unimpaired income to his wife."

Sons in China.

In China one can always borrow money on the strength of having a son, but nobody would advance a penny to the man if he had a dozen daughters. The sons are responsible for the debts of their fathers for three generations, while daughters are responsible only for the debts of their own husbands.

An Artist.

"Your son, sir, has a very effective touch."

"So's he's been borrowing from you too?"

Judicial Advantages.

"A magistrate has unusual domestic advantages over other men whose wives are always giving them a piece of their minds."

"What advantage has he?"

"When she starts in to give it he can bind her over to keep the piece."

A Common Type.

"Dubwaite is what I would call a limited humanitarian."

"In what respect?"

"The wrongs of humanity in general work him up to a frenzy, but the individual cases merely bore him."

Turkish Babies.

The Turkish mother loads her child with amulets as soon as it is born, and a small bit of mud, steeped in hot water, prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead.

With Machine Gun Aboard Aeroplane Loops the Loop

Daring Feat Performed 10,000 Feet Above the Battle Line Is Described in Letter—Executed Several Spirals on the Way to Earth.

[Special Dispatch.]

LONDON, December 21.

How [illegible] to loop the loop in an aeroplane, 10,000 feet above the fighting line, while on patrol duty is told in a letter received from the front. The writer says:

"X specially applied that he was waiting for I and [illegible] to do a patrol. So 'Z' called down. We got everything ready and as it was a patrol naturally took a machine gun and ammunition. As six [illegible] down as the requisite number. 'Z' flies 'B' by your seat' and 'X' had three [illegible] Mile more in a monoplane, but more in little bucket on the side of the machine. All this has significance later.

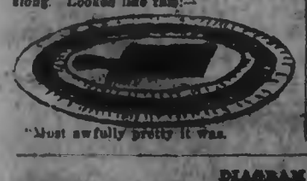
"We started off at five P. M. on a rather [illegible] afternoon, and from the first it was exciting. Instead of revolving [illegible] as the engine should have done, the [illegible] started missing and the revolutions dropped a full quarter. We came [illegible] over the aerodrome—just missing [illegible] near the main road.

"I saw [illegible] faced women lying flat on their [illegible] the road, and two [illegible] running [illegible] for all they were worth as the pilot just proceeded in 'opening her out' [illegible] telegraph wires, which had been specially set far back from the road. Zooming consists in letting the machine fly level whilst trying to get her [illegible], so that she gets up a good climbing pace, about 75 m. p. h., and then pulls back on the joy stick, and up she goes with a bound, only after losing your speed on this steep upward bound you have to let her resume normal climbing angle or she'll stall and do a tail slide.

"I, of course, had fearful palpers of the heart and shouted back that we might [illegible] an aerodrome near by to effect repairs. 'Probably only sooted plugs.' The pilot said she was a wee bit better now and would wait and see if she'd take herself and pick up the other [illegible] fighters. This she did eventually and we climbed at a very good pace, doing [illegible] all along the trenches and up and down for about twenty kilometres.

"We saw lots of machines and swopped [illegible] with many, due to find the right one, but they were [illegible] and [illegible] Not a shot came in our direction, although the wing when you are cutting loose, but when you are peacefully photographing they come on you in swarms as a rule. At about 7,000 we ran into [illegible] of clouds and ploughed through them for a long time. Afterwards, it was cold. When we emerged above them, lo and behold snow on the planes and on the rear edges of the struts and wires. Quite reminded me of Switzerland.

"Then we saw a very pretty and not too common sight. The first time I have seen it. We were behind the cloud bank and the sun at about 2,000 feet, and on the cloud bank appeared our shadow in the middle of a brilliant circular rainbow. The rainbow had a diameter of I suppose twenty-five yards and our shadow almost completely filled up the centre. This kept pace with us as we rushed along. Looked like this:—



"Most awfully pretty it was.

"Then it was the pilot, who had several times been zooming the machine to put the wind up one, said, 'Would you like to loop' I replied 'Yes!' Half a minute while I fix the machine gun.' So I [illegible] one leg over the gun and jammed my elbow hard on to it and gripped one of the wires in front of me. had previously fastened up my belt as tight as I could get it. I did the haversack ammunition up, which was hanging from the front edge of my seat, and then gripped a stud with my other hand. Then said 'Right!'

Looping the Loop.

"Instantly the nose went down and the engine revolutions went up an extra 300 a minute until we touched 95. All this time I had fearful wind up and thought 10,000 feet a long way to fall, and Bustos & Proctor haven't been making aeroplanes for long." They turned out this machine, and in times of peace are a well known firm in Lincoln for large agricultural implements.

"Then at 95 m. p. h. back came the joy stick and, twoo-o-oop, up we went, me leaning hard back against the back of my seat. We hovered for a moment and I thought 'Ugh! We'll have an awful tail slide.' We were in this position then.

"But we had a reserve of elevator. He gave a wrench and over she came clean on her back. My body left the seat and I was suspended by arms hanging head downward 10,000 feet above good old Mother Earth. Luckily I had the machine gun nice and tight and it didn't move. At this point I was [illegible] calm and looked about for the ground, which I discovered at the back of my head and the horizon swooping all over the place.

"Then gently we came over again and into the more diving position, I leaning very hard on my belt, and then with a rush out on the ordinary normal course. We had looped the loop, myself for the first time. All this took about twenty seconds, but seemed like fifteen minutes.

Spirals on Way Down.

"During the loop the ammunition hanging in the haversack on the front edge of my seat dropped onto my inverted body with a good thud, and one of the drums in the other seat dropped outward and downward and hurtled to the earth. By the time it reached the ground, 10,000 feet below, it must have been travelling about 350 m. p. h. Anyhow, if it hit any one on the head they will have received a slight cook thereon, to say the least of it.

"After the loop we stayed up another fifteen minutes to complete our patrol and then came home, doing two very vertical and tight spirals, one left and one right, on the way down. These, however, are now not forbidden and were executed right over the aerodrome.

"We effected a beautiful landing and I put foot on terra firma after the most exciting flight I have had as yet, feeling I was homebody, though why I cannot imagine, as I knew X had already looped in the same machine and lots of other people have done so, always successfully, and after all I was a lump of meat. X is the one who deserves to feel he is quelqu'un."

Serbian Women Are Described as Being Indifferent to Their Fate

[illegible]

[illegible] LONDON, December 21.

Rome correspondent [illegible] in the Peter [illegible] and confirmed [illegible] after the occupation by the Austrians [illegible]

"We are in the house of the burgomaster of Topola," he writes. "The burgomaster is a merchant, but his place of business is closed and a factory with fifteen to an guard. Gajo Krabies was only recently elected burgomaster. After King Peter left his wife [illegible] with the Serbian army and [illegible] Austrians arrived began to [illegible] in the vicinity, the majority of the residents fled, and those who remained elected Krabies burgomaster of the town. [illegible] was reason for this. Krabies belonged to the liberal party, which favored friendship with Austro-Hungary, and was also respected by [illegible] as well as being a leading business man.

"The burgomaster [illegible] his meals and goes into the street [illegible]. He receives with a large signed portrait of King Milan. He also shows invitations to Court balls. On the wall there is a photograph of King Alexander in uniform.

"The burgomaster says that he knows nothing of the Serbian army. So far as he knows the army is still intact, but the men have [illegible] hope. The war, he believes, will last a long time. The small [illegible] can be annihilated, but he believes with Grey, Viviani and Balfour that the Entente Powers can hold out for some time to come.

"'Until the invasion of our country,' he said, 'we were undisturbed by the war. Everything was peaceful and business went on as usual. Of course, food prices were high, but all the food and supplies we needed reached us by way of Salonica. We heard that the Germans were coming, but everybody laughed and said that it was only a bluff. Then the King went with the army, and soon after we heard that Belgrade had fallen. For two weeks we have not seen a newspaper and have had no news. When a few days ago bombs were thrown on us from aeroplanes nearly the whole population went away. My two daughters fled with their children, and we have no idea what has become of them.'

"The houses in Topola are all deserted. In front of one small house are three women and ten children. The husbands of the women are soldiers at the front. The women wanted to flee with the children, but they had no conveyance, as they refused [illegible] they are indifferent as to whether they are to be killed or are to escape. In another house lives a woman all alone. Her husband is at the front. She appears happy and chats with us in a friendly manner. We ask about her children. Then her face darkens.

"'I had children, but they died. It is better so in a country such as this, don't you think?'

"We remain silent as we walk through the deserted streets of Topola, that has the appearance of a plague stricken city."

FRENCH FIELD HOSPITAL IN THE APSE OF ANCIENT CHURCH

This view shows an advanced field hospital situated in a church near the fighting line on the Aisne River. In the chapel at the end of the aisle is an operating theatre, where simple operations are performed by the hospital doctors. The beds of the patients are of wood and are trough-shaped. The church itself is of pleasing architectural design, though its proximity to the fighting line renders it a not very desirable residence for patients suffering, among other complaints, from shattered nerves.

"PRINCESS PAT'S" LAST STAND MADE IN ROLLING WAVES OF POISON GAS

End of Famous Regiment in Fume Filled Trenches at Ypres Told by Corporal William B. Kysh, One of the Survivors of the 1,126 Veteran Fighters Who Joined the Organization in Canada.

[Special Dispatch.]

LONDON, December 18.

This is the story of the beginning and the end of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry—"the finest fighting force the world has seen." It begins on a bright, brisk day a year ago last September, in Quebec, when the regiment, with every man wearing a previous service ribbon, swung on board a transport amid a babel of sound and riotous colors.

It ends in a crescent shaped trench at Ypres, on the eighth day of last May, amid a green vapor of strangling poison and a gray surge of German infantry, with bayonets fixed, writhing over the broken sand bag ramparts. There the men of "Pat's Own" wrote their names into history and disbanded at the command of the greatest of all commanders—Death.

Of 1,126 picked men who stood proudly in review before King George and Lord Kitchener at Salisbury Plains as they strode down the lines only ninety-three are uninjured. There's still a regiment of "Princess Pat's Own" in the trenches on the west front. But in place of the sturdy men gathered from the marts of the world are fresh faced youths, just from the scholastic halls of McGill University, in Canada. They're upholding the traditions—so newly made—of the men who went out before them.

Yesterday Corporal William B. Kysh, of "Princess Pat's Own"—that regiment which went to the front a little more than a year ago—told the story of its beginning and its end. He told it in jerky sketches between quick intakes of cigarette smoke, while a mad, scaly hand, malined from shrapnel, stroked his yellow face.

A Regiment of Veterans.

"I'm sorry I can't tell y' more of this," he apologized. "I never was much of a spieler at [illegible] Nerves gone, I guess. Can't even sleep. Can't sleep."

Yet Corporal Kysh was a seasoned soldier, as were all of his comrades, when he took the King's shilling in Quebec and donned the British uniform. He was Sergeant William Kysh, of the Twenty-ninth United States Volunteers in the Spanish-American [illegible] Corporal Kysh, of the Army [illegible] landers at Asbaiai [illegible] a purser on board [illegible] running to Europe [illegible] the Far East. He was born in England, but he is a naturalized American, [illegible] men who died at Ypres [illegible] was reached.

"Princess Pat's [illegible] September 17, 1914, [illegible] George, under command [illegible] that great first contingent. [illegible] given such a magnificent account of [illegible] on the west front. The regiment was made [illegible] up of veterans and men who had seen service in South Africa, Egypt and the Soudan. From the far flung heights and valleys of the world they gathered under the ensign of Great Britain.

After three weeks at Salisbury Plains the regiment was attached to the Eighteenth brigade, making up part of the Twenty-seventh division, composed otherwise of British regulars just back from service in India. The transfer followed the review by the King and Lord Kitchener. The British Field Marshal, they say, as he passed down the line and saw the service ribbons across the coats of "Pat's Own," said, softly:—

"Now I know where all my old fighters are."

Into the Trenches at Once.

The first week in December saw the regiment off to the front. There was a march from Winchester to Southampton, and there the troops embarked on board the Caledonian for Havre. Havre was reached by the darkness, and after one night's stop the regiment marched to Bielringhen, behind the firing line. All day long they dug reserve trenches. And then that night the word came to relieve Dickebusch. All of these points are within a radius of twenty-five miles from Ypres—where the fiercest fighting on the western front now progresses.

Twenty miles [illegible] arriving at Dickebusch it [illegible] and weary. They [illegible] and hardly had they [illegible] the command came to [illegible] the trenches. The French who had [illegible] needed relief.

So into the trenches the men crept, crawling along [illegible] when the star shells from the German lines made the heavens red, rising and reposing when welcome darkness rode down again. For seventy-two hours they crouched in the trenches of Dickebusch under a rain of shells and shrapnel fire, with only emergency rations to sustain them. This was their baptism of fire.

"Salty beef had hard [illegible] cheese, with a scooper of rum [illegible] said Kysh. "My word! It was tough!

"We came on under a rain of 'whizbangs'—they're gas shells—machine guns [illegible] and rifles. We lost three [illegible] they [illegible] they were [illegible] of Huntington, L. I., and Mayers, of Indianapolis—the boys and Captain Hewton, [illegible] always with us, [illegible] but before we [illegible] seem [illegible] left of the trenches after [illegible] were [illegible] fortifications [illegible] back into and [illegible] and the flare of shell and [illegible] brought them into faint relief. Long [illegible] and heads—I see them, too, at night now, when I can't sleep.

"After we went back to our own trench the Germans used to shout when we came in to relieve the retiring regiments:—'Oh, there you are, Pats—we'll fix you!'

Own Artillery Kills 120.

"Well, we charged the Germans again on March 4. We lost more men, and again had to abandon the trench we won. The dead were too thick and the stench was too terrible. That's what is meant when they say the trenches are 'untenable.' In this charge Colonel Farquhar, of our regiment, was killed. He was directing the firing of trenches just behind the first line when a shell got him.

"We had to stay in C 10 for six days after this. We were shelled, shelled, shelled. Day and night they rained about us and behind us, cutting off relief. We lost sixty-five men killed and a number wounded. Then we got out and the King's Royal Rifles relieved us. From then on until May 3 we went back and forth, in and out of trenches. We mined 'em and blew 'em up; we sniped a little and threw hand grenades.

"And then we were ordered to Ypres. Ypres lies about five miles southeast of Hill 60, or rather St. Eloi, where we took our relief. We marched into the trenches there without delay.

"We were in for a rain of artillery fire and got caught in a vortex from our own artillery and the Germans'. An observer gave the range wrong to our artillery and we caught it. One hundred and twenty of our men went down before the range was righted, but we kept on and occupied the trench. The Germans were right across from us, about two hundred yards away. We held a crescent shaped trench, and on May 5 we routed the Germans, but we had to dusk back, for the fire was too heavy and their trench was useless for protection.

"From then until May 8 the Germans shelled us. They poured tons of lead about us. No one could leave the trench; no one could stick his head out. Our nerves went dead from the concussions, and our eyes were glazed from the sights about us. The dead lay under our feet and the wounded crept back as best they could to where they could get first aid.

First Attack by Poison Gas.

"Early on the morning of May 8 the Germans charged. We knew they were coming, and we were waiting. They came over their trenches in quarter columns, a solid, swaying mass of blue gray. They shouted and ran forward as we moved them down like grass. Our machine guns, four to the section, just waved in a semi-circle and waved back again. We fired our Lee-Enfields as fast as we could pump [illegible] the bullet was ordered [illegible] taken these men from their happy home life and thrown them into the vortex of horror from which there seems no escape.

"But there is one thing that again puts the soldier on his feet, and that is sport. This is what takes the stiffness out of the bones and takes the soldiers' thoughts, for the time being at least, away from the war.

"These sports consist of football games, aeroplane races, horse races and game shooting in the Argonne forest.

"The idea of having special days devoted to sport originated with the Crown Prince. The officers of his staff took enthusiastically to the scheme and the men were delighted to have this opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

"It was my good fortune to be present at several of these sporting events in the Argonne. A large open space was set aside and enclosed by a fence gayly decorated with flags and bunting. Near the entrance to the grounds a reviewing stand for the judges and spectators was built. Football teams were organized in the various regiments and each was distinguished by the color of the suits they wore—some blue, some red, some green and others yellow. What a relief was this to the eyes that had looked upon nothing but gray uniforms for months! It reminded us all again of home and peace.

"Of course, there was much cheering during the various games. The soldier no longer was a soldier, but a peace loving citizen for a few hours at least.

"Following the football games came horse races, in which officers of the staff took part. The prizes for the victors consisted of silver cigarette cases or cigarette-holders and other articles donated by the Crown Prince.

"Renewed in body and spirit, the soldiers returned to the trenches. The soldiers certainly cannot have too much of this sport."

Sports Relieve Monotony of Life in German Trenches

Herr Bernhard Kellermann, in Berliner Tageblatt, Tells How Soldiers Get Minds Off Underground Existence That "Gnaws at One's Soul."

[Special Dispatch.]

BERLIN, December 12.

The graphic pen pictures of the battle front in France which Bernhard Kellermann, German novelist, sends to the Berliner Tageblatt have become a distinctive feature of that newspaper. He wields a facile pen and his descriptions of the life in the trenches are read emulveresely by the German public.

Herr Kellermann's latest contribution tells how the army of the Crown Prince, in the Argonne region, tries to dispel the maddening monotony of trench warfare by indulging in a little sport now and then.

"The trenches are narrow and winding," he writes, "so that it is difficult to pass one another. These were not built for pleasant walks. Some soldiers are sleeping in their little niches and they have scarcely room enough to stretch themselves. It is raining and the night is bitter cold. The legs lost their power of locomotion and the bones become stiff. The physical strain of this trench warfare is tremendous. A battle in the open field is preferable to this hard, incessant, unchanging existence in the trenches.

"The view from them is distressing—barbed wire and an open space shot bare of everything. Day and night the thoughts of the men are on the war. Home, loved ones—everything is swallowed up. This trench warfare gnaws at one's soul.

"What does the soldier do when he leaves the trenches for a few days rest? First he has one good, long sleep. Then he has a good bath with soap and warm water; he changes his wet, muddy clothes and begin and again lives like a civilized being. Perhaps he plays cards or goes for a walk to the nearest village, provided the enemy is not bombarding it. He reads his letters from home or the newspapers, which are passed around among the men. And the conversation—well, that is still about the war, the monster which has taken these men from their happy home life and thrown them into the vortex of horror from which there seems no escape.

"But there is one thing that again puts the soldier on his feet, and that is sport. This is what takes the stiffness out of the bones and takes the soldiers' thoughts, for the time being at least, away from the war.

German Correspondent Says Serbians Are Discouraged

[Special Dispatch.]

BERLIN, December 18.

The correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, with the Bulgarian army in Serbia, thus describes the battle which preceded the evacuation by the Serbians of the fortified city of Pirot:—

"The fighting which led to the entry of the Bulgarians into Pirot was unusually bloody. Beginning in the evening of October 28, it lasted throughout that night and the following day, and was hottest in the vicinity of Arevona Glova, six kilometers south of Pirot. The Bulgarians were outnumbered two to one, and the Serbians had the advantage of fighting behind strongly intrenched positions. Between these intrenchments and the city were many redoubts. The battle was terrific from its very beginning. The Serbians did not spare their ammunition and their artillery threw a hellish fire into the Bulgarian ranks. The position of the latter became very critical as the Serbians made an encircling movement. Then the Bulgarian veterans, who had been held in reserve, came to the rescue. These men must be seen to be admired. Old and gray haired, armed with the same guns that did service in former Turkish wars, they came rushing madly forward when they heard the cry for help from their brothers. They waited for no order to advance, but plunged into the conflict with a contempt for danger that made brave blood tingle.

"It was a sight worth seeing. Their onslaught was so sudden, so unexpected and so terrific that the Serbians fell back in disorder, the veterans pursuing them to the very mouth of their big guns. The battle was won, and when the Bulgarians marched into the city of Pirot the next morning they were welcomed by women and girls, who brought bread and salt and flowers. Many Serbian soldiers had left the ranks of the retreating army and had hid themselves in houses. They soon came out and surrendered. Among them were boys thirteen and fifteen years old without a uniform and whose only equipment was an old rifle. They were asked how they came to serve at such an age, and all replied that they were forced to do so. The older men answered that they were tired of the whole thing and so were the officers. They had plenty of food and ammunition, they said, and were satisfied with the clothing which England and Russia had sent, but their officers were incompetent and that discouraged them. They added that no one in Serbia any longer believed in the story that the Allies were sending 60,000 men to their aid.

They shouted and ran forward as we moved them down like grass. Our machine guns, four to the section, just waved in a semi-circle and waved back again. We fired our Lee-Enfields as fast as we could pump [illegible] the bullet was ordered

"They lay in piles in front of the trenches, and the piles were always wriggling around as some of the injured underneath tried to creep out. A whole battalion of them were put of the way before they drew back and formed for another charge, behind cover of their trenches.

"And this time we saw poison gas for the first time. It was the second assault, about eight o'clock in the morning. We could see that something was coming off, and then suddenly there spouted up a thick green cloud, that hid everything in front of us. The fellows under the German guns wriggled harder than ever and everybody in our trench asked:—'Well, what's comin' off anyhow?' The wind was wrong for 'em, and the Germans went back, and there was quiet until ten o'clock.

"This time their gas came in. It rolled along the ground like a moving wall about eight feet high. Behind it we knew the Germans were coming, but we couldn't see them, so we let fire through the cloud. The gas had holes blown in it and the forces of the bullets swayed it a bit, but before we knew it the gas was rolling in the trenches.

The End of 'Princess Pat's Own.'

"I heard men cursing at one end of the trench where the gas struck first, just as a shell buried me, and then I got the gas myself. I got it light, for I was half buried, but the fellows about me screamed and rolled up as if they were burned, cursing and praying. It caught you by the throat and burned its way into your lungs; then you couldn't breathe out, and you burst or slobbered. I crept back on my stomach, for I had a bit of shrapnel in my stomach and a bullet in my leg, just as I saw the Germans dropping over the sand bags. The fellows who could stand jabbed 'em with bayonets or bit and fought them. I saw four of my pals—right fellows they were—lying almost over each other, all of them with gas in them.

"'Oh, Christ, Kysh!' one of 'em called, 'get me a drink. Get me'— and a German drove a bayonet clear through his throat and lungs before he could finish it. And then the same German knifed the other three boys.

"That was the end of 'Princess Pat's Own.' Long before the Germans came the last time there weren't sixteen men of the sixteen platoons of the regiment who could defend themselves. I fired 170 rounds myself from my Lee-Enfield, and it was so hot I couldn't hold her. I crept back and somebody put me on a Maltese cot and got me to Dickebusch. I spent six months in a hospital at Roehbury Park and then came over to Quebec, where I got my discharge."

And Corporal Kysh, still moving the hand that was raked with shrapnel over his yellow face, lighted another cigarette

SMOKING IN LONDON THEATRES IS PERMITTED DURING WAR

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The sudden consent of the Lord Chamberlain to smoking in London theatres has settled a controversy which raged furiously before the war, when there was nothing more serious to talk about. If managers now consent, the playgoer may betake himself to the play with a pipe, cigar or cigarette and, according to the quality of the tobacco, asphyxiate the villain at will.

Lord Sandhurst, who received a deputation of West End managers on the subject, expressed his keen wish to help the London theatres, particularly at times so difficult for them and he consented, if any manager applies, to delete from clause 53 of the theatre license the word 'auditorium.' Thus a stroke of the pen alters the license and allows smoking. Clause 53 reads:

"No smoking is permitted in the auditorium, the orchestra, green rooms, the dressing rooms, the wings or within the precincts of the stage except so far as may be necessary on the stage in connection with the performance."

Lord Sandhurst said that as the change was in the nature of an experiment it ought to be regarded at present only as a temporary one, say for the duration of the war.

But the problem uppermost in the minds of London theatre managers to-day is, "What kind of play suits smoking?" The general feeling seems to be that the darkest tragedies must not be lightened by the striking of matches, while the less serious plays may be helped out with nicotine.

Two Theatres Seek Change.

Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, for the Comedy Theatre, and Mr. Frank Curzon for the Playhouse, have applied for the alteration of license to allow smoking. At these two theatres revues are the attraction. The managements of Drury Lane, Daly's, the St James', the Haymarket, His Majesty's, Wyndham's and other theatres where the most serious plays are running have no intention of allowing smoking in their theatres.

Sir Geo. Alexander, in reply to a question what his view on the matter was, said:

"During the abnormal period the removal of every restriction possible upon those who cater for the public is wise. Smoking is allowed nearly everywhere now. Ladies do not leave the dinner table when the men begin to smoke, and when they go to the drawing room they often take their cigarettes with them.

"There is no reason why smoking should not be allowed in the theatre although I do not believe it is desirable—neither the striking of matches nor the puffing of smoke—during a serious play or any play which has a consecutive interest. I do not propose to introduce smoking in the St. James Theatre, but I would not hesitate if the audience desired it, or if thereby $100 a night could be added to the receipts. At such a time as this it is entirely a commercial question."

Mr. Gerald du Maurier does not think that persons who go to a serious play wish to smoke.

"It is only an impression," he said—"it is not a subject you can argue upon. I myself do not propose to introduce smoking. If a man wants to smoke he can always go out to smoke But should the audiences at Wyndham's express a desire to smoke their desire would be gratified. All the same I should have an uneasy feeling that the desire sprang from nerves—or boredom."

No Smoking at Hamlet Performance.

Mr. Dennis Eadie, who is a non-smoker, thinks smoking in a theatre is a matter of taste. He does not intend to introduce smoking at the Royalty. At the Kingsway Miss Lena Ashwell is busily rehearsing a children's play, so it may be assumed that smoking will not come into force in that theatre yet awhile. At the same time Miss Ashwell makes it clear that she is in the public's hands.

"If the press," she said, "would find out the opinion of the public rather than that of the actor-manager the result might be extremely useful. After all, actor-managers are the servants of the public, and it is for the public to declare what they want."

Nor has Mr. H. B. Irving any intention of introducing smoking at the Savoy,

"The removal of the ban may be helpful to those intending to produce revue, or anything like that," he said. "It depends upon the class of play. I myself should certainly not like to play a very long part in an atmosphere full of smoke—Hamlet, for instance—I don't think it would be possible."

From the smoker's point of view smoking, even at the serious play, is an advantage. A correspondent, who pleads for the smoker, writes:

"Smoking during Isben, for instance may have its drawbacks, but could anything be more mind destroying than the lady, known to most of us, who noisily divests a large and luscious chocolate of its rustling gold en coat during the third act soul storm?

"To the cigarette smoker nothing on earth is more tantalising than the Sir George Alexander drawing room play, in which the young men place beautiful Egyptian cigarettes between their lips, light them leisurely and sinking into easy chairs, blow out clouds of the sweetest smoke before the eyes of their victims. This is the essence of refined cruelty. Help!"

The ease with which OXO can be assimilated is one of its strong recommendations in weakness. It is rich in strength-restoring elements, yet so palatable, so pure and so easily digested that it can be taken in great weakness and relied upon in serious crises.

BELGIUM IS STARVING

Unless the people of Canada come at once to the relief of the Belgians hundreds—yes, thousands — of these gallant people will die in the slow agonies of starvation. Without food of any kind available in their own country — with the despicable Germans refusing to feed them or allow them to import flour, and with grisly winter staring them in the face—the plight of these unhappy people is pitiful in the extreme.

The appeals for help which were made to Canada last year, were responded to in true Canadian style heartily and generously. Five shiploads of foodstuffs and clothing, besides separate consignments, were sent from the Dominion alone. Perhaps the enthusiasm waned. Perhaps we forgot. Perhaps we thought nothing more was needed. Anyway, the sixth ship has yet to be sent. And it must be remembered that the Belgians need a constant and continuous supply of bread.

Unless the actual flour, or its equivalent in money, be sent now, these martyred people will starve.

To us, living some three thousand miles from the battlefields of Europe there can be no conception of the misery and want of the Belgians in that part of the country controlled by the Huns. The cities are in ruins, the villages overrun, crops destroyed or confiscated by the invaders, railroads and rivers bridled by the dastardly enemy—they are unable to buy food for themselves and the Germans refuse to feed them. Practically every thing of value has been seized by the Huns, and the people are unable to earn a living at their regular vocations.

It is quite true that they would be paid and well fed for doing one kind of work. The Germans offer them high wages to work in the German ammunition factories, making German shells to shoot down the soldiers of Canada, England and France.

This would be the easy way to keep from starving. But the Belgians say "NO! We will starve if our friends do not feed us, but we will die rather than dishonour our name and our country!"

As the Earl of Selborne said: "Never for one moment forget your debt of honour to Belgium. On the 28th of July the Belgium government asked the German minister whether Belgium could rely on Germany respecting the neutrality of Belgium, and the answer was 'Yes.' On the 31st of July that same German minister went to the Belgian Government and demanded the free passage through Belgium for the German army. The Belgian government said 'No'. About the 3rd of August the German armies crossed the Belgian frontier, and on the 4th of August they were burning villages and murdering the population. Never since Europe was overrun by the hordes of the Huns under the 'scourge of God' called Attila—never has there been a more terrible deed than the deed done in the Kaiser's name by the German army in Belgium in August, 1914. We could not prevent that deed. It is not for us to revenge it. But our duty is to spend the last drop of our blood and the last sixpence of our money in endeavouring to restore the Belgian people to their place among the nations of the earth, and to save Europe from the possibility of a repetition of such a crime."

In Liege alone, so terrible has been the bombardment, there are 22,000 people homeless, 165,000 workmen idle and over 320,000 people absolutely destitute and dependent upon the food sent by the United States and Greater Britain for their very lives.

To feed the Belgians requires about seven million dollars a month, which is very little indeed when it is estimated that a bag of flour costing only $2.50 will make enough bread to feed a Belgian family for a month.

Surely the people of Canada will not allow the Belgians to starve. Only—the help must come at once because the need of money is so vital and so pressing.

Any sums, however small, will be gratefully received and promptly acknowledged by the central executive committee for the relief work for the victims of the war in Belgium, 59 St Peter Street, Montreal.

In a Runaway Accident.

Visiting New York for the first time Uncle Henry happened to figure in an exciting runaway accident. When he was finally rescued his anxious nephew exclaimed:

"You must have been frightened half to death!"

"No, indeed," replied Uncle Henry. "To tell the truth, I hardly knew the difference. I've been travelling at a pretty lively gait ever since I struck town."

Cures Biliousness Prevents Brights Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousnes, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique positions. By their combined action on these eliminating organs they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NEGLIGEE GOWN.

By Anabel Worthington.

We all like to look our prettiest in the seclusion of our homes, for it is here that those dearest to us see us. Such a gown as the one shown in the illustration, while simple enough to make, offers an unusual degree of beauty.

It has a short waisted bodice in the Empire style and this is cut with very long shoulder, so that the seam which joins it to the sleeve comes far down on the arm. The sleeve is short but it is wide and is finished with a deep cuff. Around the neck is a wide, ornamental collar, which continues down the front in plastron effect.

The lower part of the gown is made with straight upper and lower edges and is arranged in small box pleats attached to the bodice on the outside of the lower edge. Of course gathers may be substituted for the pleats, but these are more novel and are not really difficult to make as they can be stitched together part of the way down where the inner edges of the pleats meet.

Such a dainty style at once suggests materials such as crêpe de Chine, wash silk, silk poplin, cashmere and challis. Of course the more usual woollens, such as albatross and novelties, can also be employed when service is desired.

The negligee, No. 7,410, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5½ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅞ yard of 36 inch width for collar and cuffs and 4½ yards of edging.

This pattern can be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 8 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

His Christmas

Mr. Van Wycke strode valiantly on against the wind, his head down, a scowl in his blue eyes; his whole mein quite at variance with the clear, cold, sunshiny Christmas weather. The Day itself was only two days off—which was one of the reasons Mr. Van Wycke scowled. He hated Christmas. He hated it because he was thirty-five, and sadly bore with himself and life and the world he lived in. Long ago he had tired of cotillions, of dances and dinners and teas. As his fortune increased beyond limits, almost, he tired of his business career. There was no one to go to the theatre with him; and he liked talking it all over between the acts. Half the fun was gone when he had to sit silent and read his programme or go out and smoke, or talk to some one that he hadbrought just for company—some inane young chit in her first season, or some satiated and unenthusiastic older belle. There was really nothing left for him to do but read. He could still lose himself in a book and tread the paths of romance and adventure denied to him in life. But his eyes occasionally gave out and ached annoyingly; and then he was at a loss.

To go behind all this, Mr. Van Wycke was horribly lonely. He was not lonely just for people—he knew heaps of people. Sands piled their invitations high on his master's secretary daily, and Mr. Van Wycke answered them with sadly regretful little notes or accepted briefly—or ignored them altogether if he felt vengeful and savage and ill-used. An indignant society would probably have risen in wrath against him if he had not been Armour Van Wycke. But he was; and he wouldn't have cared a—a continental if society had tried to discipline him. So Mr. Van Wycke was not lonely for people—just people. He was lonely for some one of his own kind—some one! He would have married if he could have thought of any one to marry; but he didn't love anybody. He felt—inside him somewhere—that he was quite capable of loving some on devotedly, if she would only be good enough to turn up. He would have sought her out, but he did not know exactly how to go about it. He couldn't advertise—I mean, it wouldn't have been dignified; and she probably—certainly—wouldn't reply, even if she should want to.

There was nothing to do but wait, and keep on going about—hoping—growling—breathing piteous prayers mentally.

And all this is why he hated Christmas. He hated it because the shops were full of wonderful things that he could not buy because he'd no one to buy them for; and he loved buying things. He envied every shopper that he passed in the street. He sympathized with the ones who stood at the shop-windows with a reflective narrowing of the eyes, wondering if the thing inside would do for Mary or William or Ellen, or if the money would go round if—He would have liked to stop and say with an anger little nod:

"Please let me buy it. I love to buy things. And you know Mary (or William or Ellen) would be delighted with it. Please let me."

He never dared. He realized his own isolation. He know that he had no place in it all, and the knowledge sapped his courage.

He was a bachelor, entirely unrelated. His scrap of kith and kin—a maiden aunt — had died three years before, leaving him another fortune. He had made her little gifts before that. He had entered shops with an air of importance, and had gone into executive sessions with interested shop-people over the question of the maiden lady's preference. Now he had nothing to buy but candy and flowers for hostesses and debutantes and a few seasoned buds whom he knew intimately enough for such a courtesy.

So he hated Christmas!

He almost wished there weren't any. And he determined that next year he would go some place where there isn't: and he was just wondering if there weren't still time to go this year, and thus escape the ghastly stillness and loneliness of Christmas Day itself, when—

There came a tug at his coat-tail

It is a curious sensation to feel a tug on one's coat-tail—if one is not in the habit of feeling such tugs. They mean small hands. They mean little people. And they give one rather a thrill—when they are a novelty.

Mr. Van Wycke looked down apprehensively, half expecting to see a dirty, ragged little newsboy—more valiant than usual.

He saw instead a youth attired in unquestionable taste—a youth perhaps six, perhaps seven—somewhere about there, at any rate. Mr. Van Wycke was not experienced in judging the age of youths. This one had light hair—docked, or Buster-Browned, or whatever you call it—and had big, eager, wistful, melting, inquiring eyes, and an impertinent little nose, and a surprisingly square jaw. He had a blue, roundish Russian hat trimmed with Persian lamb on his head; and a Russian blouse thing of blue, edged with lamb, came to his knees. Then the most sturdy legs conceivable. And by the hand that had not tugged at Mr. Van Wycke's coat-tail, this youth of six—or maybe seven—held the mittened hand of a lady aged perhaps three—maybe four—surely no older. The mitten was red. A red coat trimmed with black fur, a red hat, and a black muff completed her costume. She had eyes like the boy's—so like that they must surely have been sister and brother—but her curls were dark, and her skin was something like old ivory and wild roses; and her legs were much plumper—much, much plumper, but equally sturdy.

"I'm sorry I had to tug you," said the youth, "but I spoke politely twice, and you didn't hear me."

Mr. Van Wycke gasped. His blue eyes were unutterably astonished-looking and curious.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I was thinking."

"You'll get run over some day," said the boy, "crossing the tracks. Is this Thirty-fifth Street?"

"Thirty-fourth," said Mr. Van Wycke.

"Which way is Thirty-fifth?"

"That way," said Mr. Van Wycke, pointing with his stick, yet regardful of the seething mass of humanity about them.

"And Broadway?" asked the boy.

Mr. Van Wycke nodded.

"Are you looking for something?" he asked.

"I'm looking for Santa Claus's Office. We saw about it in the paper. At least, I did. Sister can't read."

"Pussy-cat, pussy-cat, where've you been?" cried Sister indignantly, in refutation.

"Not counting picture-books, I mean," amended the boy. "We thought we'd go and see him, so we took the money of our banks, and played hide-and-seek with Mary, and locked her in the sewing-room."

Sister was galloping up and down on one spot, excitedly.

"Mewy can't get out!" said she. "Mewy can't get out!"

"Mary being the nurse, of course," said Mr. Van Wycke interestedly.

"Of course," said the youth.

"'Course," his sister added, as if every one knew that.

"We mean to go directly," went on the youth, in answer to the disapproval in Mr. Van Wycke's eyes. "We just want to see Santa Claus a minute. Then we're going right back."

"A matter of importance, is it?" asked Mr. Van Wycke, nodding, as man to man.

"Yes," said the youngster mysteriously. "You see—" His gloved hand slipped into Mr. Van Wycke's quite naturally. Mr. Van Wycke flushed, and the most agreeable sensation of importance and responsibility thrilled through him. "We need something, and Mary wouldn't let us put it in our letters to Santy. But we thought we'd ask him himself if he couldn't bring it. He brought Lucy a baby sister when she asked."

"A cute little baby sister," said Sister ecstatically.

"And if he could bring a sister, he could bring a father," reasoned the boy.

"A what?" gasped Mr. Van Wycke.

"A father. We need a father. Everybody else has a father, but Mother lost ours. We need another one, and so does she."

"Need'm," said Sister, with a wise nod. "And this is what you want to see Santa about?" asked Mr. Van Wycke uncertainly.

"Yes, sir," said the boy. "Don't you—think he can do it?"

Two anxious faces regarded him wistfully. Four melting brown eyes implored him to think so.

"I have been told," said Mr. Van Wycke, "that Santa can manage anything; although I never heard of any one's making this precise sort of request before. But we can ask him, certainly. This office is on Thirty-fifth, you say?"

"Broadway, near Thirty-fifth," said the boy.

Mr. Van Wycke considered his voluntarily acquired charges and the surging crowd between where he stood and Broadway. Then he waved his stick at a line of taxis across the way.

"A cab?" asked the youth, wide-eyed. "We can't afford it."

"It's my treat," said Mr. Van Wycke. "I just remembered I want to see Santa, too."

The Russian-bloused young man watched the oncoming taxi critically, helped Van Wycke help his sister in, and politely invited Van Wycke to precede him, but yielded gracefully and entered first when Van Wycke insisted.

"Santa Claus's office," said Van Wycke to the chauffeur. "Broadway, near Thirty-fifth, I think."

"Yes, sir; all right, sir," said the driver.

They were closed into the cab—Van Wycke and the incredible children—quite as if they belonged together and were in the habit of making such jaunts.

"I like 'em," said the boy, "because they don't have to go on tracks like street-cars and trains, but can go anywhere they like."

"Anywhere?" added Sister dubiously, evidently pondering the question. "On any streets," explained her brother.

"If we had a father to work and make money," continued he, "p'raps we could afford cabs. Mothers can't make as much as fathers. Mary says so."

"Is that why you need one?" asked Mr. Van Wycke.

"Ye-es. And to have a man in the house. And to go out places with Mother. And to go fishing with me,

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach, and does little but harm. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit, which includes the inhaler; it lasts two months, and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

What the "Von" Means.

The German title of "von" as a prefix before a surname was in feudal times the privilege of the landed barons, who thus designated, as in other countries with like prefixes, their ownership of lands. In modern times, however, the prefix "von" may be granted as a title of nobility by the German emperor or the kings of the various kingdoms of the empire. It does not carry any privileges or emoluments with it. It is recorded in the heraldry office in Berlin if granted by the emperor as kaiser or as king of Prussia, in Munich if granted by the king of Bavaria, Leipsig if conferred by the king of Saxony, etc. The recipient is not given a diploma with it. It may be, like the English title of baronet, personal or hereditary—that is, it may be granted to a man for his lifetime only or may descend to his sons. It cannot be assumed by any one, but may be earned by any deserving German subject and conferred as a reward for service or eminence.

Help to Make Her Dream Come True

SHE is one of some Three Million Belgians who, since they refused to sell their honor to Germany, have lived on the brink of starvation. A thriving industrial people, used to life's comforts, they have been reduced to a state where they dream, not of luxuries or pleasures, but of having enough to eat!

True to their character as the war has unmasked it, the Germans callously refuse to help the starving. The task of feeding them has been undertaken by Belgium's Allies and Neutral Nations, through the provided by voluntary contributions and administered with wonderful economy and efficiency by a neutral Commission.

Absolutely none of the supplies go to Germans, and most of the food taken into the country is paid for by Belgians who have still a little money. But to feed those who cannot pay, nearly $2,500,000 a month is needed!

Surely no people ever deserved our sympathy and aid more than do these starving Belgians!

They face a winter of necessity, while we are living in plenty. The Fund needs regular weekly or monthly contributions rather than larger but spasmodic gifts. Let us plan to deny ourselves, if necessary—share with our needy Allies—and help to save their lives.

MAHON

"Soldier of brains and understanding." That is how Lieutenant-General Sir Bryan Mahon, D.S.O., Commander of the British forces in the Balkans, is summed up by those who know him. We like to think of him as the dashing cavalry officer who led the flying column to the relief of Mafeking in 1900. Sir Bryan was in Egypt when the South African War broke out, and the story goes that when he received a telegram to transfer himself to South Africa as quickly as possible he drove five camels to death in his feverish rush across the desert.

The story of how that flying column of 900 mounted men, 160 picked infantry, four guns, two pompoms, and sixteen days' provisions fought its way to Mafeking forms one of the most thrilling stories of the Boer campaign. It was during his march to raise the siege of Mafeking that, having no cipher and wishing to send Baden-Powell a message concerning his force, Mahon wrote this enigma: "Our numbers are the Naval and Military Club multiplied by 10 (94 Piccadilly) x 10 equals 940; our guns the number of sons in the Ward family (six); our supplies the O.C. 9th Lancers (Little)."

Previous to departing for South Africa, Sir Richard Wingate paid a magnificent tribute to Sir Bryan in a despatch to Lord Kitchener, concerning his (Sir Bryan's) services in the Soudan campaign. "I cannot," he wrote, "speak in sufficiently strong terms of the excellence of the service performed by this officer. His personal disregard for danger, intrepid scouting, and clever handling of men all fit him for high command."

Sir Bryan is a Galway man, and learned his soldiering with the 8th Hussars, ultimately joining the 12th Lancers, of which in 1900 he became lieutenant-colonel, reaching his present rank three years ago. It is interesting to note that he is a cousin of Sir Edward Carson.

RUSSIAN VIEW OF KING OF BELGIANS

Woman Contrasts His Future With That of German Emperor

"Just imagine," a clever Russian woman said to me last night, "what the German Emperor would give to be a world hero like King Albert of the Belgians. Just think what different verdicts history will pass upon them. 'King Albert will be held up to admiration as the ideal sovereign —brave, noble, modest; a true friend of peace, yet, when his country was attacked, a stern warrior, a real leader of his people . . . . . The Emperor William, on the other hand what will history say of him?"

"It will say," broke in an impetuous young Russian officer, "that he had Napoleon's ambition without any of Napoleon's genius. That his people were annoyed by his fussy vanity in peace time, while his generals cursed him for a meddler in war. That his word could not be trusted, that honour found no place in his weak character, and that he was guilty of one of the most revolting crimes ever committed when he deliberately invaded and ravaged Belgium, the country which he was pledged not only to respect, but to defend."

The speeches are typical of the state of Russian feeling. They were made at the Imperial theatre, the Comedie Francaise of Petrograd. We had gone there to see a play by the most famous Russian dramatist, Andreef, a play which shows with poignant mastery of effect the pittifulness of Belgium's suffering, but at the same time gives confident assurance that her wounds shall be healed and her soil restored to her, cleansed of the invaders' polluting feet. You may think my friends were under the influence of moving scenes and powerful declamation. No, I assure you What they said is said every day by Russians of all classes without any emotional stimulus.

It is a fine, hopeful feature of this war that among the Allies none of his are fighting for our own advantage We are not in it for what we can get out of it. France, certainly, will regain the provinces taken from her in 1871, but only because they want to be French once more. Russia will win her desire to have the Dardanelles kept open, which will give free entrance at all times to the Mediterranean, but only because Turkey insisted on being driven out of Europe Serbia is fighting for existence, Russia for Serbia's right to exist as a small nation threatened by Austria. France and Belgium are defending themselves against an unprovoked attack We are keeping our promise to Belgium, and Japan is keeping her engagement with us.

Compare that record with the aims of Germany and Austria. Germany declares that she hopes for money, territory and power. She admits that she prepared for war in order to obtain these advantages ("A place in the sun.") It is clear that she declared war because she thought the most favourable moment for obtaining them had come. As for Austria, she is struggling, in her pathetic, dotard fashion, to keep up that tradition of tyranny which left so foul a stain upon the history of the nineteenth century. The motives of these two criminals are selfish and cynical. Never has war been waged for more materi'al, sordid ends. It is because our hands are clean, and the hands of all our allies, that we have the world's sympathy on our side.

It is both surprising and cheering to find Russian hearts so warm in their feeling toward Belgium. Russia's interests are all in other directions. Yet nothing arouses people here so vitally as the thought of Belgian wrongs and woes, so vividly as the heroic struggle of the small nation against its overbearing, bullying big neighbour. At the Imperial opera, and at other theatres, too, it is the custom, at a certain point in the performance, for the orchestra to play the national anthems of all the allied powers. Every one stands up. Each is applauded. The one which is always applauded more loudly than any of the others is "La Brabanconne," the Belgian national song. I heard it repeated as many as three times.

Our "Rule, Britannia" is well received. (They will not play "God Save the King" because they consider it a German tune, although it was composed by Lully, a Frenchman.) The Marseillaise" stirs audiences, the Serbian hymn charms them. After the Japanese, they clap with friendly fervor, though the music has puzzled their ears. Their own rolling melody they welcome, of course. But it is the Belgian national song which calls forth the deepest and longest demonstration of sentiment.

This play "King Justice and Liberty," arouses enthusiasm such as Russians seldom show in the theatre As a rule, they applaud little; scarcely ever do they interrupt while a piece is in progress. But when an actor representing the king of the Belgians appears on the scene there is an outburst which cannot be checked At the close of the "tableau" he is called again and again.

It is in the fourth of the six "tableaux" into which the drama is divided that 'Count Clermont' appears The programme explains that this character is meant to stand for King Albert, while the leading figure in the play represents M. Materlinck. First M. Andreef shows us the land at peace. Suddenly the alarm bells sound, the tramp of marching feet is heard, the confused murmur of an outraged people arises in the sunny August air. Then the famous writer Gerlier (Maeterlinck) determines to fight along with his two sons. This is in tableaux two. The third is an episode of war, very tragical to me because I saw just such realties in France; the night reddened by a burning town, fugitives huddling together and sobbing on the outskirts destitute and hopeless, watching the homes where they lived contented, and, in their humble way, prosperous, being destroyed with everything they possess.

Next we see Grellier wounded; to him comes the king with prime minister and adjutant. They seek his advice. Should the dikes be opened and a district by the enemy flooded? "Yes," says the great writer, after an inward struggle. There is besides a tiny incident illustrating King Alberts' character in a manner which brings tear sinto the spectators' eyes. Young Grellier is with his father, wounded also. The king notices him holds out his hand.

"But sir," the boy murmurs, "I am only a common soldier.'

"What of that?" replied the king, kindly and simply."

Fifth tableaux: German staff officers at their headquarters. Great little sketches of Prussian character, not over-satirised. All very pleased with themselves until the news comes that the dikes have been pierced. The water is coming nearer, nearer, nearer. Every instant a messenger rushes in with worse tidings. At last the roar of the flood is in their ears. The scene closes with a wild sauve qui peut.

Last comes a short scene, in which Grellier, now an inspired seer, prophesises for his country a happy issue out of all her afflictions, and away goes the audience more resolved than ever to listen to no talk of peace until the wrong done to Belgium has been righted, so far as such devils' work can be repaired.

Worthy of notice—is it not?—that the aspect of the war which appeals more than any other to the leading Russian dramatist, and to audiences at the leading Russian theatre should be the suffering of Belgium and the shame of Germany's broken word.

A good omen. A sign of promise for the future. A sign that the European family of nations is drawing more closely together, and following the same ideals and setting the interests of men and women above the tyranous claims of statecraft based on 'Might Is Right'"—London Mail.

TO KEEP SKIN HEALTHY, YOUTHFUL, WRINKLELESS

Now that the social season is here, be especially careful to keep your skin in fine condition. You know how complexions complexion defects appear under the bright light of the drawing or ball room. Also how very evident are some make-ups when similarly illuminated. I have myself discarded cosmetics entirely, using a process which gives far better results and which leaves no trace on the skin. At night I smear on a thin coat of ordinary mercolised wax, washing it off next morning. This gradually absorbs the devitalized particles of surface skin; just as gradually the more youthful skin beneath comes forth, providing a complexion as clear, smooth and delicately tinted as a young girl's. Get an ounce of mercolised wax at your druggist's and try this remarkable treatment.

Remember, too, that wrinkles, even the finer lines, are not easily concealed in a brilliantly lighted room. You can quickly obliterate these hateful marks by bathing your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. And your face won't look sticky as after using pastes.—Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.

BERLIN POLICE SABRED ADVOCATES OF PEACE

LONDON, Dec. 1.—According to a correspondent of The Manchester Guardian, news which reached Switzerland a few days ago from a trustworthy Berlin source suggests that peace currents are certainly flowing in the high governing and directing spheres of Berlin, but that it is impossible to speak of them with any degree of precision. It seems the financiers are becoming specially restive, not because they are less patriotic than the other classes in Germany, but because they see more clearly that any prolonged continuance of the war means, in the words ascribed to a prominent Berlin banker, "hideous bankruptcy."

All the evidence available seems to indicate also that General von Falkenhayn, Chief of the General Staff, shares this comparative moderation of tone. For the discussion of the peace terms the military element, it is predicted, will adopt a chastened rather than an arrogant attitude. That of the German working classes toward the war seems to have become one of uncompromising hostility. Hardly a day passes without some example of this new spirit of revolt being quoted in the Swiss Socialist newspapers. The Berne Tagwacht and the Zurich Volksrecht, which are not subject to the German censorship, are regarded as reflecting German Socialist opinion more accurately than Vorwarts is able to do.

The Tagwacht prints, as the latest and most startling instance of popular discontent, a description by one of the participants of a peace demonstration which took place in Berlin on the evening of the Reichstag opening. This account supplements the brief reports hitherto telegraphed to England. The Tagwacht's correspondent says:

"Ten thousand men and women took part in a peace demonstration which marked the opening of the Reichstag Nov. 30. A crowd collected toward 8 o'clock in the evening in Unter den Linden. One section of the demonstrators came from the Schloss, (the Imperial Palace.) The crowd sang the 'International' outside the Opera House, and as this section passed through Unter der Linden in the direction of the Brandenburger Tor a squad of police, which had been specially stationed in the neighbourhood, rushed out and drove it back along the Friedrichstrasse and Charlottenstrasse. At this point the demonstration became congested, and loud were the cries in favour of peace. The crowd began to sing the 'Socialist March' in front of the Cafe Bauer, while 'Wohlan wer Recht and Wahrheit achtet' (Forward, lovers of right and truth), was sung in front of the Victoria Restaurant.

"After they had driven one section of the demonstrators into the side streets the police tried to drive off those who had congregated in the Charlottenstrasse and Friedrichstrasse. Mounted police began the attack, using their sabres in many directions and cutting at the demonstrators.

"'Lookout, or we'll polish you off!' cried a mounted policeman.

"'Our men are bleeding yonder, so you can slaughter us here,' replied a war wife.

"The aim of the police seemed to be to clear the Wilhelmstrasse, where the Imperial Government buildings and the foreign embassies are situated.

"Gradually, under pressure of the police, the crowd dispersed north and south. Cries in favour of a speedy termination of the war were everywhere heard, and cheers for Liebknecht were raised. The demonstration lasted several hours, and at the close the demonstrators marched through the city in military formation, amid cries for peace.

"The demonstration was not organised by the Socialist Patry. As a matter of fact, the organisers apprehended police opposition, and so no publ.c notification of the demonstration was made. The people simply turned up themselves, and every one was highly pleased with the result.

"Soldiers took part in the demonstration, and some of them were arrested. Many people received sword wounds in the police charges.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

The man set the alarm clock to see if he could beat his wife to his trousers pockets.
He didn't.

HAIG AND FRENCH ARE FAST FRIENDS

It is a striking fact that Sir John French and the man who succeeds him in command in France have been associated with each other longer and more intimately than any two other British generals. Sir Douglas Haig first smelt powder under French in the Sudan in 1898, and, as all the world knows, they have campaigned together ever since. It is not generally known, however, that French owes his life to Haig. During the Boer War, on the day of Cronje's surrender, while French was fording a stream his horse frightened, reared, slipped and fell, throwing the general into the water. Haig, then a colonel, and French's assistant adjutant, rushed to the rescue. His horse, too, fell, but he managed to swim to the general's side and assisted him to the shore. The deep friendship between the two officers which dates from that day is reflected in the fervent official tributes of the elder to the younger man during the present war.—Rochester Times.

Russians Attack Bulgarian Coast

HUNGARY CALLS OUT HER MEN OF FIFTY-FIVE YEARS

Million More British Soldiers Are To Be Placed in the Field

Premier Asquith Moves Supplementary Estimate in the House of Commons---Withdrawal From Gallipoli Only Cost the British Twelve Men Wounded---Russian Fleet Escorting Transports Full of Troops Attacking the Bulgarian Black Sea Coast.

DYNAMITE FOUND UNDER SOLDIERS' QUARTERS

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons this afternoon, moved a supplementary estimate of a million additional men.

Replying to a query regarding the withdrawal of the British troops from the Suvla Bay and Anzac region of Gallipoli, Mr. Asquith stated that this move was made on the advice of both military and naval officers. Lord Kitchener and General Munroe both examined the situation carefully before advising the withdrawal, he said.

The casualties attending the withdrawal were exceptionally light, he said. Excepting six guns, which were destroyed, all the supplies were removed.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—An official statement declares that when the British withdrew from Suvla Bay, Gallipoli, the casualties were but three men wounded.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A Russian cruiser and two destroyers, escorting sixteen transports laden with troops, vigorously bombarded the Bulgarian port of Varna yesterday, according to an exchange telegraph despatch from Athens. It is thought this is Russia's expedition to the eastern coast of Bulgaria.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 21.—The 33rd Battalion signalling officer, writing to his parents from Quebec, states that on Saturday night last fifty-seven sticks of dynamite were found under the building in which he and his men are quartered. Two suspected German spies are under arrest.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—(French Official).—French artillery demolished a German post on Saint Leocade Plateau and dispersed moving bodies of German troops near Aboncourt and Blamont, in Lorraine. "In the Artois region the cannonade diminished during the night. The Germans exploded a mine north-west of Hill 140, doing no damage. We occupied a pit made by the explosion. From the Somme to the Aisne there were patrol fights. At Lihons an enemy patrol was driven off by our fire, leaving several wounded in our possession."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Dec. 21.—General Christian De Wet and 119 other Boers who rebelled shortly after the outbreak of the war, and were convicted of treason, have been released from prison on condition that they pay fines and promise not to enter politics during the remainder of the period for which they were sentenced. The Government dealt leniently with the rebels because of the pleas made by the loyal Boers who participated in the campaign against German South-West Africa.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 21.—General Russky has been relieved of the command of the Russian northern army defending Riga and the Dvinsk line. It was officially stated that "ill health" was the cause of his retirement. He will remain a member of the Russian War Council. General Russky commanded the Russian army that invaded Galicia and captured Lemberg early in the war.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 21.—The Hungarian Parliament to-day voted to extend the limit for obligatory military service to fifty-five years. Before the war the limit was forty-two years.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Sir Wm. Robertson, Chief of Staff in France, has been recalled to become Chief of the Imperial Staff, Asquith announced. "He succeeds Sir Arthur Murray, who is proceeding to an important command," the Premier stated.

It is the general belief that Sir A. J. Murray will leave for Egypt to take charge of the British defences there. Without giving the figures as to the total enlistments, the Premier praised Lord Derby's recruiting campaign. He declared that one of its chief results was to afford a "strenuous exhibition of patriotism." In moving the passage of the bill calling a million more to the colours, the Premier referred to the great loss in killed and wounded on both sides.

"At the end of sixteen months," he said, "we are fighting in various threatres of war with a force of about one and one-quarter millions. It is necessary that this force be augmented."

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The Prussian losses to date total 2,287,083, says Rotterdam despatches. The statistics of losses among the Saxon, Bavarian and Wurtemburg troops are not available.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The sinking of two more British steamers by German submarines was announced to-day. They are the Huntly, formerly the German steamer Ophelia, 1,153 tons, and the Belford, 3,216 tons. The crews of both vessels were saved.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 21.—Great significance is attached by the British military officers to recent activities among the Spanish forces. The whole Spanish army is being re-armed, and large numbers of Spanish recruits are constantly training. In some quarters it is thought Spain may be preparing to enter the war on the side of the Teutonic Allies for the purpose of retaking Gibraltar from the British and annexing Portugal to the Spanish kingdom.

LT. E. V. FREDERICK TELLS OF LIFE AT THE DARDANELLES

Peterboro' Medical Man is Enjoying Life Under Difficulties—Hospital Staff Has Moved into Huts For the Winter

EASTERN LIFE

Rev. Father Ferguson of Lindsay is in receipt of a letter from Lieut E. V. Frederick, formerly of the Medical Staff of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, but now attached to No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital at Gallipoli Peninsula. A portion of the letter is as follows:

October 27th, 1915.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to let you know I am well and enjoying life fairly well in spite of the conditions of strife and misery which surround us. I think I sent you a post card from France about July. I am now nearly 3,000 miles from there, by boat journey, but of course not so far in real distance.

We left England about Aug. 1, came via Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria, Egypt, up almost to the front. In fact now we seem almost the centre of interest. We can see islands on the Bulgarian coast, Mt. Athos in Greece, Imbros, Gallipoli and Asia Minor Coast and this island is the nearest to hospital base. I do not know what of our life would interest you most.

Lemnos is a Greek-Turkish Island with about 35,000 population, so we are surrounded by truly Eastern rural and village life. Outside the British and French all travel and transport is done on little jackasses. Pictures of life in Palestine 2,000 years ago are duplicated here now. The same type of wooden plow, oxen stone threshing floors, spinning wool by twisting a bobbin by hand, goats for milk, etc., are all the same. We have about 2,000 Egyptian labourers encamped near us and they and their life are also an interesting study. Also a large number of Turkish prisoners. All our hospitals were in tents but we are now in huts for winter. We have 15,000 beds here. One can admire no one more than the Sisters who work faithfully all day long in these unpleasant wards.

In our spare time we take long walks over the hills or through the Greek villages and buy nuts and figs or go riding on horse, of which we can fortunately obtain good ones. We have a Catholic chaplain with us Father Duncan McPherson, of Nova Scotia.

This would be a great life for you I have had a very interesting time since leaving Canada, May 10th. My itinerary has been as follows:

Montreal, May 10th; southwest coast England 16th; London 19th; London Torquay 28th; Salisbury and Salisbury Plains June 1st; Southampton, Le Havre, Rouen, Boulogne, Winnereaux, June 28th—July 2nd; Boulogne, Dover, Folkestone, Southampton, July 28—August 1st; Bay of Biscay, Coast of Spain, Gibraltar (at night) South Coast of Spain, north coast of Africa, Malto, Aug. 1st—8th; Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 10th—13th; Aegean Sea, Lemnos Aug. 16th; about 8,000 miles by sea and 1,500 by land. The interesting part of it is we have to get back. We sincerely hope England continues to hold the mastery of the sea. Otherwise?

Wishing we had you here with us, and trusting to see you sometime later. With kindest regards.

Appointment of Lt.-Col. Johnston Gladly Received By The 93rd

Enthusiastic Cheering When the News Was Received Yesterday and Another Demonstration When Commanding Officer Arrived This Morning---Christmas Leave Begins on Thursday---To-day's Military News.

That the appointment of Lt. Col. Johnston to the command of the 93rd Battalion, succeeding Lt.-Col. Mills, who becomes Inspector of Supplies and Transport for the 2nd Division, is a popular one with the men of the battalion, was very evident yesterday. The telegram from Major General Hughes was read after the orders yesterday afternoon, and when parade was dismissed the battalion gave three cheers and a tiger for Lt.-Col. Johnston in a volume that made the steel rafters vibrate. Lt.-Col. Johnston was absent from the city yesterday, and when he reached the armouries this morning there was another wild outburst of cheering as soon as his familiar figure was seen in the drill hall. When he came on parade the band of the Regiment struck into the strains of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

"I am glad to appear before you as commanding officer," remarked Lt.-Col. Johnston in a brief address to the officers and men of the 93rd, "and I ask the co-operation of everyone of you to assist in making the battalion a success. The citizens of the county have taken much interest in us, they expect a great deal of us, and every man should help. You will be given leave, fifty per cent. for Christmas and the other fifty per cent. for New Year's and I want you all to do your best to build up the battalion when you are on leave. In regard to the battalion I want to say that while discipline will be insisted upon, it will never be made oppressive. Any hardships you may have to endure will be unavoidable, and if they come I ask you to take them as soldiers."

Christmas leave for the men of the 93rd Battalion will commence on Thursday and half of the strength of the Battalion will get four days holidays then and the balance in New Year's week. In order to minimize the disorganization of the Band it is probable that the whole band will be given leave for Chrismas.

Some of the men of the 93rd evidently believe that the Government provides each Battalion with 75c per day for each man on the strength to provide rations—at least that is the impression gained from a letter received by the Examiner from a private in the Battalion who complains that the meals provided cost around 30c, rather than 75c. and insinuates that there must be "rake off" somewhere. This private is badly misinformed and very ignorant of how soldiers are fed. It is true that when the Government does not provide food and lodging it pays its soldiers 75c in place of them, but when the Militia Department undertakes to feed the men the Government naturally figures on being able to buy supplies in such quantities that the average cost per man per day will be much less that when an individual has to secure his own board. As a matter of fact the officers of a Battalion handle no money at all in regard to rations for the men. The government lays down a standard ration, uniform throughout Canada, and the Quartermaster of a Battalion, according to this standard requisitions his rations for his unit from the Army Service Corps. The Government makes its contracts with dealers and merchants, who deliver the supplies to the Army Service Corps and Supply officer and then they are turned over to the Quartermaster as drawn upon. There is no money involved at all, so far as the officers of the

A CHANCE TO PLAY SANTA CLAUS AT THE SHELTER

Nineteen Children Some of Whom Are Stricken With Measles Are Dependent on the Public For a Happy Christmas

WHO WILL ASSIST?

The citizens of Peterborough are reminded of the fact that there are nineteen little children in the Children's Aid Society Shelter who are depending on the public to see that Santa Claus does not miss them this year in his annual rounds. A visit from the genial old gentleman will be the more appreciated this year in view of the fact that at present there is an epidemic of measles among the little ones at the Shelter and they are therefore, prisoners. Toys, books, games, fruit, candies, sleighs, etc. will all be thankfully received. There are many such articles around the house, perhaps, of which your own children have grown tired. Have them sent to the Shelter or to the Examiner Office and help to make Christmas a happy period in the lives of the little waifs.

The question of rural credits will be considered by the committee, also the general development of agricultural resources.

Various financial, transportation and other problems will also be looked into.

INVESTIGATION RE THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Some Interesting Facts Brought Out at This Morning's Sittings—Secretary of the Board on the Stand.

REVIEW OF PROCEEDINGS

In the examination of Mr. G. H. Thompson, secretary of the Board of Education, in this morning's session of the investigation, Mr. O'Connell was reading a list of the companies carrying the insurance on the schools.

"I see the German-American company is on this list," Mr. O'Connell remarked.

"Surely not in that company," Judge Huycke interjected.

Mr. O'Connell — Apparently the Board of Education doesn't know the war is on.

Judge Huycke— I think that policy should be cancelled at once, and I am not joking.

Several of the lawyers stated that they had cancelled insurance with this company. His Honour repeated his opinion that the Board's policy with the German-American company should be cancelled at once.

When the investigation was continued this morning Mr. Alex. Weddell returned to the witness box. With the exception of the parties immediately concerned there was an audience of a mere handful of citizens.

What is the total amount of premiums paid by the school board to Mr. Hill? Mr. O'Connell stated the premiums $364.25.

Mr. Weddell stated that this amount had been paid since 1912. Previous to that year it was $300.55.

What is the amount of the insurance on school boilers?

$220, payable every three years. The first three years of this insurance have not ended yet.

Have you the applications for the insurance on the schools?

No. There were no applications.

There must have been applications in the first instance?

I don't remember having ever seen them.

Mr. Weddell stated that his company's fire insurance account was kept in the Royal Bank of which Mr. Eastwood is manager. Mr. Hill keeps the Sun Life account in the Dominion Bank, of which Mr. Crane is manager.

Mr. O'Connell—He is a school trustees, too?

Yes.

Mr. Weddell stated, regarding the securing of insurance on the school buildings, that Mr. Eastwood simply came to the office and directed that the regular schedule be made out.

What insurance companies, if any, is Mr. Hill a shareholder in?

Not any that I know of.

Is he a shareholder of the Anglo-American?

Yes.

Was there any of its insurance on the schools?

No.

Is he a shareholder in the Sun Life?

Yes.

Do you send out circulars soliciting insurance?

Yes.

What is the purport of them?

They set forth the advantages of life insurance.

Did you circularize the teachers?

Not particularly.

Mr. Weddell said that some of them might be included in the list.

The company also sent copies of the monthly booklet, "Sunshine." Mr. O'Connell requested that a list of those receiving it be submitted.

To Mr. Hall, Mr. Weddell explained the difference between tariff and non-tariff companies. The former were members of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, the non-tariffs were not. The tariff companies were regarded as the stronger. Experience had shown that some non-tariff companies had failed when the tariff com-

THE PEACE SHIP FARCE.

Everybody that knows enough to come in out of the rain knew that the Ford peace ship, Oscar II, was setting out on a fool's errand when it sailed. So far it has struck nothing but rocks; and now it has even missed the chief aim perhaps, the self advertising of its deluded crew. They must think there's something rotten in the State of Denmark, when the Copenhagen authorities refuse to permit the feeble-minded peace pilgrims to hold public meetings. That is what the prophetic Bryan foresaw when he refused to sail in the phantom peace ship — he couldn't get a chance to spout.

EXCUSING CRIME.

The Montreal Gazette describes as "optimism" the springs of Sir Richard McBride's course of extravagance and reckless exploitation of the resources of his province, which has wrecked his public career and shaken the foundations of British Columbia's material resources and well being. It is really considerate to dismiss political grand larceny by super-considerate euphemism. It would be just as reasonable to use "optimism" to excuse the crime of a criminal—the optimism that inspires the hope that this crime will not find him out. The excuses that partisan journals find for partisan offenders are one of the causes of the riot of wrong doing that disgraces the public life of Canada— toning down stealing, peculation and wicked extravagance with buttered phraseology — approving for the party's sake of wrong-doing by faint condemnation.

THE KAISER AND CANALS.

The Kaiser won't have, if he can help it, competition in canals. He has found the Kiel Canal so well worth while as an asylum for his inert navy that he conspires to destroy the Welland Canal, the greatest canal in the world, except the Panama Canal —on a sliding scale. This is quite the German plan to take—destruction for destruction's sake and with no prospect of military advantage. If the Welland Canal were blown to smithereens, its destruction would not give Germany a gain of an inch on any of its battle fronts. It would only do Germany harm. It would make Canadians set their teeth closer and fill up the ranks more rapidly. The desperate means adopted by Germany to advance its fortunes is only an illustration of the truth of the saying that desperate diseases demand desperate remedies. And Germany has been in a state of desperation ever since the battle of the Marne. The Kaiser saw his finish then; for decisive obstruction to his triumphal march to Paris and London knocked the keystone out of the arch—the failure of his plan of world conquest. He has been fighting since because he was not allowed to stop fighting. He won't be allowed to quit fighting till he can't fight any more, and the Kiel Canal becomes the "last ditch."

THE CHRISTMASLESS KAISER.

The German Kaiser is not going to hang up his stocking this Christmas and, as is quite consistent with the cult of cruelty and frightfulness he affects and effects, he is not going to allow any of his subjects to observe the Christmas season in the traditional way. This again is quite consistent with the spirit and work of militarism. He has destroyed the peace and good will towards men, that was heralded by the first Christmas, and, so far as he has been able to do, he has restored the reign of the sword. He has set back the clock of civilization, founded upon Christianity, the space of a millenium. He is a bad man; and has set God and man against him and his works. We all long for peace, but we can see no peace; can consent to no peace so long as the arch destroyer of peace remains unrepentant, in the mind that has possessed him and still evidently possesses him. He must be destroyed. The power he wields for world evil must be broken. Till this is done it is folly to talk of peace. Whether the Kaiser and his gang want to keep Christmas or not, we shall not neglect it. We shall follow the injunction of Scott:

Heap on the wood the wind is chill
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.

We strive to do business as usual; to keep the machinery of normal life moving; and we shall keep Christmas as usual. We can do so consistently

We are making war to bring the peace of Christmas and Christianity With all this war we have our lives to live. We are sure of the future. This war is but a rude incident in the life of the world, and cannot be allowed to entirely interrupt the benign processes of civilization, nor turn away our eyes from the Star in the East Let the Kaiser shroud himself in gloom. He should do so, in sackcloth and ashes, too; for he has denied the Christ and His works worse than St. Peter did round the fire of coals for he is unrepentant. Let him sulk. As for us, we shall keep our Christmas merry still, and the while keep an eye on him. We haven't got him yet; but his time is coming as surely as our victory is coming. At this Christmas tide, of all others, we cannot lose faith in what it means. We cannot deny our faith in the ultimate triumph of right.

Work of Red Cross Hospital Train

The Red Cross hospital train has played a great part in France in lessening the discomforts of the wounded. Thanks to this means of transportation, the wounded have been transferred to base hospitals with a minimum of suffering.

The following is an interesting description of one of these trains which has appeared in an English publication. In this connection it is of interest to remember that one of these palatial trains was equipped by the Canadian Red Cross at the outbreak of the war and is now on active service.

The first coach of the train is the office of the Quartermaster-Sergeant then come the hospital coaches which are like hospital wards, with clean bed linen and the small comforts of a well organized institution. The beds are supported on brackets in three tiers, and those brackets are so constructed that the bed can be taken out and carried out of the car so that the unloading of the patient from his stretcher is rendered an easy process. And how great a matter that is can be realised if it is remembered that terribly shattered bones and deep wounds have only too often to be dealt with. The beds can be turned into couches, when the cases are not serious ones. The ward cars have both gas and electric light, and the light can be lowered so that those desiring to sleep are not inconvenienced.

After the ward coaches come coaches for nurses and orderlies and a kitchen coach that might well awaken the envy of a housewife. Everything that the heart of a cook could desire is here in its right place, easy of access, made to the very shape that seems most useful and satisfactory

The sleeping quarters of the medical and nursing staff are in the next coach, and these are curtained off from the passage, which, of course, runs the whole length of the train Here, too, are dining rooms, the seats of which can actually be converted into beds. There is also a fully equipped surgery and dispensary. Other coaches contain beds for 36 more patients, more orderlies, a kit store, and a second kitchen, and coaches for 50 sitting-up patients.

Every train carries a dispenser, who has a completely equipped dispensary. This, perhaps, is one of the most remarkable features of the trains.

The train has in all, 14 coaches. It has a most ample supply of hot water; (each kitchen has 90 gallons of cold and 60 gallons of hot water; each hospital coach has 50 gallons of cold and 6 gallons of drinking water in separate tank). The train is steam-heated and has extra slow-combustion stoves. It is painted a light grey colour outside and white inside, and so is exceedingly clean.

The Princess Christian train was collected for by its donor and was then handed over to the War Office. Then the flour millers of the United Kingdom, who had raised a large sum of money for the Red Cross work decided to devote about £24,000 to provide two complete hospital trains for the Red Cross.

Leading The Trains.

The "front" for a hospital train means one or other of about a score of towns, mentioned as "Railhead," situated behind the firing line, within sound of the guns where casualty clearing stations have been erected for the purpose of concentrating the wounded brought off the field.

When the train reaches the railhead the ambulance convoys come to it with their freight of wounded men This is an impressive moment. Instantly the train becomes the scene of great activity, an activity ordered and controlled. The officer commanding sorts out patients, filling some coaches with stretcher cases, others with sitting cases. Orderlies are busy along the side of the line. Some are carrying stretchers, others helping men to walk, and others carrying men pick-a-back fashion. Doctors and sisters in the wards are directing the placing of patients. Every one is busy. Then the work ends, the cars disappear, and the journey to the base is begun.

CHOOSING THE PATH OF FIRE INSTEAD OF PRIMROSE PATH

War has strengthened the bonds of Empire.

"Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas—Yet still the blood is strong."

In the remotest corners of Empire men have heard and responded to the call to arms. The enemy seized upon a pretext for war at a time when he fondly hoped to find Britain torn by internal divisions and the British Dominions averse to the sacrifices of a great European conflagration. But the lion and her whelps stand together across the path of the Russian. They share the dangers, the sacrifices, and the triumphs of a fight to the death against the despoiler of Belgium. The path of duty and of glory is a path of fire from which the Imperial legions of Britain do not shrink.

No nobler call to Canadians has been sounded than that of the Chief of the Mohawks last week in the Council chamber of the Six Nations at the Indian reserve near Brantford. Some dissatisfaction had been expressed by a Chief present at the restrictions imposed upon Indians in the exercise of their fishing and shooting rights under the treaty with the palefaces. It was a tense moment when the Chief of the Mohawks rose to urge the duty of responding to the call of the King for men—and yet more men. In quiet tones he recalled his own sacrifices. His eldest lad, working on the farm, hitched his horses to the fence one day and followed the recruiting sergeant. Later he sailed with the First Canadian Contingent. That year the area under crops on the farm had to be cut down. Then a second son and later a third boy joined the King's colors, and the Chief and his squaw were left alone to till the land, restricting further the acreage under crops. It was a simple story of duty and sacrifice simply told, and it carried its own message. Drawing himself up proudly, the Chief reminded his hearers of an old Indian legend. An Iroquois who had been captured by an enemy tribe was given two alternatives: to seek freedom by passing through a path of fire which his captors had made or remain behind with the women and children. That Iroquois prisoner never hesitated—he preferred the path of fire, with the honor and freedom it held out, to the ignominy and disgrace of remaining with the women. Seizing the psychological moment, the Chief of the Mohawks gave the war-cry of his tribe and sat down.

It was a thrilling moment for the palefaces who were privileged to witness the scene. That war-cry of the Mohawk Chief was the answering challenge to German tyranny of one who had tasted of British freedom. It was a call to every Canadian eligible for military service. For every man capable of serving King and country at the front the choice now comes—the path of fire, which is the path of honor, or——!

"Not once or twice in our rough Island story
The path of duty was the way to glory."

TO-DAY!

St. Thomas' Day The Shortest Day

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

The twenty-first day of December is notable for two things. One because it is the shortest day in the year, as on the following day the sun enters the sign of the Zodiac, Capricornus, or the Goat — symbolical of its upward climb for the ensuing six months. The other reason why the day is noted is because it is known as St. Thomas' Day.

SAINT THOMAS THE APOSTLE AND MARTYR.

Little is recorded of the sayings, doings or life of this apostle, but, thanks to St. John, his personality is some degree is clearer than that of many others of the twelve.

A TWIN.

The name Thomas is Syriac, and signifies a twin, while his other name, Didymus, is a Greek word also signifying a twin. He was also known as Judas, and is the one mentioned by St. John (chap. xiv., v. 22) as "Judas not Iscariot."

HIS PERSONALITY.

Thomas appears to have been full of personal devotion, ready to die for his Master, yet slow to grasp the true significance of His personality. It is within the knowledge of all how he failed to grasp the true significance—in fact was incredulous of the resurrection until he was convinced of its truth, as well as of the Divinity of his risen Lord, by direct evidence.

A MAGNIFICENT HYMN.

There is a magnificent hymn translated from the Latin of the 17th century by the late Dr. J. Mason Neale, set to a splendid French melody of equal date. This hymn which is known as the "O Filii et Filiae" (O dicns and Daughters) is to be found in the Hymn Book of the Church of England in Canada, No. 186. It is a splendid production, yet strange to say, although the writer has spent six Eastern in Canada he has never once heard this composition—beautiful, both to words and music—sung by any church choir, yet he lives in hope. In England it is most popular.

There are three stanzas peculiarly suitable to the subject of this article:

"(5) When Thomas first the tidings heard,
How they had seen the Risen Lord,
He doubted the disciples' word."

(6) "My sorrowed side, O Thomas, see,
My hands, My feet, I show to thee;
Nor faithless, but believing be."

(7) "No longer Thomas then denied,
He saw the feet, the hands, the side;
'Thou art my Lord and God,' he cried.

And the next stanza is full of truth:

(8) "How blest are they who have not seen
And yet whose faith hath constant been,
For they eternal life shall win."

The words in the Canadian book are slightly altered from Dr. Neale's translation, which is to be found intact in "Hymns Ancient and Modern."

ST. THOMAS CHRISTIANIZED INDIA.

At the division of the Apostles, India fell to the lot of Thomas, who at first declared his inability to go. Then, according to an old legend, his Master, Jesus, appeared in a supernatural way to Abban, the envoy of Gundafor, an Indian king, and said Thomas to him to be his slave and to serve as a carpenter. Abban and Thomas sailed away until they came to Andropolis, where it appears they landed, and attended the marriage feast of the ruler's daughter. Arriving in India, Thomas undertook to build a palace for Gundafor but instead he spent the money entrusted to him on the poor. For this breach of trust he was imprisoned by Gundafor, but Thomas escaped in a mirraculous manner and eventually succeeded in converting Gundafor.

Thomas met with many strange adventures, while going about the country to preach, from dragons and wild asses. At length he came to the city of King Mazdai, where he converted the queen and her son.

HIS MARTYRDOM.

St. Thomas met a martyr's death. But whether it was in King Mazdai's city is uncertain. One account says that he there condemned to death for having converted Mazdai's wife and son. He was led out of the city to a hill and pierced through with spears by four soldiers. "Yea a sword shall go through thine own soul also," was one of the Master's prophecies.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

On the other hand, tradition widely spread, and it was a long agreeted belief, that St. Thomas pushed his missionary journeys as far south as Mylapore, only a few miles from Madras, where he was martyred.

IN SUPPORT OF THIS THEORY

There is still to be seen there a granite bas-relief cross with an ancient Persian inscription dating from the 7th century, and local tradition here is very strong to the effect that St. Thomas here laid down his life. Anyway, the term "Christians of St. Thomas," is often applied to members of the ancient Christian churches of Southern India, which claim him as their first founder.

HIS BURIAL

It is said that he was buried at Meliapoor in the province of Malabar, in a church which he had been instrumental in erecting in that city. On the authority of Marco Polo, a traveller of the 13th century, we learn that "In that province of Malabar is the body of the glorious martyr, St. Thomas the Apostle, who there suffered martyrdom. It rests in a small city, not frequented by many merchants, but a vast number of Christians, from devotional motives, resort thither. Those who perform the pilgrimage collect earth, which is of a red colour, from the spot where he was slain, and reverently carry it away with them, often employing it afterwards in miracles and giving it in water to the sick, by which many diseases are cured. A variety of miracles are daily performed at the tomb of St. Thomas through the interposition of the blessed Apostle."

THE JUDGMENT OF ST. THOMAS.

Sir John Mandeville, in his travels describes the same country as "a great kingdom containing many fair cities and towns. In that kingdom lies the body of St. Thomas the Apostle, in flesh and bone, in a fair tomb. * * * The arm and hand which he put into our Lord's side, when He appeared to him after His resurrection, yet be in a vessel outside the tomb. By that hand they make all their judgments. For when there is any dissension between two parties, and each of them maintains his own cause, both parties write their causes on two bills, and put them in the hand of St. Thomas; and, anon, the hand casts away the bill of the wrong cause, and holds still the bill with the right cause; and therefore men come from far countries to have judgments of doubtful causes."

AN ANCIENT ILLUMINATION

In the Bibliotheque Imperiale of Paris, is an illumination in an ancient manuscript, depicting the judgment of St. Thomas. It represents the Saint's hand projecting from the tomb, at each end of which is a suitor. The unfortunate one is regarding askance his bill which is thrown back at him, while the lucky suitor is congratulating himself that St. Thomas' hand firmly holds his bill.

There are many

CURIOUS AND PECULIAR

customs carried out in England on St. Thomas' day. From "Notes and Queries" we find that in Staffordshire representatives of every poor family make their rounds in quest of alms. Here in Peterborough, by the way, the King's Daughters are making their distribution this year on this day. There is also the begging for apples. In Worcestershire—a cyder county — accompanied by an ancient chant, on the termination of which tankards of spiced ale and money doles are distributed. There is also the carrying of the

"ADVENT IMAGES,"

—two dolls, dressed, the one to represent the Saviour, and the other the Virgin Mary — accompanied by "the curious, quaint, ancient carol, "The Seven Joys," which however is too long to reproduce here.

The 'vessel-cup,' a corruption of 'wassail-cup,' was presented, when it was of course filled with a delicious concoction, and handed to the image bearers. The expression 'as unhappy as a man who has seen no advent images,' was formerly proverbial in Yorkshire.

"A DOUBTING THOMAS."

The extreme caution of this Saint has become a byeword and there are some parts where an incredulous person, hard to convince, is upbraided as being a "doubting Thomas."

A SUPERSTITIOUS PRACTICE.

St. Thomas is not left alone by maidens who wish to forecast their matrimonial chances. It has been said that a girl who cannot forecast her matrimonial fortunes, at least once a year, is scarcely worthy of a lover at all.

Now, let the curious young lady, and, I dare bet, there are plenty of them in this city, peel a St. Thomas onion, wrap it up in her handkerchief and place it under her pillow. So far so good, but the spell will be useless, unless she recites the following incantation:

"Good St. Thomas, do me right,
And let my true love come to-night;
That I may see him in the face,
And him in my kind arms embrace."

I do not know what particular type of onion is the 'St Thomas' onion. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," says the bard of Avon. Probably, any other sort of onion would smell as strong and be just as efficacious. What is in a name?

THE CULT OF ST. THOMAS

does not appear to have been largely popular. There appear to have been but comparatively few churches dedicated to this Saint.

IN ART

St. Thomas is usually represented as holding a carpenter's or mason's square and he is regarded as the patron saint of architects and builders.

THE HALCYON DAYS

The seven days preceding, and the seven days following, this 21st of December were called 'Halcyon Days' by the ancients. This phrase is expressive of a period of tranquility and happiness. It is derived from a fable that during this period, while the halcyon or king fisher was breeding, the sea was always calm, and might be navigated in perfect security. By a poetic picture the bird is supposed to hatch her eggs on a floating nest, in the midst of the waters.

Dryden, the famous poet, thus alludes to the story:

"Amidst our arms as quiet you shall be,
As halcyon brooding on a winter sea."

RIFLES HAVE BEEN RETURNED

Ald. McIntyre Commandeers the Twenty Rifles supplied to the Peterboro Home Guard

Fifteen of the twenty cadet rifles supplied by the city to the Home Guard have been returned to the City Hall, where they will remain until disposed of. The other five will follow at an early date. It fell to the lot of Ald. McIntyre as chairman of the Property committee, to recover them. He found that five were in need of repair, so he refused to accept them. The matter was brought up at last night's meeting of the Property committee. Mayor Buller suggested that the City Council, the Utilities Commission, and other civic bodies form a corps and make use of the rifles. The Mayor named Alderman Langford and Duffus as drill instructors. Ald. McIntyre reminded the Mayor that the two men named might be absent from the Council next year. Their fate will soon be in the hands of the electors.

"The police force might use them," was another suggestion of Mayor Buller.

In the meantime the weapons will be kept in the city hall, making that institution one of the few fortified public buildings in the city. In case of an emergency the aldermen could be called out armed and equipped.

"THE NEMESIS OF THE KAISER"

Subject of Thrilling Lecture by Mr. Jos. Wearing M. A. at Sidney

The following appears in this week's Canadian Baptist: "On Monday night a thrilling lecture was given at Sidney before an audience that filled the church, by Mr. Joseph Wearing, M. A., of Peterborough. His subject was "The Nemesis of the Kaiser." He compared the Emperor of Germany to Attela, Machiavelli, Herod, and Judas. His presentation was searching and thorough and informing, and his conclusion was a masterpiece of invective and fiery scorn of the Kaiser and his 'kultur,' ending with a splendid and sustained appeal for self sacrifice on the part of every Canadain Christian."

TEACHERS BARED PERSONAL INSURANCE AFFAIRS IN BOARD OF EDUCATION INVESTIGATION

Collegiate and Public School Teachers Were Examined as to the Insurance They Held and in What Companies.

With the obvious object of discovering the amount of insurance, life, accident and fire, carried by teachers of the Public Schools and Collegiate Institute of this city in companies represented by Hill, Weddell and Company, and also of finding out the extent of the activities of agents of this local company in canvassing the teachers, for insurance, Mr. Daniel O'Connell, counsel for Mr. G. N. Gordon, examined quite a number of them yesterday afternoon in the School Board investigation now progressing.

Apparently Good "Prospects."

Two facts were incidentally apparent. In the first place it was evident that school teachers, as a class, carry considerably more than the average amount of life insurance, and equally manifest was the fact that, as a group, they were exceptionally intelligent witnesses. Probably both these conditions were nothing more than what might have been expected. In the latter regard, however, they offered no demur to what doubtless appealed to them as an impertinent enquiry into their private affairs, but on the contrary freely and graciously replied to the questions submitted.

Former Teachers as Agents.

Before the teachers were called the examination of Mr. Alex. Weddell, of Hill, Weddell and Company, was continued. He stated that they employed four agents. Mr. D. H. Moore devotes his time solely to life insurance, and Messrs. Geo. Elliott, J. D. Cameron and Fred Dover, rustle for life, fire and accident insurance. Wm. Thompson had been an agent, and had engaged as his sub-agent Mr. J. J. Jeffries, teacher of modern languages on the Collegiate Institute staff for a number of years. In the years 1904 and 1905 Mr. Jeffries had written policies for the Sun Life Company on C. H. Devereux, Wm. Lockhart, M. J. Hutchinson, and Percy S. Reid, none of whom were teachers, however. About the same time Mr. James A. Fife, also of the Collegiate Institute staff, was a sub-agent of Thompson's and had issued Sun Life policies to W. R. Drummond of Keene, and F. O. Orr, student, Peterborough.

Mr. Weddell stated that he had been served on Friday and had been unable to make a complete search of the work of these two teacher-insurance sub-agents.

Asked by Judge Huycke if Mr. Moore and the other three agents had sub-agents, Mr. Weddell said he did not know, but they might have.

He also stated to Mr. O'Connell that Mr. W. F. Matchett had resigned the principalship of the Ashburnham School and had entered upon a contract as agent with Mr. Hill. In his school connection he did not come under the Board of Education, since the Ashburnham School was not under its jurisdiction.

Mr. Weddell was permitted to retire at this stage to continue his examination of the company's books for any other policies turned in by Mr. Jeffries and Mr. Fife, and for other insurance statements requested by Mr. O'Connell earlier in the proceedings.

Examination of Teachers.

The school teachers arriving then after four o'clock were heard as follows:

Miss Edna M. Henry — Of the South Central School, said she had taken out a life insurance policy for $1,000 in April, 1913, from Mr. D. H. Moore of the Sun Life Co. She had wished to insure her life and had sent for Mr. Moore who had not previously canvassed her.

R. F. Downey—Principal of the Central School, stated that when he purchased Mr. Tovey's house he took over a fire insurance policy for $1,800 in the Northern Insurance Co. This his solicitors, Bennett and Goodwill, had arranged. Hill, Weddell and Co. are the agents for the Northern Insurance Co. He transferred the insurance on his furniture from the Davis, Thompson Co. in order to have all his insurance in one office.

Mr. Downey said he had not canvassed for insurance. He had given Mr. D. H. Moore the name of one person as a prospect, but he was not a school teacher. He knew Mr. Moore was in the employ of Mr. Hill.

Shortly after coming to Peterborough Mr. Moore had canvassed him for life insurance, Mr. Downey said, but he did not take out a policy.

Mr. F. E. Kerr—Assistant principal of the Central School, said he had lived next to Mr. Weddell, and after five years' residence in Peterborough he told Mr. Weddell that if he would send over a man he would take out some insurance as he wanted it.

Mr. J. J. Jeffries had approached him in 1908 in the interest of the Sun Life Co. Witness said he carried $2,000 insurance in the Sun Life Co. purchased from Mr. Moore.

Mr. L. J. Colling—Principal of the South Central School, produced two life policies in the Mutual and one in the Equity. He had $2,400 fire insurance in one of the companies of which Mr. Hill is agent. Witness said Mr. D. H. Moore had canvassed him for life insurance, but he had already $5,000 on his life. When he took out the fire insurance he knew Mr. Hill was a member of the Board.

Alfred F. S. Gilbert—Teacher at the South Central, said he had held the position four months. He had been canvassed for life insurance by Mr. Wally Armstrong of the Sun Life Co.

Miss Espelin—Said she had $500 in the London Fire Insurance Co. No one canvassed her for this policy.

To Mr. Hall she said she had gone to Mr. Hill's office and taken out the insurance without any solicitation.

J. I. Roszel—Of the King Edward School, said he had been teaching here 7 1-2 years. He had $2,000 on his house in the London, Liverpool and Globe Co., of which Mr. W. H. Hill is agent, issued Dec. 10, 1914; Mr. Elliott canvassed him for this. He also had $1,000 in the Sun Life, taken out on July 4, 1910, through Mr. D. H. Moore.

Mr. S. J. Stubbs—On the Collegiate staff since 1907, said he had life, accident, and fire insurance. Judge Huycke asked him if he had any marine. He produced a $2,000 Accident Policy in the Fidelity Co., which he secured from Mr. Geo. Elliott. He had been approached by Mr. D. H Moore for life insurance; also by Mr. E. J. Kidd, when the latter was employed by Mr. Hill. He produced $2,800 fire insurance in the Davis, Thompson Co.

L. J. Pettit—On the Collegiate staff since September, 1908, showed two fire insurance policies, aggregating $1,600 on his furniture, purchased from Mr. Geo. Elliott of Mr. Hill's Office, representing the Mercantile Co. He also had $1,800 on his house, through Davis-Thompson Co. He had not been canvassed for these policies Mr. D. H. Moore had approached him once for life insurance.

A. D. Hone of the Collegiate, said he had been on the staff about 1 1-2 years. He had taken $1,000 fire insurance from one of Mr. Hill's companies through Mr. Elliott.

John F. Harvey—Teacher at the Collegiate Institute since 1907, said he carried $800 on his household effects in one of the companies represented by Mr. Hill. He also has $3000 in the Sun Life Co., but had not secured it through the Hill, Weddell Co.

F. J. Morris—Of the Collegiate staff took out $2,800 on his house in July 1914, through J. D. Cameron of the Hill, Weddell & Co.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner—Principal of the Collegiate Institute, drew three insurance policies from his pocket as soon as he was sworn, thereby anticipating Mr. O'Connell's usual inquiry in that direction.

"You evidently know what I am after?" Mr. O'Connell remarked with a laugh that was caught up by the gallery. One of the policies was for $2,000 in the Sun Life Co., secured through the late Barton Earle, a former agent in Mr. Hill's employ; another was for $800 fire insurance, purchased through Mr. Cameron of the local Sun Life Office. Mr. Kenner stated that Mr. Elliott and Mr. Moore had talked life insurance to him on several occasions.

Mr. C. Fessenden—Of the Collegiate Institute, father of John and Vivian Fessenden, soldiers both of them, presented a Sun Life policy effected through the late Barton Earle and $1,200 fire insurance in one of Mr. Hill's companies.

Mr. A. Mowat—Public School Inspector, said he had $1,000 insurance on furniture and an accident policy for $1,500 in companies Mr. Hill represents. Mr. Moore had canvassed him for life insurance once or twice.

Mr. F. J. Voaden—Of Queen Mary School, said he had not been approached by Mr. Hill's agents. "Well you've been an exceptionally fortunate man to have escaped so many insurance agents," remarked Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. Voaden had taken $800 fire insurance on his furniture and $2,400 on his dwelling through Mr. Weddell of Hill, Weddell & Co. Mr. Voaden pointed out to Mr. Hall that the insurance was on the house when he bought it from Mr. Ira D. Moore. But Mr. Voaden had not been approached by one life insurance agent during his residence in Peterborough.

W. J. Stacey—Said he had been canvassed twice by Mr. D. H. Moore.

Miss Sarah McBride and Miss Mary I. Williams of the Collegiate staff, held no insurance through Mr Hill's office, nor had they been canvassed.

Receives An Important Promotion

Sub. Lieut. Les. Stevens of the Canadian Flying Squadron, to be a Night Flyer on Zeppelin Defence

Sub. Lieut. Leslie Stevens, of the Canadian flying squadron, and son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Stevens, 631 George street, has received an important promotion. Recently he has been appointed a night flyer, which is a striking tribute to his ability as an aviator. He is the only member of the Canadian Aviation School who has received such an honour. Night flying demands a thorough understanding of aviation, only the most competent aviators being chosen for this perilous work. Sub-Lieut. Stevens is on Zeppelin defence and is stationed at Chingford.

Mr. Stevens received a note from his son yesterday, which was written while on a flying expedition over a lake, thus evidencing the absolute control he had over his machine. When he began writing he was 4,200 feet in the air. Twenty minutes later he was 8,500 feet above the clouds. He said the clouds below looked like snow mountains.

HAVE BEEN CUTTING DOWN SHADE TREES

Some boys, during the past few days, have been cutting down evergreen trees along the country roads in order to have Christmas trees. This practice must be discontinued or else prosecutions will be instigated by the authorities.

City Disposes of the Ashes

Mr. George Doig Was the Successful Tenderer By a Margin of One Hundred Dollars

At last night's meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council Mr. George Doig was the successful tenderer for the ashes offered for sale by the city. Three tenders were submitted, as follows:

George Doig $240
H. F. Doig $140
M. Stevens $115

It pays to advertise, commented Ald. Green, following the adoption of Ald. Duffus's resolution accepting the tender of George Doig. For years the city has practically thrown the ashes away, with some exceptions where they were utilized as material for filling.

Ald. McIntyre's committee was so pleased with the prospect of selling the ashes that some of the members were of the opinion that the junk might be disposed of in the same manner.

A motion recommending that similar action be taken in connection with the junk, was voted down. Those who opposed it were of the opinion that it would be unwise for the city to sanction the collection of rags bones and other refuse which might spread disease. In other cities it was customary to burn it.

Ald. Green moved, in amendment, that the Committee advertise for tenders for the sale of junk and that the refuse gathered be disinfected. The amendment was defeated.

Almost Complete Absence of Contagious Diseases in North Monaghan

Annual Report of Dr. T. N. Greer, M. O. H. For the Township—Two Cases of Diphtheria All That Was Reported During the Year.

In his annual report to the Board of Health of North Monaghan, Dr. T. N. Greer, M.O.H., for the Township reports an almost complete absence of contagious disease—two cases of diphtheria being all that were reported. He commends the hearty co-operation of the public in the work.

The report is as follows:

In submitting my report for 1915, it is gratifying to note the very satisfactory state of health conditions during the year. There was almost complete absence of contagious disease—two cases of diphtheria being all that were reported. This happy state of affairs is largely attributable to rigid enforcement of sanitary regulations regarding the disposal of garbage and other refuse. In this regard, I am glad to commend the hearty co-operation of the public in the work of your officers.

In previous reports, I have referred to difficulties we have to contend with owing to the absence of sewers and I would strongly urge that an effort be made to secure from the city of Peterborough the privilege of connecting with their out-fall sewer where such is possible.

The close proximity to the city of the somewhat thickly populated suburban districts, makes it a very important matter to the city that all possible measures should be adopted to prevent the occurrence of contagious diseases in these districts and every connection where possible [illegible] first steps in this direction. I feel sure that the city will recognise the wisdom of granting this privilege to any of the residents of the township to whom it would be available.

Another matter that should engage the attention of the health authorities is some measure of inspection of school children. For the present, I would advise regular inspection at May's School at least, either by the medical officer of health or a trained nurse, so that the spread of contagious disease may be prevented by early recognition and prompt localization of cases.

There have been few violations of the health regulations and any which occurred were promptly and amicably dealt with.

Respectfully submitted,
T. NEWTON GREER,
Medical Officer of Health.
North Monaghan.

A POPULAR APPOINTMENT

Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, whose permanent appointment as Commanding Officer of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, was announced yesterday, has a military experience extending over thirty-seven years. In 1878 he got his first instructions in the rudiments of a soldier's life when he joined the Springville Company of the 45th Battalion as a private. From then on he has made his way up through the various stages until now he is at the head of the Original Battalion representing the County in which he was born.

Lt.-Col. Johnston became a lieutenant in the 45th Infantry Regiment, in 1883, [illegible] to Captain. In 1891 he transferred from infantry to cavalry, joining the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons as a lieutenant. He became Captain two years after. In 1896 he attained his majority and became commanding officer of C (Peterborough) squadron of the Dragoons. In 1911 he was made a Staff Major and was promoted to second in command—a position he held until the outbreak of the present war. When Lt.-Col. Sutherland, the O.C. of the 3rd Dragoons, was appointed to overseas service, Lt.-Col. Johnston took the command of the Regiment and on Oct. 1st, 1914, was gazetted Lieutenant-Colonel.

During his long service as a soldier Lt.-Col. Johnston has never missed attending the annual training camp, and it speaks volumes for his ability to handle men that he always went into camp with his Company or Squadron at full strength. He offered his services at the time of the Egyptian war, and also for the South African campaign, but much to his regret was not given the opportunity of serving. From the commencement of the present war his services were also placed at the disposal of the Militia authorities, and it is a matter of great gratification to him that he has been placed in a position where he can strike a blow for the Empire. Lt.-Col Johnston has not been idle since the hostilities commenced, however, and did valiant service last winter in recruiting that splendid body of men—"B" Squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

Lt.-Col. Johnston's brother, Major W. D. Johnston of the 3rd Dragoons has been summoned to Kingston on military business, and his nephew, Lieut. T. D. Johnston, is now at the front with the Mounted Rifles.

Known and liked, not only in Peterborough County, but throughout the whole Midland district, Lt.-Col. Johnston makes a splendid head for the County Battalion. His services have been at the disposal of his fellow citizens in other than military ways and for fifteen years he was Deputy-Reeve and County Commissioner for Otonabee, being invariably elected by acclamation. In 1906 he attained the highest office in county municipal circles, that of Warden of the County of Peterborough, to which he was elected by acclamation.

LT.-COL. T. J. JOHNSTON
O. C. 93rd Peterboro' Battalion

Honest, straightforward, genial with a love in his heart for his fellow man, and a pride in the fact that his word is as good as his bond, Lt.-Col. "Tom" Johnston has earned the liking and respect of every officer, non-commissioned officer and man of the 93rd Battalion. The Examiner has found this current of affection and regard running strongly through all ranks; even the new recruits share it, and the militia authorities could have made no more popular appointment. His selection as successor to Lt.-Col. Mills, Major-General Hughes may be assured, meets with the approval of every man in khaki who will follow Lt.-Col. Johnston to the front.

His hundreds of friends in the district will unite in congratulating Lt.-Col. Johnston on his appointment and the 93rd Battalion on having such an officer at its head.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Herbert Asquith, wife of the Prime Minister, to-day won her suit to prevent the Globe from continuing to make alleged libelous attacks upon her. Justice Peterson granted a restraining injunction.

Mrs. Asquith brought the action against the Globe a few days ago, alleging that she was "the wife of a certain Cabinet Minister," whom the Globe accused of associating with German prisoner officers and called traitor. The restraining order issued to-day, however, is only temporary. The case will be heard later on its merits.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Henry Ford unlimbered his peace batteries again to-day. From far-off Christiania he fired $60,000 worth of cable messages to American press associations and newspapers. The messages contained 1,400 words from a speech made by Louis P. Lochner, Ford's secretary, protesting against President Wilson's preparedness programme. Lochner declared that efforts were being made to "jam through" the preparedness measures in Congress out of fear that the Ford peace mission will succeed. He suggested that instead of spending five hundred millions for armament, the United States give the money to the European belligerents to build up their homes.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 21.—Henry Ford, who insisted yesterday that his illness was only slight, was confined to his bed to-day, and it was believed possible that his sickness may be serious. In the meantime the operations of the peace pilgrims are practically suspended.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Discussing the progress of the war in the Commons this evening, Premier Asquith appeared very cheerful as to the eventual outcome.

"It may be," he said, "that at this or that moment circumstances or conditions seem to be turning against the Allies, but the fundamental fates are growing increasingly on our side. In things that count Britain and her Allies are making steady progress." Replying to a question, Premier Asquith said Sir Ian Hamilton, who was in command at the Dardanelles, had not been assigned to an important command, as rumoured in London to-day.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—In an interview with the United Press, cabled from Berlin and published here to-day, Count Stephen Tisza, who, next to Emperor Franz Josef, is probably the strongest man in the dual monarchy, declared there would be no quarrel between Austria-Hungary and the United States if "Washington keeps cool." He said that the Ancona incident would be settled, but only through a succession of negotiations.

panies stood up under crisis. A number of non-tariff companies went out as the result of the Cobalt fire, and similarly in Baltimore, Rochester and San Francisco.

School Insurance Readjusted.

Mr. Hall took up the readjustment of the school insurance in 1914. Mr. Weddell said that under the readjustment, which Mr. Hill did not enter into, a schedule was made out for the same amount as before, applying to the schools in general, the total amount of the policy being made up proportionately from the various schools. The readjustment was made by the Finance committee.

Has Mr. Hill ever been on that committee?

Not that I remember.

When did the Finance committee make its readjustment?

In June, 1914. Under the old plan the schools were individually and specifically insured to the total of $187,500.

Who has the say as to what companies, tariff or non-tariff the school insurance should be placed in?

I think the chairman.

Mr. Hall reading from the rules of the Board of Education quoted that the effecting of fire insurance was a duty of the Finance committee.

Question of Rendering Accounts.

Mr. Hall discussed the method of sending out accounts touched upon yesterday by Mr. O'Connell.

Who is the creditor against the School Board?

The insurance companies who hold the insurance on the schools.

When the policies are delivered is there any endorsement of the policies that shows who issued them?

They are countersigned by the agent and when sent in they are credited to the particular agent.

Judge Huycke asked Mr. Weddell if the method of sending accounts to the School Board was employed in sending to any other corporations.

The City of Peterborough and Nicholls Hospital trust receive accounts made out in the same way, Mr. Weddell answered.

Judge Huycke—Why?

It's just a matter of judgment in sending out accounts.

Do any other insurance companies follow this practice?

All insurance companies issue accounts in the name of the company and not in the name of the agent.

How Insurance is Held.

Mr. Weddell stated that the school insurance his company carried was $54,500 of the total $187,500 or a little less than 30 p.c.

To Mr. Hall he said that the Davis Thompson Co. had between $70,000 and $75,000 of the school insurance.

They have more than you?

Yes.

What per cent. of the whole insurance have they?

About 40 p.c.

Mr. Weddell stated that the remainder of the insurance was carried by companies represented by parties in this city.

Is any member of the Davis Thompson Co. a member of the School Board?

Not that I know of.

Mr Weddell said he was not positive whether the late A. L. Davis had been on the Board or not. At any rate not in the past fifteen years.

It is not necessary to be on the School Board to get a major part of its insurance?

That's quite evident.

Amount of Commissions.

You said your fire insurance on the schools returned a premium of $354.25. What is your commission on that?

Twenty per cent.

That makes $70.80? Or about $24 a year?

Yes.

Mr. Weddell detailed to Mr. Hall the amount of work necessitated by the insurance companies, for which between $23 and $24 was the annual compensation.

You told my learned friend that previous to 1912 your premiums totalled $303.50? What was your commission then?

15 p.c.

So that your commission on the insurance pervious to 1912 was $45 for three years or $15 a year?

Yes.

Mr. Weddell stated that the accident insurance on school boilers returned a premium of $220, the commission from which amounted to $33.

In discussing one point Mr. Weddell gave the information that the Sun Life Co. owns two-thirds of the local office fixtures and Hill, Weddell & Company own the remaining one-third.

To Mr. Hall, Mr. Weddell stated that there were between 70 and 80 teachers in the city, five of whom were insured in the Sun Life. Two of the five were insured by the late Barton Earle years ago.

J. D. Cameron, he said, was an agent directly connected with the head office and paid a salary by the head office. He is responsible to the company or to the local manager. If his commissions exceed his salary he receives the surplus commissions. The same applies to D. H. Moore.

Of the $54,500 school insurance with Hill, Weddell & Co., $10,000 represented insurance obtained by Mr. Cluxton and $5,000 or $10,000 obtained by Mr. McBain. This $15,000 or $20,000 insurance was taken over when Mr. Hill secured the agency from Mr. McBain. In addition to this there was $13,000 insurance taken out by Langford and Sheehy and W. J. Johnston as contractor of the Queen Mary and King George schools. This made a total of about $30,000, leaving $24,000 of the $54,000 obtained directly by Hill, Weddell & Co. or their agents.

Insurance Continued.

Re-examined by Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Weddell said that Sheehy and Langford and Mr. Johnston obtained their contracts from the Board of Education.

Mr. Hill was on the Board at that time?

Yes.

And to him went for their insurance?

Yes.

You say there are about 60 insurance companies represented in this city?

Yes.

How many are represented by your company?

About 25 or 30.

How many by Davis, Thompson Co?

About as many as we have.

(Mr. O'Connell—There are not many left for anyone else.

What company does Mr. Crane represent?

The Phoenix of London.

And you also represent that company?

Yes.

Mr. Crane is also a school trustee?

Yes.

Mr O'Connell presented an account with cheque in payment endorsed by John Crane agent who carried a $5,000 policy on school buildings.

Yours and the Davis, Thompson Co. are considered the most prominent agencies in the city?

I think so.

Division of Insurance.

Mr. O'Connell read the following statement of how the school insurance is divided—Hill, Weddell & Co., $54,500; John Crane, $10,000; Davis Thompson Co., $74,000; Wm. Might, $10,500; T. E. Bradburn, $13,500; R. J. Kidd, $15,000; H. P. Lindsay, $5,000; Gordon Hall, $5,000.

The investigation is proceeding.

Food For Germany By Way of Denmark

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A protracted debate in the House of Lords yesterday on the much criticised secret agreement with Denmark, by which certain articles exported from Great Britain to Denmark could be re-exported to other countries, terminated without the disclosure of its terms or the commodities covered by it. Lord Portsmouth ultimately withdrawing his motion for the publication of the agreement.

Lord Sydenham, Lord Milner and other supporters of the motion contended that the agreement permitted goods to reach Germany which otherwise would be prevented from doing so by the British navy, and to that extent prolonged the war.

Lord Emmott, on behalf of the Government, said during the debate "There are two things we desire to do with regard to Germany, which are not easy to reconcile. We desire to deprive her of war necessities and also break down her foreign exchange. The policy of stopping her exports tends to both these things. On the other hand, if Germany buys from neutrals luxuries and non-necessities that also tends to break down her exchange. We believe the Danish agreement will tend to smother the working trade with Denmark and are certain that because of it a great deal less will reach the enemy than he is now receiving.

The Marquis of Crewe, Lord President of the Council, said:

"The war is founded upon our protest against the violation of neutral rights. If we are going to expect that it is possible for us, when convenient, to treat neutrals as though they were belligerents at all times and for them to treat us as though we were allies, we are dreaming dreams which are altogether vain. The Government has been falsely charged with displaying too great tenderness toward Germany. If we could absolutely besiege and really starve Germany we would do so at the first possible moment. There is no difference from the point of view of humanity in besieging a city and besieging a country."

We Must be Patient.

With the man who, about this time of the year, boasts to us three times a day that he doesn't don "heavies" all winter long.

With our well-meaning acquaintances who tell us we are burning the wrong kind of coil oil in our furnace and explain how we can save three tons but using their method.

With the gink who is always finding some place where he can buy his winter suits and overcoats for much less than we paid for ours.

With the football player who explains in about 10,000 words how his team got beat last Saturday.

With the auto agent who describes the machine he is selling as the only one on the market.

With the laws that acquit, parole or pardon about 98 per cent. of all the murderers, grafters, burglars, speeders, etc., we read about.

Cleveland's charity hospital is taxed with patients to its utmost capacity.

The first hockey game of the season will be played at Brock St. Rink on Thursday night, when the T. R. and A. A. Seniors will clash with the Electrics. There will be a big crowd of fans out to get a line on the Peterborough Intermediates. A bout with a Toronto senior team is always enjoyed. The game, will be called for 8.30 o'clock, and should attract a big house.

Battalion are concerned. "Private" seems to think that the Battalion is paid 75c a day for each man, and that somebody gets the difference. Where he got such a notion is hard to find but the above explanation may disa use him of the idea. He has evidently not done any soldiering before or he would have a clearer idea of how the commissiary is looked after.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from the Divisional Office and is published for the information of all concerned:

"I am directed by the Colonel commanding 3rd Division to inform you that it has been brought to notice that in some cases officers do not attend physical training parades. It is desired that you will issue such instructions as may be necessary to ensure that officers attend early morning (and other) physical training parades with the other ranks.

I am also directed to remind you that the appointments of officers and N.C.O.'s to units of the C.E.F. is provisional. That is that such appointments or ranks are conditional upon the officer or N.C.O. concerned applying themselves to their duty conscientiously and endeavouring to bring credit to the unit to which they belong, both in camp or quarters and also (which is more important) in the field.

Officers and N.C.O.'s should be made clearly to understand that their ranks or appointments can be cancelled should their behaviour or efficiency not be considered such as is conductive to the welfare and efficiency of the unit to which they belong or in the interests of the service generally.

Officers failing to prove themselves capable for any reason will be reported upon by you to Divisional Headquarters when the necessary action will be taken. This also applies to N.C.O.'s, but commanding officers are reminded that acting N.C.O.'s can be reduced by the C. O. without reference to higher authority.

(Signed.)

T. J. Johnston, Lt.-Col.
Officer Commanding 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

Walter Hatcher, a brother of Pte. Harold Hatcher of the 93rd Battalion, was taken on the strength of the Peterborough battalion yesterday, bringing the total number of pairs of brothers in the local unit up to twenty-one, which is surely a record. In two cases there are three brothers in line, while there are four instances of father and son serving in the battalion. Fourteen of the pair of brothers, including the two cases of three brothers, were born in Canada.

Yesterday's casualty list contained the name of Lieut. T. D. Leonard of Toronto, 5th Battalion, who is reported as dangerously wounded. He is a nephew of Mr. Geo. H. Giroux, and a son of Mr. C. J. Leonard, a former resident of Peterborough and for some time a member of the legal firm of Dumble and Leonard, Lt. Leonard was a sergeant in the 35th Battalion when he left Canada, but qualified as a subaltern and was appointed to the 5th Battalion.

Private S. J. White, of the 9th battalion, who died of pleurisy at Shorncliffe on the 15th, is a Canadian by birth, born at Norwood, Ont., 27 years ago, and is a younger brother of Rt. Rev. Bishop White, of Honan, China. At the beginning of the war he enlisted in Calgary. He was severely wounded in Flanders last April and since then had been in the hospital at Shorncliffe. He had two other brothers serving at the front, Lieut. J. H. White, of the C.A.M.C., and Corp. H. V. White, of the Cycle Corps. He eaves a widow and two young children, who had only recently joined him in England. His parents are at present in Toronto, where two of his sisters are school teachers.

Pte. White was well known in Peterborough.

Capts. Ackerman and Ponton commenced their lectures to the 93rd Battalion to-day. Captain Ponton lectured to the men this morning on trench warfare and his remarks proved most interesting and instructive as they were based on his own experiences at the front.

Three recruits came forward at the Red Cross bazaar in Warsaw yesterday, and will join the 93rd Battalion. The occasion was in aid of the Red Cross work, but the presence of Major R. P. Watt, Captain Munro, Lieut. Matthews of the 93rd turned the affair into an impromptu recruiting meeting, and the young men present found their remarks interesting and to the point. Lieut. Raymond sang several solos and Master Percy Luther, the little recruiting sergeant, gave several of his most effective recitations.

Capt. W. E. Swaine, Musketry Instructor of the 3rd Division, is in Peterborough to-day.

Major H. R. Wilson of the headquarters staff, Kingston, paid an official visit to Peterborough to-day.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Senior Membership campaign opened last evening at a supper which was served twenty workers by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The following workers were added to the list already published: Percy Dunford, to Wm. Heaslip's team; Harold Dovey, Frank Jobbitt to Dr. Frank's team; Howard Armstrong, G. D. Carlisle, A. E. C. Thackery to Ross Dobbin's team. It is proposed to conduct the campaign till January 1st, closing same with the New Year's reception. While earnest work is expected from every member of the teams, it is desired that every member of the Association get busy and boost the membership during the campaign period. As the remodelled building is now opened at the busiest season of the year the co operation of every Association man is needed in introducing new men to the Association. Choose the team with which you are willing to work. First see that your membership is paid in full and secure at least one new member. To put a little spice into the effort it was announced that the team securing the largest amount in fees will be served a banquet; also that the individual member securing the most members will secure a full membership ticket good for one year. The worker enrolling the second largest number will receive a limited membership ticket, while the third man will receive a locker. The fourth man will be given a ten-game bowling ticket and the next six best workers will each receive a 5-game bowling ticket. These little rewards are not intended to remunerate a man for his efforts, but are just a slight token of appreciation of the good work that it is expected will be done by the Association members. Any Y.M.C.A. worker whether he is a member of a team or not is entitled to these little rewards. To encourage men to pay their membership fees before Jan. 1, it is proposed to give a ten game bowling ticket to each man who pays his $6 membership before the close of the Campaign. If preferred, these tickets may be used for billiards or towels.

Mr. Alex. Robinson has just about completed the work of rebuilding the gun-ways and back-stops of the bowling alleys, and as they are to be shellaced at once it is expected that they will be ready by Friday evening of this week.

About 100 parents were the boys' guests at the opening of their department last evening, the boys acting as guides throughout the building, also putting on a short gymnasium programme.

The fine, large rooms were decorated in a very tasteful manner by Mr. Hughson Johnstone. The dormitories were also inspected, 16 of which have just been refinished by Coleman Bros. One lady from Toronto remarked that Peterborough now had a building that was quite citified. We are glad to know that the present arrangement compares quite favourably with the Y.M.C.A. buildings that are being erected in the larger cities.

Liberals Gain Efficiency By Organization

National Advisory Committee in Process of Organization at Conference of Prominent Liberals

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—Steps were taken to-day at a conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier of some fifty representative Liberals from all parts of the Dominion to form a National Liberal Advisory Committe. The conference, which was held in Sir Wilfrid's office in the Parliament Buildings, will b continued to-morrow, when sub-committees will be appointd to consider spcial phases of the questions discussed to-day in a general way.

Questions Considered.

These questions include such subjects as organization, national problems of finance, transportation, taxation, technical education, immigration and land settlement, agricultural credit systems, and generally the complex and vital problems of national statesmanship confronting Parliament at the present time and looming up in the reconstructive period following the war. To-day the ideas of each of the delegates to the conference were briefly and clearly expressed and the suggestions made as to the wisest policies for Canada to adopt and for the Liberal party to advocate were carefully canvassed by men who have been seriously studying public questions for years, both in and out of Parliament. To-day's conference was in the main a clearing house for ideas, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who called the conference, presiding. To-morrow, when the subcommittees will be appointed, it is probable that some concrete proposals will be adopted in conformity with the opinions and suggestions offered to-day.

New Move for Party in Opposition.

Hitherto there has been no permanent organization for the study of questions by either party when in Opposition. Only when a session was on has there been co-operative study and decisions as to policy. Any continuous and organized consideration of matters of public policy has been left to the press and to the casual research of individuals.

It has been felt that though an Opposition has not administrative or direct legislative power, it has, nevertheless,a function to perform, and that the study of vital questions by groups of capable men engaged in research when Parliament was in recess as well as in session might prove most useful to the country.

More Intelligent Criticism.

It has been realized by Sir Wilfrid and the party leaders that such study would develop more intelligent criticism when Parliament sits, that it would aid the Government in solving difficult problems, and that it would betetr fit the Liberal party for the responsibilities of government when the country calls upon it to take office.

The National Committee has therefore been sugested and is now being permanently constituted.

HOCKEY

The Electrics, intermediates, and a few of the juniors had a lively practice last night and the intermediates are fast rounding into shape for the first test, which will come on Thursday night, when the fast T. R. and A. A. team of Toronto will be here. Last night's practice was the best of the season and the players went at top speed throughout. The intermediates used Tobin in the nets and Pete Spratt and Jerry Coughlin on the defence. The defence pair showed all kinds of speed. On the forward line were Bryden at left wing, Bailey at centre and Montgomery on the other side of the ice, while "Banty" Evans, the East City boy, and Walter Jackson of last year's juniors, alternated at rover. All five forwards will eb used in Thursday night's game.

Among the juniors out was Claude Montgomery, a nephew of Mr. Frank Montgomery, and brother of the intermediate right wing, who showed fine form in goal. The youngster is only sixteen, but is very cool and clever. Lezrow, last year's junior goalkeeper, will be used on the defence this year. He has plenty of speed and handles himself well. Among others out who showed up well were Roy Cherrett, Lowes and Hamilton.

The juniors will practice from 7 to 7.30 to-morrow (Wednesday) night and a full turnout is expected. The junior's first game will be on New Year's afternoon in Campbellford.

WAR'S PINCH IN BRITAIN FELT IN DRUG SHORTAGE

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The scarcity of some of the most important drugs in England has become so acute that medical practitioners are handicapped greatly, especially as it is difficult to find substitutes for some medical products now unobtainable except in the smallest quantities.

This great scarcity has resulted in fabulously high prices being quoted. Thus atropine is worth between six and eight cents a grain more than its weight in gold), while eserine is worth more. Both these drugs are indispensable in ophthalmic surgery. The scarcity of atropine is due to the dearth of belladonna, the raw material from which it is extracted, which is obtained from Central Europe.

Phenacetin now is twenty-two times the price at which it could be bought before the war and is becoming scarcer and dearer [illegible] by [illegible] aspirin, another very [illegible] drug, is more than twenty times the pre-war price. Salicylic acid and salicylate of soda —the most commonly prescribed of all the rheumatic remedies — are both about eighteen times the price at which they could be bought before the war. Potassium bromide is worth from ten to twelve times its normal value.

There are only a few examples of the hundreds of drugs and medicinal preparations whose values have increased enormously as a direct consequence of the war. There appears to be no immediate prospect of any general decline in value.

In the case of phenacetin, antipyrine, aspirin and other drugs of the coal tar series the reason for their extreme prices is that before the war they were manufactured almost solely in Germany, and up to the present British manufacturers have not overcome the difficulties in the way of their economical production, although aspirin now is being made in England in fair quantities.

A large fortune awaits the manufacturer who succeeds in producing these coal tar drugs on a sufficient commercial scale.

CUT-RATE DRUGGISTS

REPRESENTATIVES OF AFRICA'S ROYAL FAMILIES FIGHT IN FRANCE

Fighting under the tricolour of France are several sons of kings, "black kings," according to the Figaro. One of them is the son of the one-time King of the Soudon, Diugh Saliirou, enlisted in the Eighth Colonial regiment, promoted corporal, then sergeant and finally sub-lieutenant. Wounded twice, he was cited in orders for gallantry. As soon as he was well he volunteered for service at the Dardanelles, and has just received his third wound. He is now in France, convalescing.

Another is Prince Ouanilo, son of Behanzin, King of Dahomey. This young man, who studied in France and has been admitted to the Bar in Paris, did not wait to complete his French naturalization before enlisting. His two brothers already have been killed, one at Neufchatesu, the other in Togo.

In Algiers, in the city of Mustapha, Queen Ranavalo of Madagascar, is attending to the wants of wounded soldiers, while her niece, Marie Louise Razafinandrjamanitra (daughter of God), is in Versailles, a nurse in the hospital of the Petit Lycee.

BRITISH FORCES ON THE TIGRIS STORMS TURK TRENCHES

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Parties of the British Mesopotamia army that are holding positions on the Tigris River at Kut-el-Amara have been sallying forth and attacking the Turkish advanced trenches, it was announced in an official report to-night on the operations of this expeditionary force. The losses of the Turks since Dec. 1 are estimated to have been at least 2,500. The statement is as follows:

"Gen. Townsend reports that in his estimation the Turks must have lost no less than 2,500 men in the rearguard action on Dec. 1 and in their abortive attack on his position at Kut-el-Amar during the night of Dec. 12-13.

"During the night of Dec. 17-18 mixed parties of British and Indian troops surprised the Turks in their advanced trenches, killing about 30 and taking 11 prisoners.

"The 19th and the 20th passed quietly."

King Albert and Consort Had Narrow Escape

Bombs Dropped By German Airmen Explode Few Yards Away

Examiner Special:

PARIS, Dec. 22.—Details of the narrow escape from death recently of the King and Queen of the Belgians, when German aviators threw bombs on the fishing village where they now reside, are printed by the Petit Journal.

The King and Queen were coming out of church from mass with the rest of the congregation, says the newspaper's correspondent, when six German aeroplanes appeared, flying low. Apparently they were coming from Ostend. The King at once told the people to scatter and take shelter, but the aeroplanes approached so rapidly that few had time to comply with his instructions before the machines were over the village. Two bombs fell a few yards from the King and Queen, but they were not hit by the flying fragments. The correspondent continues:

"This is the fifth air raid which has been absolutely unjustified, since the village is unfortified and is inhabited only by fishermen. What makes it worse is that the aeroplane came from the section of the German front commanded by the Prince of Wurtemberg, first cousin of the Belgian Queen."

Varna An Important Bulgarian Sea-port Is Reported Captured

By the Russians—Unconfirmed Despatch Received in London Causes Great Excitement—German Offensive on Riga Front Has Completely Failed.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — Unconfirmed reports that the Russians have captured the important Bulgarian seaport of Varna, aroused the greatest excitement here to-day. The reports, however, the important Bulgarian seaport of reserve, the dispatch to the Chronicle reporting the capture of Varna, was filed at Athens at noon yesterday, one day later than other press messages reporting the port being shelled. It was stated that the city was laid in ruins and the forts silenced. Russian infantry and artillery were then landed. A neutral consul at Varna telegraphed the news to Athens. The Chronicle correspondent wired if the Athens reports are true. The Russians have begun the long looked for invasion of Bulgaria by a flanking attack that may cause the immediate withdrawal of the Bulgars from the Greek frontier. Such a manoeuvre would cause a radical change in the Balkan fighting, imperil the Teutonic communications with Constantinople, and if successful, end the prospects of a German campaign against Egypt. It is assumed here that if the Russians land troops at Varna at all, the force must be made up of at least one hundred thousand men. An army of at least that size would be needed to withstanding Bulgarian attacks until a larger force could be transported across the Black Sea from the Odessa region.

HAS COMPLETELY FAILED.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—"A German offensive on the Riga front has completely failed," telegraphed the Geneva correspondent of the Daily Express to-day. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has been compelled to retire before the Russian counter attacks after burying his cannon and abandoning an enormous amount of material. The Germans, unable to cross the Dwina, have suffered very heavily. Five German divisions have retreated on the Tukum, against which the Russians are advancing. A sanguinary battle is in progress near Uxhull."

LOOKING FOR WORK

Everywhere men complain about work; even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Rich blood, strong lungs and healthful digestion make work pleasurable in business, in school or even housework, and if those who are easily tired—who are not sick, but weak and nervous—would just take Scott's Emulsion for one month and let its pure concentrated food create richer blood to pulsate through every artery and vein—let it build a structure of healthy tissue and give you vigorous strength—you would find work easy and would look for more. Insist on Scott's.

Slipped On An Icy Board and Broke His Leg

Mr. Julian Carter, a C. P. R. Employee, Hurt at Perth—Hastings News

HASTINGS, Dec. 21.—The news has come to hand that Mr. Julian Carter of Havelock, son of Mrs. S. Carter, of Havelock, while at work on the C.P.R. at Perth, met with a serious accident resulting in a fracture of his leg, caused by slipping on a board which was covered with ice, and from which he was obliged to jump several feet. Mr. Carter was taken to his home in Havelock as soon as possible, where the injured member was attended to, and he is according to the latest reports resting nicely. His many friends here are hoping that he may soon be restored to health.

Those who took the trip to Peterboro for Christmas Saturday report a large crowd and speak in glowing terms of the city's holiday air.

The recent thaw has almost spoiled the sleighing and left the roads in a very icy condition.

Mr. Allan Greenley left during the past week for St. Catharines to take a position in the Toronto Bank. Mr. Greenley was on the bank staff here for some time, and was decidedly popular not only with the manager and the staff but also with the young people of the town, who are sorry to lose him from their midst, and who follow him with best wishes for his future prosperity.

Mrs. Wallace received on Wednesday afternoon for the first time since her marriage. A very pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by those who called, Mrs. Wallace and her assistants doing all in their power to entertain.

Reeve Fowlds took a trip to Toronto during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade spent a few days last week in Peterboro.

Mr. Butler is renewing acquaintance in Hastings, the guest of his mother.

Miss Teresa Crowley has returned from a lengthy visit with friends in Rochester, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Corbett of western Canada are the guests of the latter's brother, Mr. William Warner, town.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Aubrey Dennis is recovering from her recent illness.

Mr. Lee Walsh, who has been absent for some years in the west, is home on a visit to his mother, Mrs. D. Walsh.

Mrs. Gregg of Alnwick, spent Thursday with her mother, Mrs. J. Brown.

Mr. Luton of St. Thomas, paid us a short visit during the past week.

Miss Marjorie Miller of Norwood, was a week-end visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Smith.

Mrs. Wm. Atkinson was in Havelock during the week visiting her brother, Mr. Julian Carter.

Miss Hilda West has returned from a protracted visit with friends in distant parts.

Mr. Frank Hill and children of Washago, are visiting friends in town.

Miss Vida Faux of Westwood, spent Thursday in Hastings.

Christmas shoppers are busy and many mysterious parcels are being carried hither and thither.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Stillman of Havelock, were in town on Monday.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small dose at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

AMAZING APPETITES OF INSECTS.

If a baby had the appetite of a young potato beetle it would eat from fifty to one hundred pounds of food every twenty-four hours. If a horse ate as much as a caterpillar, in proportion to its size, it would consume a ton of hay every twenty-four hours. A caterpillar eats twice its weight of leaves every day; but a potato beetle devours every day at least five times its weight of foliage, every bit of which represents just so much money to the farmer. The most destructive of all insects, however, is the grasshopper which when in good health consumes in a day ten times its weight of vegetation.—Exchange.

Many millions could be saved by a revision of the separation allowances which are now being paid. It is well known that many families are financially benefitting by the war as regards the amount received, but they are not saving; on the contrary, they are spending recklessly and unwisely. —Viscount Peel.

Serbian Women Are Described As Being Indifferent To Their Fate

Here Ludwig Bir thus describes in the Pester Lloyd life and conditions in Serbia after the invasion by the Teutonic armies:

"We are in the house of the burgomaster of Topola," he writes. "The burgomaster is a merchant, but his place of business is closed and a sentry with a gun is on guard. Gajo Svabies was only recently elected burgomaster. After King Peter left his villa on the hillI with the Serbian army and when the Austrian aviators began to throw bombs in the vicinity, the majority of the residents fled, and those who remained elected Svabies burgomaster of the town. There was reason for this. Svabies belonged to the liberal party, which favoured friendship with Austria-Hungary, and was also respected by the Obrenovics as well as being a leading business man.

"The burgomaster rises from his chair and goes into the next room. He returns with a large signed portrait of King Milan. He also shows invitations to court balls. On the wall there is a photograph of King Alexander in uniform.

"The burgomaster says that he knows nothing of the Serbian army. So far as he knows the army is still intact, but the men have lost all hope. The war, he believes, will last a long time. The small nations, of course, can be annihilated, but he believes with Grey, Viviani and Isvonoff that the Entente Powers can hold out for some time to come.

"Until the invasion of our country," he said, 'we were undisturbed by the war. Everything was peaceful and business went on as usual. Of course, food prices were high, but all the food and supplies we needed reached us by way of Salonica. We heard that the Germans were coming, but everybody laughed and said that it was only a bluff. Then the King went with the army, and soon after we heard that Belgrade had fallen. For two weeks we have not seen a newspaper and have had no news. When a few days ago bombs were thrown on us from aeroplanes nearly the whole population went away. My two daughters fled with their children, and we have no idea wht has become of them.'

"The houses in Topola are all deserted. In front of one small house are three women and ten children. The husbands of the women are soldiers at the front. The woman wanted to flee with the children, but they had no conveyance, so they remained. Now they are indifferent as to whether they are to be killed or are to starve. In another house lives a woman all alone. Her husband is at the front. She appears happy and chats with us in a friendly manner. We ask about her children. Then her face darkens.

"I had children but they died. It is better so in a world such as this. don't you think?"

"We remain silent as we walk through the deserted streets of Topola, that has the appearance of a plague stricken city."

WHY WHEELS "TOE IN"

Makes Action of Steering Gear Easier When Rounding Corners.

Many automobile drivers do not understand why on several makes of cars the front wheels "toe in" slightly. The first time the fact is called to their attention they are more than likely to think something has happened to the axle. As a matter of fact, toeing in of front wheels is for the purpose of obtaining easier action of the steering gear when rounding corners.

When the car is traveling straight ahead it does not matter whether the wheels are parallel or gathered, but when a turn is reached, if the wheels are parallel, the tendency is to increase the angle of the wheels and therefore when the course of the car is straightened extra effort is required.

It has been found that this difficulty can be overcome by toeing-in the wheels, because when this is done the slant of the front wheels creates a force that balances this other tendency.

Gathering the wheels increases tire wear slightly, but the angle at which the wheels are set is so small that this objection is not considered serious. The angularity is small, the angle included by both wheels being no more than from 5 to 7 degrees, and this undoubtedly accounts for the practice remaining often unnoticed.

THE ROGERS PASS TUNNEL

Work is Being Rushed to Completion—When East Met West, Despite Kipling

GLACIER, B.C., Dec. 21.—East and west met when the final charge, exploded in the heart of Mount MacDonald opened a passage between the east and west headings in the Canadian Pacific Railway tunnel now beginning to drill through this mountain. The ceremony of firing the connecting shot was performed in the presence of a number of prominent railway and business men and engineers, and four intrepid ladies two and a half miles from either exit, and six thousand feet below the surface. The construction of this famous Rogers Pass tunnel is the greatest engineering feat of its kind on the continent and marks a further stage of development in the Canadian Pacific Railway transcontinental route. The work had been marked by speed and efficiency since the contract was let in July, 1915. The construction of the pioneer tunnel at the east end was commenced in September of 1915, and the west end was started in May of 1915. The main headings are now united and about three miles of the enlargement completed. The enlargement is proceeding at the rate of one-quarter of a mile per month, the remaining two miles are expected to be finished in the fall of 1916. The tunnel complete will be twenty-six thousand four hundred feet long with the approaches an additional nine miles. The width of the tunnel is twenty-nine feet. Its height is twenty-one feet and carries a double track. It saves an elevation of 588 feet, reduces the track length 4.7 by 4.2 miles eliminates 2,400 degrees of curvature and four and a half miles of snow sheds. Comparatively little dangerous ground and no excessive water was encountered, which with the methods adopted made the construction not only the cheapest, but among the most rapid ever accomplished in a tunnel of this length.

A SHOT FROM HIS WIFE.

McGinnis is no Adonis and his temper is in direct ration to his lack of personal beauty. Mrs. McGinnis also is rather peppery of temper and is rather inclined to "get back" at her husband during the course of a quarrel.

One such altercation had been had the other evening but things soon quieted down and McGinnis had regained his temper and thought that his wife had too. But he was speedily undeceived.

Mac had been playing with the baby and observed: "Every time the baby looks into my face he smiles."

"Aye!" said wife with an ominous gleam in her eye, "it may not be exactly polite of baby, but it shows he has a sense of humor."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

like Nelson Rhodes's father. And to fix things that get broke, and swear at tradesmen."

"My goodness!" gasped Mr. Van Wycke. "Is that necessary?"

"They make Mother cry," said the boy. "Oh, we need one badly.

"Need'm," added Sister.

"If you'll pardon me for seeming to make a circumstance of insignificant and comparatively unimportant details," began Mr. Van Wycke, "don't you thing it would be fricudlier all around if you were to tell me your names?"

The boy smiled. Sister looked a little dazed.

"I'h Sanford Murray Hunter," he said proudly. "Sister's Elizabeth Knox Hunter."

"I'm very glad to meet you both," said Mr. Van Wycke. "And you live—?"

"Central Park West—'way up. The 'bus passes. We come down on the 'bus."

The taxi stopped. Mr. Van Wycke glanced out through the steaming window. Over a former shop that had been redecorated with red paint and Christmas greens was a sign;

Organized Charities.

and underneath:

Santa Claus's Office.

Inside, innumerable children filled all the available space—children of the poor, wizened, eager-eyed, ill-clad children—waiting patiently to sign the ledger and bespeak some Christmas joy

"Are we here?" asked Sandford excitedly.

"We're here," admitted Mr. Van Wycke, "but there are so many waiting, we'll probably be delayed hours; and Mary will worry. I'll tell you what! I know Santa intimately—he belongs to one of my clubs. A jolly old chap he is, too, and always willing to do me a favor. I'll just take you home, and to-night, at dinner, I'll bring up this father-matter with him quite casually, and if he can do it at all—he'll do it for me."

Sandford and Elizabeth gazed at him with shining eyes.

"Could you?" gasped Sandford.

"I could, and I will. And now I'm going to take you home. Know the number?"

"Five twenty-four," said Sanford glibly.

Mr. Van Wycke repeated it to the driver.

He gave no thought to his office. He forgot his loneliness, and his ill-will toward the time of year and the world in general. Leaning back in the taxi, between Sandford and Sister, he found himself well entertained—more interested that he had been in years. They were such good-looking youngsters—such clever youngsters—such well-mannered youngsters. He wished that by some miraculous intervention of Heaven they might be his. He even thought—desperately—of kidnapping them. With youngsters like this to come home to—to plan for and guard and guide—

An ache grew in his heart—a lonely, neglected, longing ache. And as they proceeded further and further uptown, it grew harder to bear. For the time was coming when they would drift out of his life as they had drifted in. Sister would never crawl over his knees again, and Sandford's hand would not tug at his sleeve.

But when Sandford had shaken hands with him at the door, thanking him for the cab, and when Sister's moist, warm lips had brushed his—in parting—and when the chauffeur stood ready to open the door, a frightened, stout, red-faced maid charged down upon them from the hallway of the apartment-house, and, seizing her charges, turned to Van Wycke inquiringly. He explained the escapade, and the reason. Mary insisted upon his coming in—just for a minute, at least—to be properly thanked; and Van Wycke felt himself irresistibly impelled to agree.

Upstairs, a tall, slender, very beautiful young woman advanced to meet him in the little drawing-room. She had melting brown eyes, too, and long lashes, curved upward at the ends, and soft, dark hair, and fresh, smooth skin of ivory and wild roses. And there were tears in her eyes as she hugged her children and sent them off with Mary, and then turned to thank Van Wycke.

They sat down—Van Wycke in top-coat, still holding his hat and stick; Mrs. Hunter in her hat and coat, just as she had come home in answer to Mary's 'phone message, when the janitor's wife released the maid from the sewing-room. Van Wycke told her about his meeting with the youngsters, and about their errand; and she told him how hard it was to rear them alone. And he told her how lonely he was. It was odd what a lot they had to say to each other. It was not at all like first meeting.

And as it grew later, she urged him to stay to luncheon; and they took off their outer things as they sat down. And Van Wycke sat at one end of the table, and Mrs. Hunter sat at the other, and between them sat Sandford and Sister. It was all very cosy and comfortable. And afterwards Mr. Van Wycke offered to drive her downtown—since she insisted that she must go back to her hat-shop. And when he took leave of the kiddies he promised to come again.

As they drove down—Van Wycke and Eleanor Hunter—Van Wycke regarded her, and he realized that she was more than beautiful; that she was very brave and fine to have struggled with her problem alone. A sudden madness possessed him. He turned and leaned nearer, looking into her eyes, and slowly, hesitatingly, broke a short silence.

"Mrs. Hunter," he said, "this must seem unbelievable to you—such a short time has elapsed since we first saw each other. A matter of moments. But we are born in a matter of moments. We die in a matter of moments. I want to marry you. I admire you tremendously. I think I could love you devotedly. I love the kiddies, too. I should be very good to you all, and I should take care of you. It would make me very happy to do that. I could share your burdens, and I could shoulder your responsibilities."

She was flushed—gazing at him wide-eyed.

"You needn't decide now," he said. "Think it over. This is the twenty-second. Spend this evening with me. We'll have a little theatre party, and go to supper afterwards; and tomorrow we'll go shopping for the kiddies, and dine together, and spend the evening together. We'll learn as much of each other as we can before the night of the twenty-fourth. Then—if you find me bearable—we'll be married, and the youngsters will have the father they want—Christmas morning."

She drew a long breath.

"You—aren't serious?"

"Quite serious."

"But we don't know each other!" She laughed a little uncertainly.

"I know that you are fine and strong and true. I see it. I feel it. The rest I'll learn in time. I'll be patient with you. I don't expect you to decide as hastily as I've decided. But you might look me up—inquire about me—"

She flushed, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Somehow," she said, "I—should not like to do that. I prefer to take you—on trust, too. I—I have the same sort of feeling about you; that you are reliable—trustworthy—such a haven as I have longed for. But—we are being very foolish. With so much time in which to meet this problem and solve it wisely, we hurry as if it were most urgent—most pressing."

"Isn't it?" he cried. "Aren't we throwing away happiness every moment we hesitate? Have you had so much, you can afford to waste any?"

"No," she answered slowly.

He caught her hands and kissed them

"Trust me," he said. "Love me if you can. Believe in me. Come to know me. Our futures lie in our own hands. Be to me what I would be to you: all things—companion, friend, lover, mate! We can be all this to each other. I feel it. Will you try?"

"Yes," she whispered. "Oh, yes!"

They looked into each other's eyes. The blood coursed warmly through them. Their hearts beat fast.

Almost imperceptibly—instinctively—they drew nearer together,

And their lips met.

And he never, never, hated Christmas again.

WHAT ONTARIO FOLKS SAY.

Hamilton, Ont.—"This is to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Some time ago I was run down and weak, suffered loss of appetite and was miserable. Four bottles of the 'Prescription' saved me up in fine shape; it did wonders for me and I can recommend it very highly to women who are ailing."—Miss Maren Mellem, 127 Hess St., Hamilton, Ont.

Brantford, Ont.—"Some few years ago I got in a very much run-down condition. Was very weak; could not do anything; had no strength at all. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; I only took five bottles and it put me in splendid condition. I felt better than I had for years. Other members of my family have used this medicine and found it equally as beneficial. I can highly recommend it to weak women."—Mrs. A. Gilmour, 71 Brighton Row, Brantford, Ont.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps, sleepless nights—tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one ailment or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source.

Get the "Prescription" to-day—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Keep the body clean inside as well as outside.

SOUND HEALTH DEMANDS PURE AND FRESH AIR

One may live weeks without food, days without drink, but only a few moments without air.

Fresh air is food to the lungs—drink to the blood. It is the fuel that enables the heart to pump blood through the body.

Fresh air costs nothing. Air surrounds the whole earth and is ever present.

When outdoors one should stand erect, throw back the shoulders and fill one's lungs with air to their full capacity.

Within the house or in the factory see that the windows or other means of ventilation are open as wide as possible summer and winter, day or night. Speak to the foreman if this is not being done. Fresh air harms nobody. One very easily gets accustomed to cool drafts of air, and habit makes drafts harmless.

At your work stand or sit as straight as possible. Do not stoop or bend unnecessarily. Sit back in your chair and bend from the hips. Don't rest your weight on the spine. Keep your lungs full of air at all times.

The best ventilation is where air is constantly coming into and going from the room—where neither dust, gases nor fumes accumulate, where the air is neither hot nor humid.

Dust is one of the greatest enemies of the worker. Dust, gases, steam and fumes should be removed at their origin. This can easily be done by proper exhaust tubes and fans which should be installed and maintained in every factory where there is dust, gases or fumes in harmful quantities.

Air which is hot and moist is very injurious. Rooms in which there is considerable moisture and heat should be especially well ventilated by mechanical means. If it is possible, reduce the temperature and the moisture by means of windows and other openings.

Plenty of pure air is necessary for good health. Air is not only a food but it is a medicine. Fresh air prevents many diseases. Fresh air helps to cure tuberculosis.

Get all the fresh air you can.

Colds are not due to fresh air, but to germs which enter the body with dust or foul air.—Ontario Safety League.

TROOPS SUFFER IN THE BALKANS

Not Equipped for Fighting in Mountains—Saloniki Will Be Protected

SALONIKI, Dec. 22.—Big French and British guns have been planted to sweep all the approaches of Saloniki. Miles of defensive works have been built along the railway lines that run northward to the Serbian frontier and eastward to the Bulgarian frontier.

Winter has set in unusually early and the troops are suffering from the cold weather and the heavy fall of snow. A blizzard which swept down the Vardar Valley destroyed part of the allies' cantonments and wrecked a military hospital, but the damage is being repaired. There are more and more cases of frozen hands and feet in the hospitals, and numerous cases have been reported where sentries and small reconnaissance parties were frozen to death in the mountains. Snow fell in this city in November this year, for the first time in ten years.

Transport Troubles.

Transportation of supplies to the first line position has become very difficult and the weather has been so stormy that transports which arrived a week ago are still lying in the harbor with troops and supplies on board.

Soldiers who took part in the fighting against the Bulgarians on Serbian soil tells stories of hardships. For days the battle raged in a wild country of deep ravines, bleak snow-covered mountains and irregular limestone hills, utterly devoid of vegetation. The Bulgarians, used to rugged outdoor life in the mountain country, had the advantage. Sometimes the fighting went on for days with the allies fighting an invisible enemy.

Handicapped by Boots.

The British and French soldiers in their heavy rawhide boots with the soles filled with hobnails, had a difficult time making their way across the rough country. The Bulgars wore a mocassin of soft leather, easy and noiseless.

Trench digging was next to impossible, because of the hard quality of the frozen, limestone soil. Consequently the earth works were little more than ditches from two to three feet deep. The violence of the fighting was made evident by the condition of the battle field after the allies' retreat. It was covered with broken rifles and hundreds of empty cartridge clips.

WAR MAKES ATHEIST PROFESSING CHRISTIAN

Because a large proportion of Christendom it at war, there are cynics who profess to see a general breaking down of religious faith. Overlooking the splendid sacrifices made in behalf of patriotism, the inspiring examples of courage and devotion and self discipline that have sprung from the war, like James Russell Lowell they "call it murder," and they say Christianity has failed. In time of peace there was no more bitter antagonist of religion than M. Lavedan, the brilliant French journalist. But war, instead of strengthening his opposition to the Christian faith and the church, has worked a wonderful reformation in his character. As quoted by the United Presbyterian here is what he now says:

I once laughed at faith and thought myself wise. But as I saw France bleeding and weeping, my laughter could not give me joy. I stood by the way and saw the soldiers as they went light heartedly to face death. I asked, What is it that makes you so? I counted the sacrifices of our people and saw how they accepted them with praying hearts.

* * * Who can hope, when everything else is failing, save he who has faith in God? Oh!—I dare not name Him (Jesus Christ). He was so good, and I * * * What would become of France, if her children did not believe, or her women did not pray? A valt people of the dead cover the field! How hard it is to be an atheist upon this national burying ground! I can't do it, I can't be one! I have deceived myself, and you who have read my books and sung my songs. I was mad. It has all been an awful dream!

O France, France! Return to your faith and to your best days. To depart from God is to be lost. I know not whether I shall be alive to-morrow, but I must tell my friends Lavedan does not dare to die an atheist. It is not hell that makes me afraid, but this one thought grips me; God lives, and thou art so far from him! Oh, my soul, rejoice that thou are permitted to see the hour in which, kneeling, thou hast learnt to say, I believe I believe in God. I believe.

History shows that mighty stirrings of religious feeling have accompanied or followed great wars. At such times men realize more than ever the necessity for dependence upon a power that is higher than human. There is a God of battles and one 'who maketh wars to cease.' Coincident with the restoration of peace we may look for a revival of faith in Him who "doeth all things well."—Presbyterian Chronicle-Telegraph.

Hardening of the Arteries

An Interesting Explanation of How This Dreaded Condition is Brought About.

You take out the garden hose in the spring, turn on the water, and if the rubber has got hard and brittle the tubing bursts and water spurts out in all directions.

The arteries of the human body may be likened to small rubber pipes, which go everywhere through the body and carry blood to the hands and feet, as well as to the nerves, muscles and vital organs. They carry all the blood in the human system, and if this blood is burdened with the poisons left over when the liver and kidneys are not properly performing their filtering work, these poisons form a deposit on the inside walls of the arteries.

The deposit thus formed gradually thickens and hardens the walls of the arteries. The tiny blood vessels of the liver are affected, and thence comes that fatal disease—cirrhosis of the liver. The cells of the kidneys become starved for want of blood, and Bright's disease gets its start.

In health the arteries have the elasticity of rubber, and expand, contract or elongate, as required by the demands of the blood pressure. Hardened, the arteries are like so much brittle rubber tubing. The blood pressure comes on, the tubing bursts, and the resulting blood clot on the brain causes apoplexy.

It will be plainly seen that the cause of trouble is in the inefficient condition of the liver and kidneys. When these filtering organs are kept healthy and active, and the bowels regular in the removal of waste matter, there is no chance for such dreadful conditions as hardening of the arteries bring about.

As in all forms of serious disease, prevention is the only wise course to follow. You can positively depend on Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of liver and kidneys, and also ensure the regularity of movement of the bowels. It is only by the activity of these organs that the blood can be kept pure and free from uric acid and other substances which form deposits in the arteries and at other points in the human system, causing pain, suffering and serious disease.

When you think of the scores of common ills, such as colds, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, backaches, etc., which arise from a torpid condition of these organs, you will better understand the reason why Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the favorite family medicine in many thousands of homes. By keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels active they cure the common ills of life, and prevent serious disease. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

FEW CASUALTIES IN SERBIA.

Only 86 Were Killed—Official Figures Given in the House of Commons This Afternoon.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The total of British casualties resulting from the Salonika expedition into Serbia was only 1,276.

These figures were given in the House of Commons this afternoon by Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War.

Mr. Tennant said that of the total only one officer and 85 men of other ranks had been killed.

At Christmas, when all your thoughts turn to all who are dearest to us, surely we shall not forget those who are cut off from the joys of home and family, and have risked their lives in the service of their King and country." — Princess Alexander of Teck.

Changes in Storm Centre of World War Appear as Panorama of Events

Shifts on the European Checkerboard Since War's Beginning Not a Little Bewildering—A Few Thoughts on the Side Show

By Alfred J. West.

It is interesting, and not a little bewildering, to observe how the storm centre of war has changed and changed again since the war began. Since the murder at Serajevo, which was destined to set Europe ablaze, the tendency has been for public attention to drift farther and farther east. After the first onrush upon Paris had been stopped by the battles of the Marne and the Aisne, and the road to Calais blocked by the bloody conflicts around Ypres, the panorama of events changed its scene to the Carpathians, where the Russians' magnificent but premature capture of Galicia held us spellbound until the dramatic assault on the Dardanelles created a diversion. Then came von Mackensen's irresistible sweep eastward from Cracow, with its crushing blow on the Dunajec, and after that stronghold after stronghold fell into the enemy's hands until Lemberg, Przemysl, Warsaw, Novo Georgievsk, Ivangorod, and Brest Litovsk had been lost. Then, if we except the excitement caused by our attacks on Loos and Hulluch, Serbia and the fiery ordeal to which she is being subjected have been the chief sources of thought and anxiety.

The Balkan Problem.

At the moment the Balkan problem fills the eye. We feel instinctively that the duration of the war will be very materially affected by whether we evolve a satisfactory solution of our eastern worries. Of course, there have always been two schools of conflicting opinion on the subject. Some have urged that the war can only be won by killing Germans; that it is easier and more economical to kill Germans in France and in Flanders than in, say, Serbia or Gallipoli; and that, as the western front is the decisive front, all force should be concentrated there for the supreme task of driving the Germans back across their own frontier. Others have urged that the longest way round would prove the shortest cut home. They argue—and the argument is at least a plausible one—that the Balkans form the one terrain where Britain, France, Italy, Russia, Serbia and such Balkan allies as we could secure unite their forces for a common purpose. First Turkey, then Austria, would fall before so irresistible a union of forces; then Germany, held firmly in the west by the Franco-British armies, would be threatened with invasion from west, south and east. On paper, at all events, the situation would be a most favorable one.

Diplomatic Failures.

'How, then, do we stand to-day? It must be confessed that the Balkan school of strategists have only won such reluctant attention as the force of circumstances has imposed upon the Wise Men of Downing street and Whitehall. Even when the importance of the east was admitted, as in the case of the Dardanelles expedition, and subsequently in the case of Serbia, the military forces were not forthcoming to carry out effectively the plan of campaign which the situation demanded. Diplomatically, we have failed on account of reasons which, although not ethically culpable, show, nevertheless a conspicuous inability to appreciate what would be the determining factor in Balkan politics. The determining factor was brute force, and while we placed our hands upon our hearts and took Heaven to witness our impeccable intentions, while we alternately cajoled and menaced recalcitrant politicians, Germany gathered a mighty army and brought it to the Serbian border as evidence to Bulgaria of her good faith in the matter. The result is common knowledge.

Clean hands and a pure heart count for little in the tortuous by-paths of Balkan intrigue. What does count is strength and success. Germany made an ocular demonstration of the former, while we, in Gallipoli, under the very noses of the people whom we wished to impress, could not muster up even a colorable imitation of the latter. This is not written by way of criticism, but rather of explanation, for these circumstances count for far more than King Constantine's German wife or the Rumanian king's Teutonic blood, or the thousand and one irrelevant trifles which obsess the so-called newspaper military experts.

Gallipoli Campaign.

Public opinion, especially when it is kept so much in the dark as it is at present, is apt to rush to extremes. From ignoring the importance of the near east, it is now inclined to overrate it. Let us try to see the situation as it is. In Gallipoli, so far as we know, things are at a standstill and unless the unexpected happens our forces must spend the winter months there without making any appreciable progress; but, at the same time, it should be recognized that they are chaining to the peninsula about a quarter of a million Turks who might otherwise be engaged in assisting the Bulgarians in their struggle with the allies along the Serbo-Greek border. This in itself is no small matter. Then the invaders of Serbia, although they have gained possession of the Nish-Sofia section of the Berlin to Constantinople railway line, will have to repair it before they can send any large supplies to the Turks. That represents a gain of time, and between this and the end of the year time may mean almost as much to us as it meant to Germany in her first campaign against France.

We must recognize, however, that an army so well equipped as that of Germany will carry with it all the artisans necessary for a speedy reconstruction of the destroyed railway track. Bridges and tunnels can soon be rebuilt, and connection between Berlin and Constantinople is already claimed by the Germans. Now, our panic-mongers tell us, Germany will be able to send large armies, via Turkey, into Egypt and India. Geographically, this may be an accurate contention, but strategically it is impracticable, because Germany has not the men at her disposal for any such an enterprise. We need not profess, like the "experts" to be able to figure out Germany's exact available man-power to know that after seventeen months of murderous war she cannot extend her military resources indefinitely over two more continents. A much more probable step would be an attempt, not to sent German troops east, but to bring Turkish troops west; and this, in my opinion, would gravely endanger a revolution in the Ottoman empire, where the people in general are not so enchanted with Teutonic Kultur as the parasite Enver Pasha appears to be.

German Food Supply.

Other exponents of journalistic tures of the economic effect of Germany affecting a juncture with Turkey. This, they aver, will make the British blockade negligible, and grim spectre of famine will disappear from the central empires when food and raw material can be freely imported from the east. But can it? Neither Bulgaria, Serbia, nor European Turkey produces either food or raw material greatly in excess of its own requirements. In Asia Minor, to be sure, there are vast deposits of undeveloped minerals, but Germans must be more optimistic than we think them if they expect to hold out until supplies can be gained in that way. Then the granary of the east is found in the valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates, and rich supplies might be won from that quarter were it not for the unhappy fact that British and Indian troops already dominate it and are close to Bagdad.

It is necessary to weigh up all these considerations if we are to reach any sound conclusion as to the Balkan situation, and upon examination we find that while they do not as the "All is lost" brigade seem to fear, spell the end of the allies' cause, they afford subject for the deepest anxiety.

Rumania's Position.

Only one neutral power remains in the Balkans—Rumania—and at this juncture, to secure her assistance would be a very big matter indeed. In that country, probably, German agents have made less progress than in any other Balkan state, but that is not to say that their co-operation can be secured unless different methods are adopted from those which have lately characterized our diplomacy in the near east.

If Rumania can be convinced that we are really in earnest, and are prepared to play this game handsomely in the east, there is still a chance of securing the co-operation of her splendid army of 600,000—the finest fighting force in the Balkans. Once we have won her to our side, Russia could, by arrangement, pour her troops into Bulgaria through the Dobrudsha, or alternatively land them from the Black Sea at Varna or Burgas, while France, Britain and Italy landed more forces at Salonika. Such a course would effectively turn the tables upon our Bulgarian and Turkish enemies, and would render the Austro-German incursion into the east a costly and abortive undertaking. Are we equal to the task? Will Lord Kitchener's visit in the east result in a well-considered and resolute policy being adopted and carried through? When we can answer these questions we will be in a position to estimate the value of the Balkan side-show.

CONSCRIPTION MAY SPLIT QUAKER RANKS

Possibility of Compulsory Enlistment Offers a Serious Problem—Circular Appeal to Friends to Stand Fast.

For the English Quakers the possibility of conscription in Great Britain offers a very serious problem. It has even been suggested that there is danger of a split in the ranks of the church. A committee from the central organization is now engaged in sounding every male communicant of military age as to his intentions toward the society in the event of conscription.

A circular which has been sent to these possible subjects of conscription by the committee says:

"Whatever the future may have in store for us we are at least faced with the possibility of military or industrial compulsion. Should this actually come about, we assume that friends will stand fast to their belief in the sanctity of human personality, and to the principles of Jesus Christ as they understand them, be the consequences what they may. We must uphold liberty of conscience, a right won by much suffering in the past, and not lightly to be relinquished.

Should friends in any proposed legislation receive favored treatment, which is not extended to other conscientious objectors (as has been the case in the Militia acts) we feel we should be in a difficult position. We should wish to support those outside our membership as far as possible and some friends feel it might be right for them to resign their membership to this end.

"This is a practical method which merits earnest consideration; but it should not be forgotten that it might prevent us serving the society in other directions, and its desirability must be carefully weighed against the force of the argument that if Quakers are given, and accept, exemption, there is every reason why the convictions of other conscientious objectors should be similarly recognized."

Each recipient of the circular is asked a series of questions as to his intentions, in order that those who wish to stand out in the event of conscription may be able to keep in close touch with the committee for rapid communication of advice and assistance."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores its Thickness and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this smart frock we have the over-blouse idea very prettily carried out. The dress has a plain blouse which is made high in the neck with a wide flat collar as a finish. It also has sleeves which are full length with a cuff at the wrist. Over this blouse is worn the outer waist, which is in the nature of a jacket. It is cut away at the neck, showing the underwaist as a chemisette and it is also sloped away a little above the belt, leaving a bit of the blouse showing as a vest. It is, of course, sleeveless.

The skirt has two gores. It is of circular cut and is gathered or shirred at the top, where it is joined to the jacket. A band of velvet ribbon marks the waistline and a second band is placed a trifle lower down. These may be fastened with buckles.

Such dresses as this are made of serge or gabardine in plain colors or plaids and worn with underwaists of white wash material or of some bright colored silk or satin. Of course this arrangement also may be reversed.

The dress pattern, No. 7,428, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 1⅛ yards of 44 inch material with 2¼ yards of velvet ribbon; for blouse, 1¼ yards of 36 inch goods and 2¼ yards of edging.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE FRENCH CAPTURE 1200 PRISONERS

"Blue Devils" Have Taken New Positions

FRENCH CAPTURE SUMMIT OF HARTMANSWEILERKOPF

To-day's Official Communique Says That Over Two Hundred German Officers Were Captured in Series of Successful French Advances--Berlin Admits Defeat --Bill Providing For a Million More British Soldiers Passed by House of Commons at 5:30 O'clock This Morning.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official) Dec. 22.—The French "blue devils" continuing their victories east of Hartmannsweillerkopf, have advanced to new positions and taken 1,200 prisoners including 312 officers, the War Office announced this afternoon.

BERLIN, via Wireless, Dec. 22.—French troops have captured the summit of Hartmannsweillerkopf by assault with strong forces, the War Office admitted this afternoon. The battle for its possession has been going on since April. Part of the position, however, has been recaptured by the Germans, it was stated.

Hartmannsweillerkopf is a dominating peak in Southern Alsace, overlooking the roads leading to the Rhine. Yesterday afternoon the French attached German positions in Hartmannsweillerkopf and Hirsastein, north of Wattweiler, employed strong forces, said the Berlin official statement.

The French succeedde in taking the top of Hartmannsweillerkopf. They also took a small section of trench at Hilsensiarst.

BERLIN, via Wireless, Dec. 22.—General von Emmich, the conqueror of Liege, died this morning at Hanover aged 66. After the conquest of Liege, von Emmich was succeeded by General Marwitz on August 15, 1914. He was several times reported in ill health, and it was once rumoured he had committed suicide.

BERLIN, Dec. 22.—The British troops withdrawn from the Dardanelles are being sent to Saloniki, according to the Athens correspondent of the Cologne Gazette.

BERLIN, via Wireless, Dec. 22.—Emperor William is ill and will be unable to make visit he had planned to the Western front. He has slight inflammation of the cellular system.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—After a night of the most heated war debates in months, the House of Commons at 5:30 a.m. to-day agreed to pass the Government bill, calling a million more Britishers to the colours. The adoption of the measure puts in the field the greatest British army in history. Its number is estimated at about four million men. With these millions the Government hopes to strike for decisive victories in every theatre of war, and end the conflict within another year.

The sharpest shafts yet hurled in the House of Commons in the arraignment of the Dardanelles campaign preceded the adjournment at dawn today. The most interesting feature of the session was the spectacle of Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond, erstwhile the bitterest of enemies, joining in criticising the Government, following the failure of the Dardanelles affair. The concensus of opinion was that Britain at this stage required new army leaders, if the best use was to be made of the additional million men that Parliament was asked to authorize.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—It is officially announced this afternoon that Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald Murray will succeed Sir Charles Monro in command at the Dardanelles, and Sir Charles Monro will command the first army corps in France in succession to Sir Douglas Haig.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The British casualties since the beginning of the retreat from before Bagdad to Kut-El-Amara, 110 miles southwest, now total nearly 4,000. A previous statement put the losses at nearly 5,000.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 22.—A German munitions factory at Minister Westphalia exploded early to-day. According to advices received the town was badly damaged. Railway communication has been interrupted.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 22.—The United States will not argue with Austria any points involved in the sinking of the steamer Ancona, with the loss of a dozen American lives. In the second American note made public here at noon to-day, when it was delivered in Vienna, to Foreign Minister Burian, the United States Government said it must "renew the definite, but respectful demands made in its communication of the sixth of December." This second note, extremely brief, is friendly in tone, but leaves no doubt of the determination of Uncle Sam that Austria shall make full reparation for the American lives lost and the punishment of the Austrian submarine commander whose "culpability is in any case established," and whose act, details of which were given in the Austrian Admiralty statement, is held to be "a wilful violation of the rules of international law, and the principles of humanity."

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE MEETINGS A SUCCESS

The West Peterborough Farmers' Institute meetings last week were on the whole decidedly successful, being marked by unusually effective addresses.

The first meeting was held at Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, on Dec. 15th. Mr. McGregor, the president, opened the meeting with a short address. Mr. Henry Grose of Lefroy, followed with an address on "Maintaining the Fertility of the Soil," and Mr. McDowell, assistant district representative of the Department of Agriculture at Norwood spoke on the "Use and Value of Lightning Rods."

There was a large attendance in the evening, the meeting also being held in Stewart's Hall. After the president's opening address, Mr. Henry Grose spoke on "The Home Life." Mrs. Watters of Toronto on "Your Influence in the Home," and Mr. McDowell on "Seeds and Pests."

Mrs. Taylor and Miss Hanbridge contributed a duet and Mr. Clayton Hanbridge a vocal solo, both numbers being greatly enjoyed.

At Lakefield.

The meetings on the following day were at Lakefield. At the afternoon and evening sessions the president, Mr. McGregor, presided. The programme in the evening consisted of the following:

Address—"Plants and Their Pests"—Mr. McRae, B.S.A., Norwood.

INVESTIGATION IS SUSPENDED UNTIL FRIDAY MORNING

Judge Huycke Busy With Appointments Previously Arranged—Doubtful When Decision Will Be Handed Down

WILL EXAMINE MR. GORDON

Appointments for to-day and to-morrow made by Judge Huycke previous to the arrangement of the School Board investigation was responsible for the suspension of the proceedings until Friday. An adjournment was called at five o'clock Tuesday afternoon on account of the inability of some teachers to be present. Mr. Gordon stated they were conducting the term examinations and could not be present.

Mr. Peck suggested that Mr. Gordon might take up some of the other phases of his general charge, but Mr. O'Connell replied that the case was developing in a regular way, and for the reason stated he was not prepared to continue the case until the teachers they wished to examine were available.

This investigation, by the resolution authorizing it, is Janus-faced. By Mr. Gord[illegible] desire it has been particularly enquiring into Mr. W. H. Hill's affairs, and it is also directed against Mr. Gordon's legal right to sit on the Board of Education by reason of the fact that he holds the position of City Solicitor. It was suggested yesterday afternoon that Mr. Hall might commence the examination of Mr. Gordon, but Mr. Hall declined to interrupt the proceedings at that stage, and Judge Huycke agreed that he was adopting the right course.

From the present prospects it is scarcely possible that the result of the investigation will be made known before the end of the year. The exhibits are now in the fifties, a mass of statements and other apposite matter having been put in by Mr. O'Connell, which the Judge will have to review, and probably not until the evidence has been transcribed.

Member of Peace Party Is Dead

Lloyd M. Bingham, Official Entertainer on Board Oscar II. Died To-day of Pneumonia

Special to The Examiner:

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 22.—Lloyd M. Bingham, husband of Amlia Bingham, a well known actress, and member of the Ford peace party, died here to-day of pneumonia. Bingham was one of the first to accept Ford's invitation, and accompanied the expedition as an official entertainer. His Bohemianism offended some of the more puritanical of the voyagers. They urged that he be left behind at Christiania. Bingham became ill in the midst of this disapprobation. He contracted pleuro-pneumonia aboard the ship and was removed to a hospital the day after Oscar II reached Christiania.

The Norwegian press became more friendly toward the Ford enterprise to-day. They commented favourably on Ford's pledge of a gift of $10,000 to Norwegian students for University buildings.

THE WEATHER

After a few days of comparatively mild weather, lower temperatures are again recorded. This morning the thermometer stood at three above zero. There was also a heavy white frost.

Kaiser and His Titles.

The Kaiser is a man of many titles, being an Emperor, a King, eighteen times a duke, twice a grand duke, ten times a count, fifteen times a seigneur, three times a margrave —these add up to fifty, and he is one or two other things, Count-Prince, etc., making his titles at least fifty-four. He has been given a good many more titles within the last fifteen months, but they are not so flattering.

Lieut. Colonel T. J. Johnston has been appointed to command the 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F., vice, Lieut. Colonel J. Mills, who has been appointed Inspector of Supplies and Transport.

Strength Struck Off—

C. R. Widdifield, Lieut.,
Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

Grant Potter, eldest son of Rev. James G. Potter, M.A., pastor of MacVicar Memorial Church, Montreal, and formerly of Peterborough, has enlisted in the 87th Grenadier Battalion, and will leave shortly for St. John's, Que., where the unit is in winter quarters. Mr. Potter resigned his position as superintendent of the roll department of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, to go to the front.

Lieut. Romeyne Stevenson of the 57th Regiment, and son of Lt.-Col. A. Stevenson, former Commanding Officer of the 57th, has been attached to the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. The 57th Regiment has so far supplied fourteen officers for the County Battalion.

A consignment of khaki caps has arrived in the stores of the 93rd Battalion. The supply on hand was exhausted long ago, and for some time the blue caps of the 57th Regiment have been used.

Pte. R. Wedlock is on military police duty. Lance Corp. J. Lemay of the military police is absent on leave at his home in Lakefield.

Sergt. Frank Traynor is confined to the military hospital at the Armouries. He has been ill for several days.

Sergt.-Major F. E. Durieu of the instructional cadre, 5th (Quebec) Division, who has been in charge of the examination and signal service of the Quebec defences for the past ten months, is in Peterborough, renewing old acquaintances.

The Kingston Standard says: Sergt. Major Bailey of the central registry, at the armouries, has returned to his duties, after spending some time with the 93rd battalion in Peterborough as assistant Adjutant. Mr. Bailey was the recipient of many tokens of esteem from officers and men, and all regretted his leaving. He has been eighteen years in the service in Kingston and was given his long service medal in the camp last summer.

The 146th Battalion (Frontenacs) received 80 recruits last week, and leads the division in recruiting for the week, says the Kingston Standard.

A supply of caps and collar badges was received yesterday and they are being issued to the men of the 93rd. The regimental cap badge has not yet been received.

"I WAS OF THE IMPRESSION THEY GAVE ME A LITTLE INSURANCE TO KEEP ME QUIET"--WM. MIGHT

Old Insurance Agent of This City Was of Opinion That W. H. Hill and the Davis-Thompson Co. Had More Than Their Share of Insurance on School Property.

YESTERDAY'S EVIDENCE CONCLUDED

The report of yesterday's sessions of the Board of Education investigation was necessarily limited, but the conclusion of it is given herewith:

Mr. O'Connell read the following statement of how the school insurance is divided—Hill, Weddell & Co., $54,500; John Crane, $10,000; Davis-Thompson Co., $74,000; Wm. Might, $10,500; T. E. Bradburn, $13,500; R. J. Kidd, $15,000; H. P. Lindsay, $5,000; Gordon Hall, $5,000.

"You heard that Mr. Davis was a trustee at one time? Yes.

If these facts are correct $128,000 of insurance or the schools is held by men connected with the Board of Education at some time or other.

Rendering of Accounts

Reverting to the payment of premiums Mr. O'Connell put the question—in many cases premiums are not paid to you when due?

Yes.

When you make your remittance to your companies before the premium is paid to you the insured is then your debtor and not the company's?

I think so.

In each case you represent the person insured as being indebted to Mr. Hill? Yes.

In so far as your bills show, instead of being a debtor of the Insurance Company the insured are debtors to W. H. Hill and Co? Yes.

But there is a class of customer for whom you make a departure, representing him not as a debtor to Mr. Hill but to the insurance company? Yes.

And whether before or after Mr. Hill makes a remittance of premiums to the company you represent to these people that they are debtors to the company and not to Mr. Hill? Yes.

The first of these customers is the Board of Education? Yes.

Also the municipality of Peterboro? Yes.

Mr. Weddell said a regular billhead was sent to the City Trust.

The Nicholl's Hospital Board receives a bill similar to that rendered the Board of Education.

Mr. Hill is a member of the Nicholl's Hospital Board? Yes.

So that the Board of Education, Nicholls Hospital Board and Corporation of the city are represented as indebted to the insurance companies? Yes.

These are the only institutions to whom you send a special account form?

All I know of.

To Judge Huycke, Mr. Weddell said the only distinction was made in the sending out of bills. There is no distinction after they come into the office, and the cheques are placed to the credit of the Hill, Weddell and Co. account.

Mr. O'Connell—Do you know Faw-

POWELL CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER CASE ADJOURNED

Driver of the Car That Struck and Killed Coleman Blewett is Given His Liberty

MAGISTRATE'S REMARKS

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Some three weeks ago Coleman Blewett of Peterborough, was struck by an auto, then running on St. Clair Avenue and died as the result of his injuries. A coroner's jury found that the deceased was "accidentally" killed, but that there had been "incompetent driving." Yesterday George Powell, the driver of the car, was charged with manslaughter, and through his counsel, Mr. T. O'Connor, pleaded not guilty.

Powell was brought to court on a summons, a fact which apparently surprised the Magistrate so much his Worship refused to grant bail.

"The outstanding fact is that the other man is dead," said the Colonel "Why wasn't this man arrested?"

"A man is not to be punished because another is dead," replied Assistant Crown Attorney Hughes.

"In olden days, if a man ran over and killed another, he was sent right off to Siberia," said his Worship. "I cannot see why this man was merely summoned."

"We have no right to try cases in our offices, your Worship. We are submitting the case to the court for trial. In view of the coroner's verdict, we issued a summons instead of a warrant. The man's punishment should come after, not before, his trial," concluded Mr. Hughes.

The evidence will be heard on the 28th. In the meantime Powell, a Toronto man, is at liberty.

Will Run For Mayor

The City Council will meet in special session this evening for the purpose of dealing with a number of matters left over from previous meetings. It is expected that Ald. G. W. Green will tender his resignation as member of the City Council in order to facilitate his entry into the Mayoralty contest. One year ago Ald. Green was re-elected for a two year term. "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 22, 1915

HE WILL DO.

A German newspaper seems to draw comfort from its statement that Sir Douglas Haig, new Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in France, "has had no experience in handling large masses of men." Just the same he knows how to handle small masses of men. With his share of "French's contemptible little army," a division, as the Ottawa Journal points out—at Mons, St. Quentin, Le Cateau and La Fere, he handled large masses of Germans without gloves. With the bitter experience of the past the Germans should get over the habit of despising their enemies. Sir Douglas Haig will serve the purpose, and will have something to work with besides a "contemptible little army."

MUNITIONS AND MEN.

Lloyd George, when he talks, touches the core of the matter, as he did when he said—"With regard to munitions, what is spared in money is spilled in blood." This is a momentous and startling truth. With the terrible expansion of the war area, with the millions of men employed, and the immense machinery of destruction at work, with incessant activity, the loss of life is simply appalling. And every day the war is prolonged adds to the frightful loss of life. In face of the declaration of the British Minister of Munitions, we in Canada are incited to facilitate to the possible utmost our contribution of shells. It is a pleasure to know that we are in a position to do this. We have a new and immensely improved system of handling contracts for shells. We have an example of what to avoid by the heretofore waste of time and money in providing shells under the discarded system, and we shall lay it to heart. There is a companion aspect to our duty in regard to economically and expeditiously providing ammunition. If munitions are to be a winning element in this war, they are useless without men to give them effect. Lloyd George's call for munitions involves an equally urgent call for men. The appeal to the young man who has not enlisted, and is eligible, takes new emphasis in view of of Lloyd George's declaration regarding munitions. If, by sparing money, we prolong the war and add to it the loss of life, so by sparing men we shall contribute to the same result. Our young men should not act from impulse only; there is sound reason for joining the ranks now.

GERMAN METHODS UNCHANGEABLE,

The German finds he has as little power to change his spirit as the leopard has to change his spots. He is possessed with an evil spirit, an ingrained, educated disposition to deceive, and lie, and tyrannize by means of his deceit. The German people have for years been fooled and misled, and been swindled into falling in with, into tolerating the plans of the militarists. The truth has been kept from them in regard to the origin of the war, and the truth is being kept from them as to its progress. The German people have been fed on foundationless stories of victory, and the game of popular deluding is going on still. In the Reichstag, or German Parliament, the Secretary of the Treasury, blundered into the truth when he said "there will be a colossal burden of taxation on Germany"—but to be German, he had to conjoin the process of popular delusion, and he added—"no matter how large a war indemnity is received." He has no warrant in any way for holding out hopes of a war indemnity to be paid to Germany. The indemnities will go the other way; Germany will have to pay them. She began a war of outrage; she has continued a war of outrage, and she must met the bill, pay the penalty.. Germany and her allies are virtually beaten now; but the cleaning up process may be long and arduous; but of the ultimate result there can be no doubt.. Germany has shot her bolt; she has failed in every objective, and weakened, and with the end of her resources in sight, she faces defeat. The powers arrayed against her are growing stronger. They have taken their second wind, and are going and growing stronger every day. Did you ever try to part a bull dog's jaws when he had got his grip? If you did you will know how John Bull is going to hang on.

SOUND POSITION OF BANK OF OTTAWA.

The annual statement of the Bank of Ottawa for the year ended November 30, which appeared in the Examiner on Monday, reveals a continuation of the steady progress and development which have marked its history for a number of years past. Its volume of assets has now passed the figure of fifty millions, and its liquid assets of twenty-three and a half millions, place it among the very strongest institutions in the country at a time when many banks are showing abnormal strength.

The Bank of Ottawa, like its sister banks, has been faced with the problem of maintaining earnings in spite of increased deposits and a decreased demand for banking funds for commercial activity throughout the country. It is interesting to note that it is solving it in part by the acquisition of a large amount of Canadian municipal bonds and other public securities, which have been obtainable during the past year on terms to yield a very good revenue and an excellent prospect of enhanced market values. The total of securities of these classes now held by the Bank of Ottawa is over four million dollars, against less than two million a year ago, and it also reports an increase in other classes of gilt-edged bonds. It has also very large balances due to it by other Canadian banks and by banks elsewhere than in Canada. Its holdings in actual cash (specie and Dominion notes), which were large in 1914, and which, of course, are unproductive of revenue, have not been materially increased.

Current loans in Canada are $27,299,978, to which must be added, for comparison with 1914, the loans to municipalities, which were $1,672,744 making a total of $28,972,722. These items were reported together in 1914 as $34,342,066. The reduction shows how greatly the decreased commercial activity in the country has reduced the demand for banking accommodation.

The city and district interests are under the capable custody of Mr. A. H. Knight, Manager of the Peterborough Branch.

DEVELOPMENT OF MACHINE GUN.

The ribaudequin Chinois captured from the Chinese by the French in 1680, is probably the earliest type of machine gun known. Those who have knowledge of the Chinese believe that the model was produced somewhere about the beginning of the fourteenth century. It consists of a very heavy truck, re-enforced with iron, on which are mounted four iron barrels, nine feet long. Since these barrels were practically stationary they must have been used for a volley of grape or case shot at very close range. They were fired simultaneously by a trail of powder lead to each fuse hole.

The next weapon important in the development of machine guns was the Danish 9-barrel gun mounted in sets of three on a two-wheeled carriage This proved of great value, and was effective in that one set of barrels could always be held in reserve, while the other was loaded. It was about this time that America startled the English with their bronze revolving cannon, capable of firing three charges in quick succession. This gun was very popular in the War of 1812, and doubtless was responsible for some of our sensational sea victories.

A satisfactory machine gun was not found until breech-loading had been discovered. In 1860, Richard Gatling produced a gun which proved most successful in both the Civil and the Spanish wars. It was distinctly an infantry type gun. The ten barrels were set around an axis and fired in turn as the revolving mechanism operated by a crank brought them into position. Cartridges were arranged in a drum, and as one drum emptied another was put in its place. Experimental Gatlings were constructed which could give a thousand shots per minute. This gun had a long range and was used most effectively But a grave disadvantage was the impossibility of avoiding frequent jams. Its weight and the necessity of operating the breech mechanism by hand were also serious objections.—Scientific America.

TO EXTEND LIFE OF PARLIAMENT ONE YEAR MORE

While the Star has expressed its approval of the Prime Minister's proposal that the life of the present Parliament be extended for one year—in order that the country may devote its whole attention to the supreme business of war—yet we are of the opinion that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Parliamentary following, if they give their assent, ought to accompany it with some urgent suggestions to the government whose term of office they are asked to prolong.

The fact is well known that the political truce has amounted to little more than this: That since the war began the Opposition has refrained from opposing. The ministry has made no overtures towards arranging anything more than that; the Liberal leaders have not been called into consultation on any of the extraordinary problems that suddenly confronted the country; none but supporters of the party in office have been asked to place their abilities at the service of the country by acting on any of the several commissions that have been appointed.

This being so, and political discussion having ceased the country over, it is only when Parliament meets that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the Liberals generally, can formulate their policies and submit to the government the advice they have to offer.

If the opposition in Parliament assents, as we think it should, to the proposed extension of the life of Parliament, some strong recommendations should be made at the same time to the ministry. Some of these might be:

(1) That a Minister of Munitions be appointed for the duration of the war, with large powers—similar to those exercised by the British Minister of Munitions—so that the industrial resources of the Dominion may be mobilized in the production of war materials.

(2) That the chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board in Canada is, from the work already in his charge, indicated by circumstances as the man for the new portfolio as he could combine and unify the production of both British and Canadian war supplies in this country and in time place large orders from the allies.

(3) That war profits be taxed and that a system of accounting be instituted, without further loss of time, so that exorbitant profits may be rebated to the British and Canadian governments.

(4) That the work of handling returned soldiers and fitting them back into civil life be recognized as the tremendous problem which it is, and complete detailed plans elaborated well in advance of the return of soldiers in great numbers

(5) That plans be worked out at once in full detail for placing on the land in organized communities those large numbers of British soldiers who will migrate to Canada not only at the end of the war, but when the spring of 1916 opens.

These are some points in which the public is particularly interested and would like to see Parliament urge up on the attention of the government

We are in favour of extending the life of the present parliament of Canada for one year, because we do not believe the war will have ended by September next, when the life of Parliament runs out. It would scarcely do to extend the life of Parliament by a lesser period than twelve months. Nor do we want to see the war activities of the country suspended, as they would be by a general election, at any time during the war. We are in favour of the adoption of Sir Robert Borden's proposal because it will clear the air, it will send election bosses to the right about; it will shut down the rival campaign literature factories of the two parties, and will ensure the country an uninterrupted period in which to concentrate all the efforts of all the people on those extraordinary labours which the war imposes and of which the public is only now beginning to learn the importance and urgency.—Toronto Star.

Yesterday Was The Shortest Day

Winter Made Its Official Debut —Days Will Begin to Lengthen

Yesterday was the shortest day of the year, only 8 hours, 53 minutes from sunrise to sunset. Winter officially started on its cold race yesterday.

Yesterday marked the winter solstice, the word "solstice" meaning the "sun stands still," in reference to the sun's apparent southern motion, when he is at his lowest in our sky at noonday.

From to-day the daylight hours will gradually increase a few minutes more of sunlight each day, pointing to the coming of summer again. The earth's apparent easterly motion is varied throughout the year. The nearer the earth is to the sun the faster we travel, and the farther away the slower we go.

The distance of the earth from the sun varies in amount to about 3,000,000 miles during the year. Its mean distance is 93,109,000 miles. Strange to relate we are nearest to the sun, about two weeks from to-day, early in January and farthest away, about two weeks after June 21 — the summer solstice.

GERMAN LOSSES 2,524,460 UP TO DECEMBER FIRST

LONDON, Dec. 22. — Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, made the statement in the House of Commons yesterday that the total number of casualties published in the official lists for Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria and Wurtemberg up to November 30 were 2,524,460. Of this number, Mr. Tennant added, 484,238 men were killed or died of their wounds, 354,187 were severely wounded, 27,674 died of disease, and 381,149 were missing. Naval casualties, he said, were not included in these figures.

FARMERS' OPINION

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—As farmers, who have to get accommodation whilst in the city, we would like to insert a few lines regarding the American Hotel of this city. This popular hotel, that we have known for many years, has recently passed under control of Mr Charles Perry, who, for years, ran the Royal Hotel at Port Hope. The reason for this letter is that not only the city residents, but the visiting farmers, must have accommodation whilst here.

Since taking hold of the American Hotel Mr. Perry has remodelled the whole building inside, making it all that a visitor could wish. He pays particular attention both to hotel and yard, to the farmers' needs. This is the kind of attention that the farmer is entitled to, and that will mean in the future a greater patronage by the farmers of this splendid county of ours.

ANOTHER ZEPPELIN RAID EXPECTED BY LONDON

LONDON, Wednesday, December 22.—The possibility of further Zeppelin activity is agitating London as the result of the receipt of a telegram from Amelland, Holland, stating that at 12 o'clock noon today an airship passed over North Ameland bound in a westerly direction.

Scotland Yard to-night issued a note of warning to workshoppers that if they desire to hold watch night services they must take care to observe the orders regarding the shading of lights in churches, as "the possibility of attacks by hostile aircraft at this time of the year cannot be disregarded."

QUARTERS FOR TROOPS PARTLY DESTROYED

MEN AT PARRY SOUND ARE NOW IN A BOARDING HOUSE.

PARRY SOUND, Dec. 22.—The members of the 162nd Parry Sound overseas battalion were compelled to make a quick move when their barracks the Belvidere Summer resort, in which they have been quartered, was partially destroyed. Fire broke out in the tower over the vestibule and quickly spread to the attics of both the north and south wings, and owing to the fact that the building is on high ground and three storeys, with the fire in the roof, made it difficult to fight but the pressure was excellent, and after a fierce fight of four hours the flames were subdued. The tower and the roof of the south wing were destroyed but the damage can soon be repaired. In the meantime, the troops are quartered in the St. Charles boarding house, lately erected to accommodate the Nobel workmen.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Department of Justice officials declared today they expected another important arrest in New York in connection with the Koenig case this afternoon. They declared this arrest would bring out important revelations in the Welland Canal and other conspiracies. Officials declared they had learned that Koenig had visited several munition plants on both sides of the border

cett who was employed by the Water Commissioners?

Yes.

Was he insured in the Sun Life? Yes.

Was his insurance effected while Mr. Hill was a member of the Water Commission?

I don't know.

Mr. Hall objected to this question and Judge Huycke upheld his objection.

Mr. Hill and Agents.

Discussing Mr. Hill's authority over the agents Cameron and Moore, Mr. O'Connell asked—"If Mr. Hill suggested to the head office that Mr. Cameron was satisfactory as an agent, would the Head office acquiesce in a suggestion for his removal? Yes.

Judge Huycke—Has your office anything to do with paying Cameron?

We pay him.

Mr. O'Connell—Mr Hill's salary is not affected by the volume of business?

Not that I know of.

Has he any interest in premiums earned by Mr. Elliott? Yes.

By Mr. Moore? No.

It makes no difference to Mr. Hill how much or little, Moore earns? No.

Who is the senior medical examiner for the Sun Life?

Dr. Burnham.

Is he a member of the Board of Education? Yes.

To Mr. Hall, Mr Weddell stated that Langford and Sheehy came directly to them for insurance probably when the walls of the Queen Mary school were well advanced.

That was long after they had entered into their contract?

Yes.

Mr. G. H. Thompson.

Mr. G. H. Thompson, Secretary of the Board of Education, was next called.

To Mr. O'Connell, he said, that Mr. Hill was re-elected in 1914 a member of the Board and took the office.

Judge Huycke—How long has Mr. Hill been on the Board.

Mr. Thompson—Since 1886.

Judge Huycke—Continuously.

I think so.

Mr. Hill's Oath of Office.

Mr. Thompson presented the oath of office Mr. Hill took in 1914.

"I do solemnly promise and declare that I will truly, faithfully and impartially, to the best of my knowledge and ability, execute the office of member of the Board of Education for the city of Peterboro and that I have not received and will not receive any payment or regard, a promise of such, on the exercise of any partiality or malversation, or other undue execution of the said office, and that I have not by myself or partner, either directly or indirectly, any interest in any contract with or on behalf of this said corporation.

"Taken before me at Peterboro this 4th day of Jan. 1914.

GEORGE BURRNHAM, J.P.

The Afternoon Session.

At the resumption of the investigation following the noon adjournment the examination of Mr. J. H. Thompson, Secretary of the Board of Education, was continued by Mr. O'Connell at the latter's request. Mr. Thompson produced a resolution confirming acceptance of an offer made by the Underwood Typewriter Company, whereby the company agreed to supply ten new machines and take in exchange nine old ones for a difference of seventy-five dollars. Witness said Mr. Hill became a member of the School Board in 1886 and in 1905 was elected chairman of the committee on appointments, a position, which Mr. Hill has held ever since.

Machines of One Make.

Examined by Mr. R. R. Hall witness said that the chief objection raised when the typewriters were installed, related to the installation of machines of one make. Some of the school trustees were inclined to the opinion that it would be better to install machines of various makes as it would give the pupils a chance to become familiar with more than one make of machine.

Mr. Thompson recalled three instances where accounts were rendered by insurance agencies in the name of the company holding the insurance, namely, H. P. Lindsay, The Phoenix Insurance company and the company represented by Mr. Hill.

The eye of the Public.

Mr. Hall dealt with the facilities afforded the newspaper reporters, by the School Board for the inspection of all accounts and other matters relating to the affairs of the Board.

Mr. Thompson said the reporters attended all meetings of the Board and all accounts were open for inspection as well as any other business connected with the Board.

Mr. G. N. Gordon became a member of the Board at the beginning of the present year said Mr. Thompson. He is a member of the Property Committee and Committee on Appointments. The latter is composed of the Whole Board.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that the report made by the Finance Committee, would represent the Board as being indebted to the company holding the insurance and did not in any way identify the transaction with the agency represented by Mr. Hill.

Mr. Weddell of the firm of Hill and Weddell was recalled. In reply to Mr. O'Connell, witness named the following as policyholders in the company represented by Mr. Hill.:—Margaret Fisher, teacher, $1,000; R. A. McConnell, teacher, $2,000; Joseph Crowe, caretaker in one of the public schools, $1,000.

Mr. O. M. Steer.

O. M. Steer, appointed to the King George School since September, 1913 said he had fire and accident policies with Mr. Hill, the former for $1,000 He had the accident insurance in the same company before coming to Peterborough and simply had it transferred to the local office. Mr. Steer told of a life insurance conversation with Mr. Moore of Hill, Weddell & Co. Mr. Elliott delivered an account for the last accident premium, and a conversation at Mr. Steer's home led to his taking out fire insurance through Mr. Elliott.

To Mr. Hall, witness said agents for other companies had canvassed him at school several times.

Miss F. J. McKenzie of the Queen Mary School said she had no insurance. None of Mr. Hill's agents had canvassed her.

Mr. W. H. Walkey said his first Public School appointment was made here in 1886. He had been teaching in Peterborough since then, and is now on the Queen Alexandria school staff He showed three insurance policies none of them with Mr. Hill. He had never been canvassed by any of Mr Hill's agents.

Mr. V. R. Henry of the Collegiate staff, said he had a Canada Life policy and fire insurance with Davis-Thompson Co. He had been canvassed last Spring after school and before he left the building by a man who said he represented the Sun Life.

Miss E. M. Richardson.

Miss Ethel M. Richardson, kindergarten teacher at East City and Central Schools, said, she had a policy for $1,000 in the Sun Life, taken out last June through Mr. Cameron. She had been canvassed by an agent of one other company. Her father and brother each had a $1,000 policy in the Sun Life.

Miss Richardson said she had intended to take out a policy with another company, but her father had recommended Mr. Cameron to her.

Did you receive copies of "Sun shine?" Mr. O'Connell asked.

"She carries that with her" remarked Judge Huycke, with that blend of grace and dignity so pleasing in his address.

Mr. William Might,

William Might said he had been a resident of Peterborough thirty years and an insurance agent twenty-five years. He represented fire and accident companies only.

"You've been getting your share of the insurance on school property?"

"Well, I didn't think so, consider ing the number that shares it."

"I had the impression that I got a little insurance to keep me quiet," said Mr. Might, to the amusement of his audience.

He now carried $10,500 insurance on the schools. Reviewing his experiences he said he secured $2,000 about twelve years ago. In the first place he had handled only non-tariff companies. He was told that school insurance had to be with a tariff company. So he had to borrow a tariff company, and when he obtained one for his own agency he turned into it the insurance he had obtained. He knew now that the Board had insurance in non-tariff companies.

When the Collegiate Institute was being built he learned that $20,000 was to be divided among the companies. Three or four trustees got $3,000 or $4,000 of this insurance each, and another man who didn't have a company and couldn't get one placed $2,000 in a company he borrowed.

"So there was none left for you?" Mr. O'Connell remarked.

"Is that sympathy you're giving him?" remarked Mr. Hall.

"How long is it since you had a tariff company?" Mr. Hall asked in cross-examination.

"I can't give the number of years."

"Was it 4 or 5 years?"

"It was more than that. I have four tariff companies now."

"Did you ever personally interview the Chairman of the Finance Committee, for insurance, Mr. Eastwood for instance?"

"I did, when the last two schools were being built. He said it was going to be divided up."

"You got $3,000?"

"No; I didn't get any."

Mr. Might said the reason he got some of this insurance was because he had $10,500 already; and it was going to those who had none."

"I said," he continued, "how about the policies on these schools the contractors put on. He (Mr. Eastwood) said they couldn't be interfered with.'

Mr. Hall—"Did you expect that they would take that insurance off and give it to you"

"When they had $60,000 and I only $10,000. I thought the Board should give it to me."

"You thought Davis-Thompson Co. had more than their share?"

"I thought they [illegible] had more than their share."

"Did you talk to any other member of the Finance Committee?"

"To Mr. Ackerman once. I don't know if he was on that Committee."

"Did you interest any other members in your behalf"

"I don't remember."

"You were not very active for your own business"

"There were so many—"

"What did Mr. Ackerman say?"

"That he'd speak for me, and I believe he did."

"Well, you were not very active, were you?"

"I was not as interested as some. I thought I was dealing with a Board that had some business about them and were fair."

Mr. Peck—"You are not aware that any of the insurance was badly placed?"

"No."

"You are not objecting to any of the Companies carrying it?"

"No; I had occasion to object once and it was remedied.

"What was that?"

"On the Collegiate Institute, they hesitated to allow my tariff company to take $3,000. One company that would take five like it to equal mine had $6,000. I told the Secretary who was then acting, and he asked me which one. I said that if he would pay the same attention to others as he did to mine, he'd soon find out I learned through the press that the company had been changed.

"Who was its agent?"

"Mr. W. H. Hill."

Mr. Peck—"You said $2,000 of the Collegiate insurance went to a man who had no company, who was that?"

"Mr. Cyril Hill."

"He gave a good company?"

"He had no company."

"He placed the insurance with a good company?"

"It was a tariff company and a good company."

Regarding the Collegiate insurance, Mr. Might said to Mr. O'Connell, he believed Mr. Kidd got $10,000; he had none before; Gordon Hall got $5,000.

"What became of the rest?"

"I don't know."

"What two companies did, you think, have more than their share?"

"W. H. Hill and Davis Thompson."

"When the new schedule of insurance was to be prepared, did the Board tell you?"

"Yes."

"Was the insurance redistributed?"

"I don't think so."

Regarding the company he had objected to getting insurance, he said it was substituted by another of Mr. Hill's companies.

Mr. Might told Mr. Hall he had no objection to the companies carrying the insurance, and that their rates were the same as his.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hugheon Johnstone, painter and decorator, 310 College Street, will be answered—on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course

John R., Peterborough, Ont.—Having been a regular reader of the "Arts and Crafts" column since its inception, I take the liberty of asking your valued opinion as to which of all colours is the most visible and which the least? For instance, what would be the most satisfactory colours to use for a railway crossing sign to make it the most striking.

Ans.—That is an open question, as a great deal depends upon local conditions. Golden yellow for example, might be seen through mist (such as is prevalent in London, England and other seaport places) at a greater distance than white or black. Under other conditions such a bright sunshiny day, I think black and white more visible. A great deal depends on the back ground as well. The rifle corps used to be clad in invisible green. Our soldiers to-day wear khaki because it is not too visible, so there you are, take your choice. Some time ago a motor league or good roads association, endeavoured to find out this very thing, and tested out posts painted in black and white, red and white, and all red. If my memory serves me right I think the red and white proved to be the most visible under those conditions.

One in the Business, Peterborough, Ont.—I hope you will not think me obtrusive if I suggest, you be more accurate in your answers. Last week you said in answer to "Glassival Guy" that "in most cases the smooth side should be out," referring to art (or as you call it translucent) glass. You should have told him in ALL cases the smooth side should be out, and would you please enlighten me as to what 32 oz. glass is? I want to learn.

Ans.—Indeed you are not obtrusive, not even impertinent, and with regard to your last words, "I want to learn" surely this is false modesty, as one so thoroughly saturated with the fine points of glass and glazing (the ins and outs as it were) must surely know that 32 oz. glass is the fifth grade of most firms (there is that word "most" again). As regards your suggestion, we really try to be accurate in all our answers; we are not infallible; we invite suggestions, and appreciate suggestions. But the audacity exhibited by "one in the business" as to what we should or should not say in our answers, is refreshing to say the least. Nevertheless we are constrained to abide by our former statement, if for only one reason, and that is, that the rough or prism side of prismatic glass should always face the outside.

Doubtful, City.— I would feel very grateful if you would kindly tell me whether or not I could kalsomine a room which has been painted? Also if you could give me any suggestions in the way of decorating for Christmas, but not too expensive?

Ans.—Yes! Kalsomine will take over a painted wall or ceiling if properly applied. I have not the faintest idea what to suggest more than what is customary used for Christmas decoration. Holly, mistletoe, evergreens, paper ornaments, etc., many of which may be had for a small outlay.

One teaspoonful of water or milk should be allowed for each egg in an omelet.

Bombardment of the Russians Silenced the Bulgarian Guns

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The Daily Chronicle reports the capture of Varna, Bulgaria's chief Black Sea port, by the Russians. It says the bombardment of the Russians silenced the Bulgarian guns, and laid the town in ruins, the garrison suffering heavily.

The Russians then, according to the report, landed infantry and artillery without loss and in sufficient force to hold the town against Bulgarian attack.

The Athens correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphs to-day:

"I have reliable news to the effect that the Russians landed troops yesterday at Varna after a severe bombardment by the fleet, which laid the town in ruins and silenced the Bulgarian artillery.

"The losses inflicted on the Bulgarian garrison were severe. When the resistance ended, transports disembarked infantry and artillery without loss."

A despatch from a neutral Consul at Varna states that the Russians are strong enough to hold the place against any possible Bulgarian attack. Confirmation of the landing is expected to-day.

The first despatch announcing the new naval action against the Bulgarian port came from Athens, and was as follows:

"A Russian cruiser and two destroyers, which are convoying 16 transports filled with troops, have arrived off the Bulgarian coast, and are bombarding Varna vigorously."

A later message received by the Paris Temps via Berne said:

"A large Russian squadron is bombarding the Bulgarian port of Varna."

Varna lies only a few miles south of the Roumanian border, and is an important railroad terminus. It was strongly fortified, the Bulgarians having strengthened the coast defence works considerably since the war began.

Varna has been repeatedly bombarded by the Russians since Bulgaria joined the central empires. At one time, about a month ago, warships which then shelled the port were said to be convoying a large contingent of troops for landing purposes. Nothing came of the bombardment, however.

A successful landing of Russian troops and a subsequent drive into the interior of King Ferdinand's kingdom would compel the bulk, if not all, of the Bulgarian forces now at the Greek frontier to abandon Macedonia for the defence of their own

This would leave the German forces now threatening an invasion of Greece to drive the allies from Salonica alone, and thus greatly reduce the danger of a violation of Greek territory.

The renewed shelling Varna has given rise to the belief here that the allied forces withdrawn from Gallipoli Peninsula may be on the way to Salonica, to reinforce the Franco-British expedition. In the event of a Russian invasion of Bulgaria, allied superiority in numbers could calmly await a German drive on Salonica and would at the same time satisfy the demands Greece made condition al to her co-operation with the allies

On the other hand, the force from the Dardanelles, it is believed, would enable the Anglo-French troops at Salonica to march north-eastward into Bulgaria to cut the Orient line simultaneously with the contemplated Russian attack from the coast.

Joint Attack in Bulgaria.

It was announced yesterday that Russia had given up the plan to cut through Roumania and attack Bulgaria, and that the Russian forces for some time concentrated in Bessarabia had been withdrawn. It was added that these Russian forces were to launch a new offensive in the Bukowina territory to inflict a decisive defeat on the Austrians.

In view of to-day's reports of the landing at Varna, it is thought more likely that both Russia and the allies are about to concentrate for the present on a joint attack on Bulgaria.

DEMAND IS BRISK FOR BRONZE COIN

IT IS BELIEVED THAT THE WAR TAX IS PARTLY RESPONSIBLE.

OTTAWA, December 22.—The mint at Ottawa is just now experiencing an extraordinary demand for bronze coins. Usually at Christmas time the demand for pennies is greatly in excess of other portions of the year but this season is greater than on any previous Christmas. The ordinary increase in the demand for coppers at Christmas time is caused principally by the fact that more purchases are made by the children, who gather in all the spare coppers. In letters, for instance, most people have an extra copper ready for the extra stamp and when it is remembered that millions of letters are posted at Christmas time the number of extra cents needed is abnormal. There are also many other war taxes which require little sums to pay for them, such as the tax on patent medicines, wines, etc., the extra two cents on cheques and other commercial paper, and the tax on railway tickets.

Friends have just received word from England that Mr. Fletcher Elliott, formerly of the staff of one of the Vancouver branches of the Royal Bank of Canada, has been granted a commission for conspicuous bravery and resource on the battlefield. He is now taking a special training course at one of the British schools. Lieut. Elliott, who was connected with the local branch of the Royal Bank when war broke out, immediately resigned and offered his services to the Empire. He left Canada with the first contingent in company with his brother, Pte. George Elliott, who was killed at Ypres. Lieut. Elliott's officers had noted his bravery on several occasions and finally recommended him for promotion. He was born in Japan, where his father, a Methodist minister, now at Jubilee, was a missionary. His many friends in this city will watch wth interest the young officer's acreer.—From Daily Province, Vancouver, B.C.

The parents of the young man above referred to were both born in Peterborough, and lived here a number of years before going west.

Lieut. Arthur Perks of the 64th Battalion, Halifax, is in the city on leave, the guest of his mother, Mrs Perks, "Oakhurst," Gilmour Street.

Christmas in the homes for the young and aged in this city promises to be bright and cheerful. At the Children's Shelter there will be a Christmas tree, dinner and other festivities for the nineteen children under Mr. Henry's care, and in spite of the inroad of measles the youngsters should have their usual good time. At St. Vincent's Orphanage thirty-eight children will hang up their stockings, and Santa Claus should be as generous as possible to all the orphans. Formerly at the Orphanage they had a tree, but last year the little ones expressed a preference for the hanging of their stockings By this means they are enabled to find out early in the morning what they have received. The old folks at the Protestant Home will receive the usual attention that is devoted to them. A Christmas eve meeting will be held on Friday at 4 p.m. when Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Knox church will speak to them about Christmas. Mr. Allen of St. Paul's church is arranging a musical programme. A Christmas dinner will of course be a feature. The old people will each receive a present and will doubtless be remembered by their friends.

At the House of Providence there will be the usual cheering Christmas surroundings and quiet festivities. Mass will be celebrated in the chapel and with the Christmas dinner will be features of this feast day. The old people will receive presents and most of them are remembered by their friends.

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 21.—As a result of the clash on the streets last night between some of the members of the Gun Battalion and the Canadian Mounted Rifles, the military authorities here are seriously considering appealing to Brigadier-General Logie to declare hotels out of bounds at all hours, as far as soldiers are concerned. Lieut.-Col. W. W. Stewart, of the 86th Battalion, thinks this would be the best thing that could happen for the men.

Chief of Police Whatley, after last night's trouble, wired the authorities at Exhibition Camp to send more special military police here, and a special squad arrived this morning. The Chief says that the trouble was started last night by the same men who figured in the London riots before the squad moved here.

Two of the men were dimissed from the service and stripped of their uniforms this morning.

Two more deserted, and three or four are under arrest and will be severely punished.

Capt. Maurice H. Park of the 39th Battalion, is home for Christmas leave.

Rumours of an early pay for the 93rd before the New Year are without foundation, the Examiner is informed. Regulations require that a soldier's account, which may have a deficit side as well as a credit side at the end of the month, shall not be made up until the end of the month. The pay, therefore, must be made up at the end of each month.

A recruiting officer for the London Scottish visited a big London firm the other day and asked leave to recruit the staff. "You may, if you like," said the manager, "but I'm afraid you won't get much of a bag here. We have very few Scotchmen on our staff, and I suppose your recruits have to be Scotch?" "Oh, no, replied the recruiter, "Scotch or superior English."—Manchester "Guardian."

AN OPEN LETTER

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has written the following open letter in the interests of the "Soldiers' Gazette":

"At a time when so many public spirited Canadian women are working for those at the Front, it is almost invidious to specify any one particular activity, but the untiring industry of Mrs. D. Forbes Angus, President of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild and of the ladies associated with her, deserves special consideration, particularly in connection with their publication 'The Soldiers' Gazette.' This is a weekly summary of Canadian news, compiled by these ladies from the leading newspapers of each Province in Canada. Fifteen thousand copies are printed each week and distributed in the proportion of one to each seven soldiers of the Canadian Contingent overseas. The news from home contained in this 'Gazette' is highly appreciated by our gallant soldiers, many of whom have little opportunity of seeing a Canadian newspaper. The publication is printed at less than cost, through the generosity of a Montreal newspaper proprietor but even so, further funds are required to carry on the publication, especially in view of the fact that the number of Canadians overseas is steadily increasing. Large subscriptions are not required, but any small amounts sent to Miss Shaughnessy, Honorary Treasurer, at the office of the Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, Windsor Station, Montreal, will be spent in this good cause."

ALARM IN WILHELMSHAVEN CAUSED BY ANTI-AIRCRAFT DRILLS

Fear of aerial attack is felt in Wilhelmshaven, according to a despatch from Copenhagen. Recently the local authorities arranged a rehearsal of the precautionary measures to be taken in the event of the sudden arrival of hostile aviators. The first drill came near throwing the whole city into a panic. When the general alarm signal—six strokes of a bell and six cannon shots in rapid succession—was given the inhabitants poured pellmell into the streets and anxiously questioned every soldier and policeman in sight as to the meaning of the alarm. The thoroughfares became congested to such a degree that the movements of the troops were greatly impeded.

Owing to the disturbance thus caused the Military Governor issued an urgent appeal to the citizens to remain calm in any contingency. He also formulated certain rules of conduct in a rather sarcastic manner. Thus he ordered:

"Don't keep the police busy at the telephone all the time. They have other things to do besides answering stupid inquiries.

"Don't assemble at night in the streets to gaze up in the sky. You won't see anything but stars or clouds.

"Don't gather in crowds at any time or under any pretext. But if you hear the signal bells and shots, leave immediately churches, moving picture shows, theatres, etc. Get home as fast as you can and seek safety in the cellars.

"At the first alarm signal merchants as well as private persons must extinguish all lights in their establishments and residences. Failure to comply with these regulations will be punished with imprisonment."

Germany Shows Evidences Of Desperation Now

Since Germany was driven back from the gates of Paris her fate has been decided. Since those critical days when the whole world wondered at her terrific drive, the Allies have held her bound. In the most powerful attempts she could make she has consistently failed. The most coveted victories at times have seemed almost within her grasp. But, she has never quite got them. Italian co-operation, in the early months of the war, Paris, Calais, destruction of the Allies' commerce, raids on England, destruction of the Russian begins.

In each, what has been the result to Germany? Only enormous waste in money and materials, and literally millions of flower of her manhood dead and rotting. How colonial possessions, even have mostly been taken by the Allies, and soon they will all be in our hands.

Since the early days of the war, when she was halted and driven back from Paris her efforts have been desperate attempts to make a decisive stroke at some point, thus enabling her to offer peace with the hope that the neutral countries would consider her in a better light than the Allies.

Her drive through Serbia is another case of desperation. She has failed in every other direction, and Serbia seems to be her last untried field. Temporarily she has, on the surface, succeeded. She has swept through Serbia close to the border of Greece, and has successfully established communication with Turkey, and what will she gain? Already her battle lines are so great that she is straining every nerve to defend them. By this move she adds many hundreds of miles to them, but does not add a corresponding allied force for their defence. It is rumoured that she is preparing for a great drive against the Suez Canal, Egypt, and India, with a force of a half million men or more. It was also rumoured that she was to capture Calais and use it as a base against England. Where will she get her men for such a campaign? If she takes them from the Eastern or Western fronts that immediately opens the door to admit the Allies.

But, if we assume that she can get the men, then how about the allied forces along the canal, in Egypt, and in India? We are prepared for any eventuality at any point, however wild and desperate.

We shall hold Germany and gradually tighten our grip until she is finally crushed. These desperate efforts in first one direction and then another are nothing short of the death throes of a once mighty and powerful nation, dying slowly and in agony none the less surely.

Medical Science is Constantly Lowering Risk of Death in War

Much Less Than Fifteen or Even Five Months Ago, Dr. C. W. Saleeby Says, English Ratio of Dead to Wounded Was Lowest of All

LONDON, Dec. 30.—How the lives of soldiers at the battle front are safeguarded, not from shell or bullet but from disease, is the subject of an interesting article by Dr. C. W. Saleeby in the Daily Chronicle.

It is curious, writes the eminent physician "that, when I was a medical student in Lister's, Edinburgh, fifteen years ago, iodine was used by the dermatologists to destroy ringworm, but the surgeons never thought of it. A simpler, safer, quicker, cleaner and more convenient antiseptic could scarcely exist. To-day all our men, as every one knows, are provided with it. As an immediate application to wounds it is likely long to hold the field, and, though no one but the expert is a hundredth part as grateful for prevention as for cure, the soldier may know that, thus armed, he has the means which, in hosts of cases now, must save not only limbs but even lives.

"Far too many men in our original expeditionary force were without specific protection against typhoid. To-day it is estimated that ninety-four per cent. of our forces have been fully inoculated against this once deadly disease. Would that modern medicine had any such specific for dysentery.

"The dreadful cases of lockjaw, or tetanus, which began to horrify us somewhere about this time a year ago are now no longer known. The soldier with a wound in itself not serious, invalided home to hospital, need not be watched in dread lest the early symptoms of tetanic spasms should supervene. Of the various measures which have been taken—and which must all be taken in every case, however baffling to the judgment of the observer—it is practically certain that the quick application of tetanus antitoxin as part of the constant routine for the wounded, is by far the most important. Bacteriologically and also in terms of glorious results this antitoxin ranks with the antitoxin of diphtheria. If only other microbes produced soluble toxins of similar types similar antitoxins to this priceless pair could doubtless be provided, but they do not.

"Therefore, since we have no antitoxin worthy of the name for pneumonia or for other infections due chiefly to cold, we must redouble our efforts to provide the soldier with adequate protection against the cold and wet which wrought such havoc among our men last winter, both at home and abroad. This is being done with much success, as the figures, in due course, will surely show.

"According to some carefully considered figures lately published by a general in the United States Army, our own ratio of dead to wounded is by far the lowest of all among the combatant nations. Our superiority is so striking, according to his figures, that it may well furnish the chief fact of the medical history of the war, which is now being officially compiled in this country. After all, England led and leads the world in primary sanitation, as the name of Edwin Chadwick should suffice to remind us. Lister is ours; and it is remarkable that, though the officers were largely protected against typhoid by the Anglo-French invention of inoculation, the men mostly were not.

"On the other hand, the Germans have had until lately an immense advantage in artillery and the valuable protection of steel helmets against our shrapnel. But the times are changing. The ancient principle of providing the soft skin of man with a defensive armour is being applied. Very happy results indeed are to be expected from the steel helmets which are now being served out to our men, and with which, it is to be expected, they will all be duly provided on due occasion. The cranium is itself a wonderful piece of armour for the 'all baffling brain,' but a steel helmet of the right kind may often be worth far more than its weight in gold as a first line of defence. That the heart may soon be similarly armoured is my earnest hope.

"On such grounds as these it is most confidently to be asserted that the risk of death for the man who joins to-day is quite extraordinarily lower than fifteen or even five months ago."

KEN CRANE WITH T. R. AND A. A. TEAM THURSDAY NIGHT

The first game of the season tomorrow night between the fast T. R. and A. A. team, and the Electrics, promises to be a lively battle, and will be played on a fast sheet of ice, which is something unusual for a game before Christmas. Among the T. R. and A. A. players is a well-known Peterborough boy, Ken. Crane who has just signed up with the Torontos. Coach Billy Breen has the Electrics in fine shape for so early in the season and they expect to give the visitors a very busy evening. The game is called for 8.30 o'clock.

Accident in the West Ward

What may be a forerunner of more serious consequences occurred yesterday, when a couple of pupils of Queen Mary School were seriously hurt as a result of an accident while sleighriding in the vicinity of Weller Street. In various parts of the city the lives of pedestrians are jeopardised by children making use of the highways for the purpose of sleighriding. Bethune Street, north, is one street in particular that can lay claim to a number of minor accidents due to the above cause. Citizens as a rule are apt to labour under the apprehension that the police are required to attend to such matters, especially when the sidewalks are used. But such is apparently not the case. Children use the roads and streets with apparent immunity, and will probably continue to do so until a more serious accident inspires the authorities to adopt preventative measures.

FAMOUS ACTRESS REPORTED DYING

LONDON, December 22.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent reports Sarah Bernhardt to be dying.

Mme. Bernhardt, who is 70 years old, recently contracted a severe cold when returning from the theatre. She has been ill since, but her condition was not believed to be serious. Her health, however, has been fragile ever since she underwent an operation last February when her right leg was amputated above the knee. It was replaced with an artificial limb and as soon as the famous tragedienne had fully recovered from the effects of the operation she resumed her work, although with great limitations. On October 23, when Mme. Bernhardt celebrated her birthday, the hope was expressed by her manager that she might appear in the United States before the end of the year.

At St. Paul's Manse this morning at 11 o'clock the wedding was solemnized of Mr. Jos. Howard Fife, of Hastings, to Miss Annie Myrtle Edwards, of Keene. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert Fogue. Miss Isabelle Fife, a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, while the groom was assisted by the bride's brother, Lance-Corp. Geo. Edwards, of the 93rd Battalion. Mr. and Mrs. Fife left on the afternoon train for Toronto.

Every Soldier's Gift Should Include a Copy of Frederick Palmer's Book "My Year of the Great War"

Frederick Palmer is the foremost American war correspondent and traveller, has seen much of war and is the author of many books. He is an American, but he is not caring about the German vote or Teuton customers of his shop. As you read his book you know where to find him. He is with us, one of us, wanting us to win, and knowing that we shall win for the good of the world and all the people in it.

The book is not an argument on the questions at issue. The world has heard enough of that. The public mind longs to know what has happened, how it happened and what it was like. Palmer tells battle stories fascinatingly, and the reader who lays his hands on the book wants to make a day and night of the job of reading it at a sitting.

It is a fascinating book, and wonderfully meets the needs of the hour for the reading public.

The author was selected by Lord Kitchener to be the only accredited representative of the American press to the British forces, and with one exception was the only correspondent permitted to visit the British Fleet.

The Peterboro Book Store has copies of this book but as it is one of the most sought for this year, or-

GERMANS DOMINATE AUSTRIA IN ARMY AND IN FINANCE

Kaiser's Trip to Vienna Had Practical Result of Significant Character

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The trip of the German Emperor to Vienna and all the facts connected with it or attributed to it are receiving wrong explanation in different quarters, says Mr. Waclaw Czerniewski, in the Daily Graphis.

"But," says this well informed writer "it is quite true that Germany is aiming at establishing a Zollverein with the Dual Monarchy and that neither Austria nor Hungary favors such a policy. Nevertheless, in my opinion, the Ministerial changes in Austria are a result of a pitiable state of affairs in that country, and in this respect Hungary enjoys more favorable conditions than Austria. Hungary has a real object in the war, and not only Count Tiska, but the whole Hungarian nation, is a hearty supporter of Germany in the present struggle. With Austria it is different. Neither Poles nor Bohemians nor other Slavs (Serbians, Croatians, Ruthenians, etc.,) have given the support which Austria expected of them. The last Austro-Hungarian loan, which proved to be a failure, gave a better result in Hungary than in Austria. This state of affairs would be in the province of the Austrian Ministers of Interior, Commerce and Finance. Not being able to show a satisfactory result of their administration in the particulars named, it is quite possible that they were dismissed at the German Emperor's suggestion.

"That little matter, however, was far from being the most important object of this the Kaiser's first visit to Vienna since the early days of the war. Much more important questions must have been discussed. Austria is tired, terribly tired, of the war. Back in last spring, when the Russians were at the gates of Cracow, the Austrian Emperor was inclined to conclude a separate peace. To save the situation, Germany sent her troops to Galicia and reconquered almost all that province. Austria, however, does not enjoy the fruits of these victories; she is more and more becoming a dependent of Germany; the successes of the German troops in Galicia only brought humiliation to the proud Hapsburgs. Germany ignored her promises, formerly given to Austria, concerning Poland.

"German policy in Poland indicates that Austria can expect very little from her ally's conquest there. Even the parts of Poland adjoining the Galician frontier, those rich in coal and iron, although conquered by Austrian troops, were instantly occupied by the Germans, who consider it their property. Austria is also afraid of the Roumanian danger. Germany is bargaining with Roumania and she intends the dual monarchy shall settle the bill. On another front the dual monarchy is now threatened with a danger which concerns her most vital interests. The Italians are making steady progress; they are breaking down the gate to Trieste and Croatia. If once they occupy the Austrian Adriatic coast the dual monarchy will be cut off from the sea; she will lose her position as a Great Power; she will become a small State like Bavaria, with an outlet to the world through Hamburg. The aged Emperor realizes that nothing is being done for Austria except that which will help Germany. The people are suffering more and more; they have scanty food, no money, no prospects; at any price they need a cessation of hostilities.

"One of the Italian papers a few days ago announced that Austria was aiming at obtaining a separate peace. The Italian press is unusually well informed about Austrian affairs. In Austria, their previous ally, there are many Austrian-Italians, and Austrian clergy is also very close. There is no doubt that the German govern ment is well aware not only of the internal state of affairs in Austria but also of the state of mind of her Emperor Wilhelm II., although bloody in his deeds, is a very brilliant man. It is an old practice of his to go in person to places where Ministers are unable to carry through his policy. The necessity for peace would have been put forward to him by Francis Joseph, largely based on the internal affairs of Austria. To mend it and at the same time to strengthen Germany's grip on Austria the German Kaiser recommended dismissal of Ministers and their substitution by men who should make Austria still more dependent on Germany. Austria is already dominated by Germany, not only militarily, but financially; Austrian trade has been mortgaged to the German banks for the last Austrian loan. And Germany means to have more."

Roumania Will Export A Large Quantity of Grain To Germany

Germany Claims to Have Completed Arrangements For the Exportation of Fifty Thousand Carloads of Grain ---Socialist Party in Germany Disagree---Gen. Bertram, Vice-President of Munitions Board Resigns.

ONE CONDITION OF PEACE

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—Arrangements have been completed with the Roumanian Government for the exportation of fifty thousand carloads of grain to Germany.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 23.—Gen. Bertram, vice-chairman of the Munitions Board, has resigned.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 23.—The Socialist party in Germany disagree and a division results.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—All the refrigerating compartments of registered British steamships have been requisitioned by the Government.

A CONDITION OF PEACE.

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—Hungary is willing to pledge Russia that the Dardanelles will always remain open for Russian commerce as a condition of peace.

Count Albert Appouyi, leader of the opposition in the Hungarian Parliament, made this statement in an interview at Budapest. It is important not only because of the dominant position the count occupies in Austro-Hungarian affairs, but because he is an international peace leader.

IS DISAPPOINTED.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 23.—That Henry Ford now realizes the hopelessness of obtaining concrete results from his peace mission was the general opinion of men close to him.

Ford, it was rumoured, plans to end the peace trip in as perfunctory manner as possible and as inconspicuously as possible. He is deeply disappointed at the lack of warmth in the reception accorded the peace delegates in Norway and by the frank declaration of hostility on the part of the Danish authorities.

MURRAY TO DARDANELLES.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Murray has been appointed to succeed Sir Charles Monro, as British commander at the Dardanelles, says an official statement.

Sir Charles Monro has been appointed in command of the first British army in France, in succession to Sir Douglas Haig.

This disposes of any belief that the allies intend to abandon the entire campaign on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

GERMANY IS BEING STARVED

Information Passes Censor Which Reveals the Real Straits of the German People.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Miss Helen Keller and other blind persons in the United States are obtaining uncensored news from the capitals of belligerent nations in Europe in newspapers published for the blind in London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna, according to Miss Keller. These newspapers are not censored, she says, because they are printed in shorthand Braille, a point type used for the blind, which the censors are unable to read.

Through the medium of these journals what is probably the most authoritative article on Germany's lack of food has reached this country. For the first time it is revealed that every man, woman and child, in Germany is living on slender rations, doled out by weight, determined on after a conference of chemists, scientists and physicians in Berlin. The journal which brings the information is the New Time, a Socialist publication for the blind, issued in Berlin.

"These uncensored accounts of conditions in the warring countries tell me the true sentiment among the working people and the intolerable conditions that surround them," said Miss Keller. "Their hearts are almost to the breaking point."

UNCOVER BABY FARM IN MARYLAND INQUIRY

Big Percentage of Waifs Die—Thousands Buried in Small Plot.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 23.—In an exhaustive, detailed report the statewide vice commission named by Governor Goldsborough in January, 1913, made public the results of its inquiry.

Probably the most sensational of the features dealt with in the report is the alleged traffic in babies. It is asserted that investigators found there are institutions in Baltimore to which the mother of an illegitimate child may consign her offspring upon the payment of an agreed upon sum and forever rid herself of legal responsibility for it.

Of the hundreds of children so taken in charge by the institutions the commission avers that 80 to 90 per cent. die and the buried in heaps in small plots of ground, one such plot approximately 50 feet square having been the tomb of 5,000 babies since 1906.

The high death rate is attributed to the separation of the infant from its mother at birth, thereby depriving it of the individual attention it would have otherwise received. No evidence was adduced that the babies were neglected at the institutions.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health; keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

Annual Report of Dairy Instructor For Peterboro' and Lindsay Sections

Presented by Mr. R. W. Ward, at the District Dairy Meeting Held at Norwood on Saturday—The Season of 1915 a Successful One

The following is the annual report:

Report read by R. W. Ward Dairy Instructor for Peterboro and Lindsay sections for season 1915 at the District Dairy Meeting held at Norwood, Dec. 18th, 1915.

With your pleasure I will give a short report re my work as Dairy Instructor, for Peterboro and Lindsay sections season, 1915.

As you no doubt are aware Mr. Cameron resigned as Instructor at end of April, and I was asked to take up the work for both sections, with some of the outside lying cheese factories and all the creameries taken off, but still leaving most of Peterboro, Victoria and part of Durham counties to cover in doing the work.

In this section I had 36 factories and made over 800 visits to same and am pleased to be able to state that very satisfactory work was done in all excepting two.

The work has been carried on on very much the same lines as in former years, but have not been able to spend as many hours in the individual factory on account of the large territory to cover.

There has been introduced in the work this season. The sediment on Dirt List which has proved a great object lesson to makers and patrons, in revealing to the eye the amount of dirt in the milk.

No Effective Test.

This test though simple is very effective, and has been adopted by the Provincial and City of Toronto Boards of Health.

There was tested for adulteration 341 samples, which revealed only one sample slightly deteriorated.

There were 289 sediment tests made, which revealed a number with far too much sediment or dirt.

There was two factories that pasteurized the whey and 10 that pay for the milk by butter fat. list the balance paying by weight or the pool system.

The average per cent of all tests made for butter fat was 38.6 and that of the whey was .22, this latter I know could still be reduced by milk being better cared for and cooled and more careful handling in process of making at the factories.

The average lbs. of milk to make one pound cheese for season was 11.09.

In those two sections there are 12 factories equipped with cool curing rooms. All should be so equipped, for the question of it being in the best interest of the business financially and otherwise has long since been settled.

There has been spent this year in improvements in factories $3,000.00 and 18 new silos built by patrons.

Mr. Publow asked me 31 questions for report from this year.

The last question is what are the requirements most needed for the bettering of dairy conditions in your section.

Requirements Most Needed.

I would say improvements in milk supply, and I would like just here to draw attention to one serious draw-back you have in these sections and works very strongly against the makers making the most and best out of your milk.

I refer to the late delivery of milk to most of your factories.

The earlier the delivery the better condition the milk is likely to be in.

Milk on the whole has reached the factories in very good condition with a few exceptions, which exceptions prove there are still a few careless ones.

To my mind the time has arrived when it would be wise for every factory to pass a resolution making it obligatory on every patron to deliver his milk to the factory at any 70 degrees or under, and this could be done if the nights milk immediately after milking was cooled to 60 or 65 degrees and kept at that temperature.

This would certainly make a great revolution in the quantity and quality of the cheese made which would mean increased profits to the producer.

Milk is the raw material and the finished product cannot be better than the raw material, in whatever line of manufacture you may engage.

The manufacture of cheese is carried on on the co-operative plan and the time has no doubt arrived when our best patrons have the right to say that all milk shall be delivered in right condition and stop this unnecessary loss and waste.

If the milk was delivered as good as the best it would be quite satisfactory.

The makers with few exceptions I have found painstaking and serving the patrons well.

Factories in Good Condition.

The factories are mostly in good condition and kept fairly sanitary, and am very pleased to note some very substantial improvements that have been made.

But there are some factories that will need improvements before opening next season.

I again strongly advise both owners and makers, as I did on my last report, before opening next season, that all factories both inside and out, and surroundings, are in perfect sanitary condition and properly equipped, and this should include screen doors and windows for the exclusion of flies.

I am sure every one must be pleased with dairying operations this season as production and prices have both been good.

In my 36 factories there was made 2,273,598 lbs. of cheese which sold for over a half million of money, $302,289.99. An average price of .1402 cents per pound of cheese.

There are in those factories 1722 patrons, which would mean if this money was divided evenly $262.27 to each patron, or $62.16 to each cow, as you have 11,982 cows supplying milk to the factories.

What each cow gets I don't like, I think she could have more, but she has probably done her best considering the cow and the chance has had. Moral sets have better cows and better cared for.

To accomplish the cared for part you have too strong factors in your favor for next season, namely stock going nets, winter quarters in fine condition, and abundance of feed for them during the winter.

For better cows have a pure breed sire of unquestionable milking strain, to head your herds and weigh and test your milk from each individual cow.

In closing I must thank every one that kindly assisted me in carrying out this work which I have honestly tried to do with the one object in view to improve our great industry dairying.

AT LAST

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the wind from unseen spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay.
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, O Father! Let thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold.
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm, I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it with my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy unbounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place—

Some humble door among the many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing
I fain would learn the new and holy song
And find at last beneath the trees of healing
The life for which I long.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BALL IN BOHEMIA

By BELLE C. WARREN.

This is a true story of M. Claude, chief of police under Napoleon III. Claude greatly resembled in person the poet Beranger, the idol of republican France, having the same bald head and the same benevolent countenance.

One night a ball was in progress in the Latin quarter of Paris, that portion of the city given over to students and grisettes. It was in those days a veritable Bohemia, in the height of that splendor pictured by Du Maurier in his novel "Trilby." Among the dancers was Gustave Rieux, who had been active in opposing the assumption of imperial power by the president. Upon the enthronement of Louis Napoleon, Rieux, realizing that he was not safe in France, fled to America, but after a time returned to Paris, purporting to be Henry Underwood, an American student of art.

Rieux's partner in the dance was Clochette Verier, at the time the acknowledged queen of Bohemia. Nevertheless not a word had ever been spoken against her purity. Born in a higher class, fond of social life, but denied by poverty entrance to the society of the upper circles, she entered Bohemia destined rather to rule it than to be ruled by it. There, on his return from America, Rieux met her, and the meeting resulted on both sides in what the French call a grand passion.

Rieux had been warned that the government had trumped up a charge against him of complicity in a case of murder and if caught he would be tried under imperial influences and doubtless convicted. He had delayed flight because he could not tear himself away from Clochette Verier. She, realizing his danger, had begged him to leave France, and he had promised her to do so on the morrow. "Let us spend one evening together," he said, "in that bohemian life amid which we have met and loved. Then we will part, if it must be, forever." She consented.

They were standing as first couple in a dance which was then new in Paris, but which was later imported to America and is occasionally danced here even at the present day—the lancers. A figure had been danced, and the musicians had stopped for a brief interval before beginning to play for the next. Suddenly Rieux, who faced the door, saw it opened and a man enter. Clochette, who was looking at her lover, saw him turn pale and, following the direction of his eyes, discovered the cause. But she could not understand it. She had seen the poet Beranger and supposed the man who entered to be he.

"It is M. Claude," whispered Rieux. "He has come for me. I am lost!"

Claude glanced quickly about the room, and, his eye lighting upon Rieux, he advanced straight toward him. But like a flash Clochette's wit came to the rescue.

"Beranger!" she cried, pointing to Claude.

"Beranger, our idol!" Rieux shouted, taking up the cue.

"Beranger! Beranger! Beranger!" rang through the hall.

Clochette advanced to meet the detective, whispering to every girl she passed, "Come; let us greet the poet." At that moment the music started for the next figure, but no one paid any attention to it. A bevy of girls blocked the way between Claude and the man he had come to arrest. Snatching the flowers from their corsages, they tossed them at the detective, enough of them striking his face to shut out a view of his victim, who was retreating to the door. Clochette, having seen the people in the hall crowding around the man they supposed to be Beranger, followed her lover, and together they gained the street door, where Claude's carriage was waiting to take Rieux to jail. Avoiding it, they hurried away, called a cab and drove rapidly toward the barrier.

Meanwhile the detective was the center of attraction at the ballroom. To tell the admiring throng that he was not the poet they idolized, but an agent of the government sent to arrest one of their number, was more than he dared do. He did deny that he was Beranger, but even this they would not believe. Finally he made his escape loaded with flowers.

"Clochette," cried Rieux, throwing his arms around her as they rolled away in the cab, "you have saved me. Go with me to America as my wife. There, free from the slights of my family and my friends here, we can build a home for ourselves."

"If you are not taken," she replied, with a shudder.

"We will escape," he said hopefully.

"Escape—both of us in ball dress!"

For the first time it occurred to the fugitive that as soon as Claude could get away from his admirers he would put the police on guard, and the lovers began to lay a plan. They first drove to the house of a friend of Rieux, where he borrowed clothing and disguised himself. They then drove to a friend of Clochette's, not daring to go to her home, where she, too, changed her dress. Thus prepared they reached the channel, crossing it in a sailing vessel.

In England, after waiting for funds from Paris, they took passage for America, where they remained without even a temporary return to France till after the downfall of the empire in consequence of the Franco-Prussian war. Then Rieux took his family to Paris and was offered a prominent post under the republic. But he declined it, having become an American citizen.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy. Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant-tasting home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy at a cost of only 54 cents or less. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for $2.50. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The promptness, certainty and ease with which this Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent, loose cough it stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

KRONSTADT

Kronstadt, the island that guards Petrograd, is the most strongly fortified place in the northern empire. The fortifications on the island were begun by Peter the Great in 1703, after the dispossession of the Swedes. Kronstadt is the port and outpost defence of the Russian capital, the seat of the Russian Admiralty, and the first naval station of the Czar.

The older "three-decker" forts of Kronstadt, five in number, repulsed the Anglo-French fleet during the Crimean War. These redoubts to-day, although mounting modern ordnance, are largely obsolete, but powerful forts and sunken batteries have been installed to keep pace with the development of the naval strengths of neighboring states. The defensive works of the island and adjacent shores have been carried out on an extensive plan, much of it being done according to the specifications of Todleben; modified and brought up to date by succeeding engineers.

The island on which Kronstadt stands, lying nearly in mid-channel at the head of the Gulf of Finland, is the front door of Russia. It is so situated as to make the bombardment of the capital impossible before the passage of its forts and batteries. The island is twenty-one miles west of Petrograd, and stretches for eight miles east and west, in the midst of the pocket-like gulf. Altogether, the island leaves little in the way of military supremacy to Heligoland and Gibraltar.

Poor Canadians!

"Why are your patients all so awfully plain?" a visitor to the Canadian hospital at Le Touquet asked the C.O.

"They are rather, aren't they?" he replied. "But, you see, it's like this. The ambulance cars all pass the Duchess of Blankminsters's hospital first, and they have first pick. And, of course, they don't want ugly or very badly wounded ones to make pets of and call 'Boy-Boy!'"

Christmas turkeys are gold bricks this year. They have moved up into the list of luxuries. Some people who claim they know, say there are lots of turkeys in the country, and that prices should be low, but any one who has priced them, knows they are not low. Last Saturday's quotations ranged from 18c to 25c, according to quality and condition.

British apple buyers are complaining that the receipts from Canada are a very poor quality. "Traitor" seems none too strong a term for those who ship apples to England poorly packed or in poor grades. A policy such as this on the part of one or two exporters will give the whole trade a black eye, and affects all exporters, and incidentally all Canadian growers.

Alberta potatoes are selling at $1.50 a bag on the Toronto market. These Alberta "spuds" are the crop of one man, a Mr. Earle, eight miles from Medicine Hat. He had a yield of 40,000 bushels of splendid potatoes, as well as 84,000 bushels of wheat, some of which ran 60 bushels to the acre. He can afford to buy a turkey for Christmas. Eh, what!

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S FOUR GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The walking skirt is kept plain. As many long coats are worn and as these are made of fur quite as often as of woollen material a skirt with any amount of fulness would be too heavy for comfort. The plainer models also show good materials to better advantage and are reserved for imported suitings, velvet, satin and the like.

The model which we show in the accompanying illustration has four gores. This brings a seam in the centre of the back and the closing in the centre of the front. At the lower end of each seam there is a small kick pleat, while the upper portion of the seam is closely stitched and fitted to the figure of the wearer. The lower edge of the skirt in medium size measures 3¼ yards.

Some of the handsomest suits show a jacket and a plain skirt, both made of fur cloth, and for this material such a plain model as this one is eminently suitable.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,433, is cut in sizes 22 to 34 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 2⅛ yards of 50 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A FRIGHTFUL DEATH! SUFFOCATED IN ASTHMA ATTACK

Every sufferer from asthma knows the terror, the abject fear that overcomes them when struggling for breath. The old fashioned remedies may relieve, but never cure. Best results come from Catarrhozone, which cures asthma after hope is abandoned. It's because Catarrhozone kills the asthma germ that it cures. Choking spells and labored breathing are relieved, suffocating sensations and loss of breath are cured. Every trace of asthma is driven from the system, and even old chronics experience immediate relief and lasting cure. Equally good for bronchitis, throat trouble and catarrh. The large one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and lasts two months, sold by all dealers or from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE LONE DERELICT.

The world has passed and left him on the road
Where every milestone marks oblivion's way;
He stumbled, fell—now, seated by his load,
He peers into the shadows, long and gray.
Dreaming of comrades in his loneliness—
Frail souls whose failures may take from his own
The sting of rancor, heart and brain distress
And that reproach which ever, like a moan,
Wails in his ears its woeful miseries.
Alas! No other human form he sees
Cast down as he, and stranded on life's path,
Alone by quiet valley quidditism's wrath,
Amid o'er the wreckage of self-chain desires
Chant alone his requiems—lone barn funeral pyres!

CHRISTMAS IN AN OLDE ENGLISH VILLAGE

"They can say what they likes about bein' a hundred years behind t'times, but we hev our ways at Carthorne, an' we sticks to 'em most of all at Kessmuss time."

So said Willie, the patriarch and the oldest inhabitant of our village, the other day, when discussing the forthcoming Yuletide customs and festivities.

Carthorne is but one of thousands of English villages which keep the season with all the ritual, love and fanciful detail of a couple of centuries ago, and surround it with a wealth of poetry and superstition which has been lost to the neighbouring towns-folk in the rush and whirl and matter of fact evolution to which they have abandoned themselves.

Yuletide in our village is not the Yuletide of the town; but then like most other village communities we are a little world unto ourselves, so complete that each unit has his or her place into which they have grown naturally or claim by heredity. We are a family with few secrets, a mutual admiration society, praising each other, and criticising each other not a little (as is common in most families) but allowing no one else to do so to the derogation of the community.

A HAPPY FAMILY.

So open is the book of each individual life that everyone knows what everyone else is to have for their Christmas dinner, how they came by it, and how many will sit down to partake of it no matter how large and how scattered the family. It is common property to whom the squire has sent presents and whether Mary's, Jenny's or Sally's goose weighs the most. Equally cosmopolitan is the rumour of the success of failure of cottage cake bakings, and we have seen with our own eyes pudding discussing groups wrapt in the mysteries and science of bubbling pans, which for days ahead herald Christmas with comfortable slumber and pleasant odour. When the little Routledges came round with the "Yeasel Cup" (really weasel cup) days ago they told us—and told us more in glee than sorrow—that their two pet rabbits were "gittin' fat" in readiness for sacrifice at the Christmas altar. The other morning when the Roby bairns brought the milk they proudly announced, with beaming expectancy, "Muddere gittin' t'beak made, an' it's bigger than it was last yeear."

Old Bessie, a widow these many years, has daily announced to all and sundry that her eldest son who has "got on in t'world," is coasmin' yam from Lunnon, and will buy the Christmas dinner when he landeth. "Mebbe a goose, mebbe a turkey," says Bessie; "I can't say for surtin which—but he's goin' to buy it from t' home farm, as there's none good enough in Lunnon."

SHOPPING FOR CHRISTMAS

So we have for some time been living literally and figuratively in the atmosphere of Christmas. The two little village shops have risen to the occasion, and have made a brave show. In the evening the spluttering oil lamp has winked patronisingly at the lads and lasses who have gazed at the gaudy wealth of fare inside with more pressed admiration. To them the wonders of the town windows are unknown, so that there is no comparison of the latter's cotton-wool snowed galaxy with the local display to spoil their wonderment. It is as well it should be so, for Matthew's daughters spent endless pains in dressing their window and if the result is a little too crowded and a little too heterogenious to be tasteful, it is voted much superior to poor old Nanny's display at the opposition store, so no doubt this is sufficient reward. Still it must be admitted that if Nanny has fewer admirers she has more youthful customers for does she not give fifteen mint bullets for a ha'penny, and Matthew only twelve?

Both have done a great trade in "spice," as currants, raisins and so forth are called, during recent days; for, from the thatest cottage to the Hall, Yule-cake, Christmas cake, mincemeat and other highly indigestible but inseparable fare are to be made.

The old rhyme tells us:

"When Kessmuss is drawing nigh,
We've Yule-Koaks made for all;
There's yan apiece for every yan,
And a great big koonk for all."

The "great big koake for all" explains much. Not only has an increased family to be provided for but also every caller must, no matter what his or her capacity, and no matter how many calls have already been made, eat cake and cheese to the accompaniment of nasty wine. Hospitality is a characteristic of village life, and failure to respond is apt to give offence.

OLD TIMES AND TUNES

The old folks who foregather at the smithy preparatory to their adjournment to the "Fox and Hounds" for their morning refreshment, daily prophesy to the weather to be experienced at Christmas, and recall the snows and frosts of their own days when it did snow, and knew how to freeze, and when Christmas was Christmas. All this is very pardonable my masters, and is a stage yan and I will some day reach if we are granted the years, but by the warm fire at the "Fox" they wax reminiscent, with their steaming glasses in front of them, and recall days when "t'singers had t'walk over t' hedge tops" so deep was the snow, and date the epoch by some happening at the Hall, "when t' awd squire were nobbut about twenty," or "a year or two after t' young squire were born."

They discuss the amount of holly berry, the price geese are bringing, the state of the pig trade, which always ranks next in importance in village life to doings at the Hall and politics.

Nor are the old gossips alone in anticipating the feast. Church and chapel choirs are almost nightly engaged in practising special music for it would hardly be a Christmas without a "hantheem" at the church, and door to door carols later. The village band have met twice a week and on each occasion have established their campsites on the plan of the "Fox and Hounds," undeterred the eloquent at "counting out time" with weird blasts, which have set every dog a-barking for miles around.

The gamekeepers have been busy expelling town hawkers on Sally-theft bent. The squire has arranged shooting days specially to provide him with a stock of game for distribution and the youth of the village have been commandeered as beaters to aid and abet him in his annual generosity. Tom, the village postman, has already begun to fear his Christmas burdens but is now reconciled now that he knows he is to have two assistants during the busy season.

"On Kessmuss Eve we've frummenty,
An' cheese an' ginger-bread;
Mince pies an' lots of other things
For Kessmuss time are made."

CHRISTMAS EVE.

The programme for Christmas Eve in our village is surrounded with much antiquity. Each member of the family has his or her part to play. Paterfamilias scrapes the sign of the Cross on the sheaf, the youngest lights the tall paper-bedecked yule candles while another cuts the cake. The giant yule log, held up the chimney, and half on the fire, sends its myriads sparks to the outer world, to proclaim that not as well as castle is keeping the feast. Members of the family who have left our world for the wider sphere beyond it have no doubt brought with them much more wonderful presents for their younger brothers and sisters than either Matthew's or Nanny's windows ever contained. These are to be put into the stockings of the snoring children, who went to bed fully determined not to close their eyes till "Awd Father Christmas" came.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

We country folk probably are more phlegmatic and less emotable than our town cousins. We may be slower of speech and thought and more lethargic in action. But however true this is during the remainder of the year it is not so at Yuletide. Excitement lifts the eyelids of the outgangers' children all too early on Christmas morning and is mostly infectious and insistent. Ere the most restless and enterprising farm yard cock bird or the earliest chimney has saluted the happy morn the bairns are calling upon "good Christian men" to rejoice and offer their salutations, not so much, perhaps to the morn as to the disturbing heralds thereof. The demands for the said salutation being ignored, the Adeste, fideles is impatiently shouted through the keyhole to the accompaniment of sleep-forbidding knocks and door bell exercises.

The church bells ring out their message, and speak as at no other time of the year. Squire and ploughman, Catholic and Dissenter, unite in Christian and Christmas unison of feeling which carries its influence throughout the glad day.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys feel and act like lumps of lead, and you have stingy pains in the back, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach, or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

THE REHEARSAL.

Us kids has all been chased upstairs;
our toys is put away
An' mother says she'll give us fits if we should start to play.
Big sister's 'scused from practisin', for mother says if dad
Was bothered with them jiggly scales
she thinks that he'd go mad.
Our drum an' horn an' music box is hung up out o' reach—
For dad is home a-workin' out his after dinner speech.

He says: "Quite unexpectedly I'm called upon to-night—
Those ain't the words, confound the luck I never get 'em right.
I'm wholly unprepared to talk; this takes me by surprise—
No, that won't do—I guess I'll say,
My honoured friends, I rise
Embarrassed by this sudden call and —yes—and furthermore
I really haven't much to say—who was it slammed that door?

"Do try to keep those youngsters still
—My friends, this seems to me
Do be the time to speak right out; before me here I see
The brains of this great commonwealth, and, just by way of chaff,
A little tale occurs to me—Say! Stop that phonograph!
A story that I heard last night—why does that baby screech?
Oh, p'ease send all those kids to bed—
I'm practising my speech."

Tommy's Troubles.

"Tommy, what have I ever done to you that you are such an enemy of mine?"

"What have you done to me? Why, every time you come to see my sister she puts the clock back, and then the next day I'm late for school, and the teacher gives me a licking."

CONFLICTING REPORTS ABOUT THE FIGHTING IN THE VOSGES

French Official Communique Reports That All German Counter Attacks Were Repulsed While German Statement Says That the Summit of Hartmannsweilerkopf Was Recaptured Then---Reinforcements to Austria ---German Troops Arriving in Serbia.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (Official) Dec. 23.—All German counter-attacks in an attempt to retake the positions captured by the French at Hartmannsweilerkopf have been repulsed, the War Office reported this afternoon. The French left wing made further progress in the fighting around the peak. South of Arras in the region of Bonnaise, French artillery continued the destruction of German works last night. Grenade fighting occurred in the Champagne region, particularly east of Navarin Farm and near Hill 196.

Berlin statements to-day say the German troops have recaptured the summit of Hartmannsweilerkopf, taking 230 officers and 1,530 men prisoners.

There have been no important developments on the Russian or Balkan fronts in the last twenty-four hours.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—From a high official source denial is given to the report that General Bertram, Col. Carnegie and C. B. Gordon, of the Imperial Munitions Board, have resigned. Officials of the Munition Board also say there is no reason that no more munition orders are coming to Canada. The Board is now endeavouring to secure further orders.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Despatches from Amsterdam and Geneva agree that the Kaiser's illness is much more serious than is reported from Berlin.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—An Athens despatch says the new Greek Premier is anxious to resign, and says Greece advised the Allies against the Dardanelles' expeditions before they were attempted.

LONDON, via Petrograd, Dec. 23.—Official despatches to-day said "two Russian torpedo boats pursued a Bulgarian torpedo boat into Varna Bay. They were forced to withdraw by the Bulgarian shore batteries."

It is supposed this gave rise to the Athens reports that troops had landed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Less apprehension of a breach between the United States and Austria was manifested in diplomatic and official circles to-day. The foreign diplomatic corps here, usually a good source of opinion, professed to see a possible amicable solution in the Ancona affair. That an avenue is left to Austria in the last American note for ultimate adjustment, was believed. A relaxation of the tension at the State Department was also in view. A considerable waiting period is now expected to ensue, which of itself is hoped to be in the nature of a "cooling off" process in Vienna. The more temperate terms of the last note, the diplomats point out, may be seized upon by Austria as an American concession.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Nearly three hundred passengers and the crew of the Japanese liner Yasaka Maru, sunk by submarine in Mediterranean were rescued by a French warship and landed at Port Said yesterday, according to despatches received here to-day. The agents of the line reported the steamer was torpedoed without warning. She remained afloat about an hour thy said, enabling the passengers and crew to take boats. The financial loss is five million dollars.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—British casualties at Dardanelles to Dec. 15 total 112,921, Under-Secretary for War Harold Tennant announced in the Commons this afternoon.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 23.—Henry Ford was missing when the Ford peace party left for Stockholm to-day to recruit delegates for the neutral peace conference. Ford and Dean Marquis of Detroit, one of his closest friends, disappeared a few hours before the time for departure, and their whereabouts were unknown. Ford's physician said it was necessary that he detach himself from the party to obtain some rest.

ROME, Dec. 23.—The Allies' submarines have captured an Austrian submarine and are towing it to Manta, according to despatches received here to-day.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Paul Koenig, chief of the Hamburg-American secret service, and declared to be "the brains" of the Teutonic conspiracies, was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury here this afternoon on charges growing out of the alleged plot to blow up the Welland Canal. Leyendecker and Justice, charged with Teutonic activities, were also indicted.

Two indictments were returned against Koenig, one charged him with attempting a military expedition against a friendly power in plot to destroy the canal, the other makes the same charge in connection with a mission on which he is alleged to have sent Justice and Frederick Metzler to Quebec. The re-indictment charges they were to spy upon the British transports in an effort to determine the movements of Canadian troops being sent to Europe, and if possible to destroy ships and property.

The defendants will not be given a hearing until after the Christmas recess of the court.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Sir Robert Laird Borden, Canadian Premier, addressed the Pilgrim's Society of New York at luncheon here to-day.

"The relations between the Dominion and the United States," the Premier believed, were never more firmly founded on true understanding and sincere good will than at present," and as for Canada and the Mother Country he said they were never so closely united in ideal, inspiration and effort as at the present time."

Speaking of the war and unity of the British Empire Sir Robert said: "However hard the struggle may be, and whatever sacrifices it may entail, the Canadian people will not shrink from the test. They are a peace-loving and not militarist people, but their conception of the cause for which they are fighting is such as to animate them with the sternest resolve to make it triumphant."

ATHENS, Dec. 23.—M. Gounaris, or one of the other "neutrality" party leaders in the confidence of King Constantine, probably will be chosen as the new Greek Premier to-night, it was reported to-day. M. Skouloudis, the present Premier, has openly expressed his wish to retire in favour of a younger man. Salonika despatches to-day reported the steady arrival of German and Bulgarian troops in Southern Serbia. The Anglo-French military men believe the invasion of Greece will begin within ten days.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Economic reasons will not force the Allies to ask for peace before they have attained the main end, Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, told the House of Commons this afternoon. We stand together on that point, he said. The Government, the Cabinet member asserted, is considering every commercial contingency after the war.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—There will be but little stir in political and departmental circles at the Capitol until Christmas is over. The majority of the Ministers of the Crown will be absent on Christmas Day. Premier Borden will be in New York. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will, as his usual practice, spend Christmas at his home in Ottawa.

Sir Sam Hughes is still confined to his room with a cold, but hopes to be well enough to go to his home in Lindsay for Christmas.

COMMISSION READY TO TAKE OVER CUSTOMERS OF OTONABEE POWER CO.

The Utilities Commission sent a note to the Council last night that they are ready to take over the customers of the Otonabee Power Co. at any time. As this question is a rather important one it was bequeathed to the 1916 Council.

3,000,000 LBS. OF PUDDING FOR BRAVE FIGHTERS

"Ye Olde Plum Puddinge" Will Be Distributed Among the British Soldiers and Sailors on Christmas Day

"THE PUDDING SPECIAL"

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 23.— Having taxed John Bull's post office workers to the utmost, Britain's three million pound Christmas pudding is on its way to-day. In a dozen war zones, the British army and navy collectively known as "Tommy and Jack," will on Christmas Day partake of Great Britain's traditional yuletide concoction, "ye olde plum puddinge." If a single soldier or sailor fails of his Christmas cheer this year, the post office wants to know it. Over $150,000 in postage has been sent to see that he is well nourished on merry Christmas. Early to-day a naval vessel, "the pudding special," crossed the channel for France. To-morrow tons of pudding and Christmas gifts will leave via auto trucks for the trenches.

SILVER TEA SERVICE PRESENTED TO MAYOR

Remembrance From Council, Civic Bodies and Civic Officials a Pleasant Surprise to Mayor Buller at the Final Meeting of the Council Last Night.

HIS WORSHIP'S REPLY

A handsome three-piece silver tea service and silver tray were presented to Mayor Buller last night by the aldermen, civic bodies, and civic officials, in recognition of his courteous and efficient co-operation in the prosecution of the city's affairs during his years of public service, as a remembrance of their personal relations and as a token of their esteem for his fine qualities as a friend and an associate public servant. The presentation was made by Ald. Green, at the conclusion of an address, appropriately illuminated, read by Ald. Edgar. The gift was a rich one, and the beautiful tray bore a centrepiece inscription, executed by Frank Clark, in the following legend: "Presented to His Worship W. H. Buller, Mayor of Peterborough, 1914 and 1915, upon his retiring from office, by the Aldermen, Civic Bodies and Officials December, 1915."

As a surprise, the affair was skillfully staged. There had been during the Council a foreword of a meeting with the Utilities Commission, and at nine o'clock an adjournment was called to meet the members of the Commission. Ald. Edgar went down to the committee room and returned, followed by civic officials.

In addition to the Aldermen, those present were Messrs. W. H. Moore, E. Hicks, Chief Thompson, Chief Heward, W. J. Keenan, W. J. Henry, Frank Adams, C. A. G. Spence, G. B. Armstrong, R. H. Parsons, T. A. S. Hay, G. N. Gordon, and three or four citizens who happened in.

The address was as follows:

To His Worship W. H. Buller, Mayor of Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—We, the Aldermen of the City of Peterborough, members of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, and of the Board of Commissioners of Police and City Officials, who have been associated with you in the administration of the affairs of the city, desire upon your retirement form the office of Mayor and from membership of the City Council, to express to you our high appreciation of the manner in which you have performed the duties of the office of Mayor of this growing and important community during the past two years.

We know the duties of the office have taken a great deal of time, and that you have ungrudgingly, at considerable personal sacrifice, given of your time to the administration of the City's affairs and the advancement of its interests. In the establishment of the municipal light and power system and in other important measures you have taken an important part, and for years to come the people will receive increasing benefits from these enterprises. Further advantages we believe will accrue from your efforts to lay foundation for hydro-electric radial railways in this district, and to conserve the water powers for the benefit of the people.

We are pleased to bear testimony to the loyal and vigorous manner in which you have, at this time of trial for our Empire, been a leader in all efforts to assist the great cause of liberty for which the Empire and her Allies are struggling, both in encouraging the enlistment of soldiers and in the efforts to provide comforts for the soldiers in the field and to care for their families whom they left behind with us.

In retiring from the civic position which you have filled so successfully, you will carry with you the pleasing knowledge that you have worked for

CALLS FOR THE DEPOSITION OF KAISER WILHELM

German Humanity League in a Christmas Manifesto Calls Upon Every German Soldier to Leave the Trenches---"Has Fouled His Throne

"STUPENDOUS CRIMES"

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 23. — A Christmas manifesto calling upon every German soldier to quit the trenches and depose the Kaiser "from the throne he has fouled" was issued to-day by an organization called the "German Humanity League." It was signed by Karl Bernstein and nine others.

"On the eve of Christmas, when the blood-stained monarchs are exchanging messages of peace and good will with the sovereign Pontiff at Rome," read the manifesto, "our brave soldiers are still shedding their life blood as the pawns of a ruthless clique without shame or pity for the widows and orphans of the Fatherland. Our homes are still being desolated.

"This campaign is not waged in lawful defence of German territory, but to satisfy the insatiable and savage greed of Prussian conspirators. We again appeal to every toiler to vow to remain no longer idle and silent spectators of these stupendous crimes which have robbed us of our sons and brothers, and left infamy, German chivalry is buried in indible stains on the pages of history.

"To-day the German name is the scorn of civilization. The German flag has become the emblem of in the trenches and the village grave plots of Belgium. We are loathed by all honest men.

"Napoleon failed. The Kaiser must fail. There can be no peace until he is deposed from the throne he has fouled, and his fellow conspirators have met their fate at the hands of the executioner."

2000 SEEKING AID WEEKLY

Berlin Wrestles with New Requests by Soldiers' Relatives.

New requests for aid from soldiers' relatives are pouring in on the City Council of Berlin at the rate of 2,000 a week, says a report made to the committee in charge of the increasing of the allowances paid by the municipality and printed in the Berlin Tageblatt of November 14. Consequently, the Council is obliged to limit the granting of support as much as possible.

In October the war allowances paid out by the city totalled $2,650,000, of which only $700,000 will be refunded by the Imperial Treasury.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR SHELTER CHILDREN.

Every year the public is appealed to for contributions of gifts of money, food, toys, etc., to enable the wards of the Children's Aid Society at the Shelter to have their Christmas feast and be remembered as are the children in our homes. There is nothing selfish in the true Christmas spirit. Christmas represents the highest altruism. The appeal for these gifts will come home to fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters, if they can fancy their feelings if the dear children of their homes were suddenly orphaned, made homeless and dependent upon charity for the means of subsistence, and especially for the little gifts and feasts, that make Christmas a day of days in their lives and a happy memory from the retrospect of later years. We need not argue the matter, it is a matter of the heart, not of argument; and we shall all enjoy our Christmas the better if we contribute of our means to make happy the Christmas of others who but for our thoughtfulness would be neglected on that day of all days that should bring joy and rejoicing, cheer and gladness to everybody.

Will the public respond, and at once; for the time is short. As in other years, gifts of money or goods for the making of Christmas cheer for the children of the Shelter may be left at the Examiner Office, and will be at once forwarded and made use of. One of the chief virtues of having means is the power it gives us of making others happy. Don't forget the children of the Shelter, but send in your gifts to the Examiner Office at once.

ROYAL BANK'S STRIKING GAINS.

The Royal Bank is out with the best statement it has ever submitted to its shareholders. In fact, the Royal's statement this year is likely to make banking history because it reveals not only a position of record strength but even shows that it was possible for a Canadian Bank, under the unprecedented conditions of past year, to forge ahead in the matter of net profits. To a great extent the belief has gained favour that a position of exceptional strength naturally leads to a lower ratio of profits, so that the Royal's exhibit of a record position of strength and at the same time record profits brings forward a new condition for our larger Canadian banks.

During the past few years there was, from time to time, ample evidence of the way the Royal was steadily going ahead, but it remained for a statement such as is now being forwarded to shareholders to indicate the wonderfully strong organization the Royal Bank has built up across Canada, and the important connections it has established in outside centres, perhaps more especially in Cuba and the West Indies.

Special mention should perhaps be made of such developments because they contribute very materially to the Bank's position to-day and indicate the prominent parts which the Royal is destined to take in the upbuilding of Canadian trade and commerce. Having in mind the very rapid progress which the Royal has made, it should be a matter of pride to every Canadian that the management, at the end of such an exceptional year, should be in a position to indicate a condition of such unusual strength and, at the same time, a satisfactory earning power.

In detail it may be pointed out that the net profits for the year ending Nov. 30th, were 16.48 per cent. of the paid up capital, as against 16.31 per cent for the previous year, a percentage gain that represents $19,436. With substantial appropriation for officers' funds and meeting a war tax of $100,000 and a liberal writing off in respect of bank premises, dividends at 12 per cent. were paid and a balance of $625,672 was carried forward to Profit and Loss account. The expansion of the bank's general business is shown by a deposits gain of over 70 million dollars, while call and current loans show substantial gains. Current loans outside Canada reached a new high level. The liquid assets of the bank amount to nearly 65 millions, equivalent to 49.33 per cent. of its liabilities to the public. An increase of almost 20 millions in these assets brings the figure of these up to 65 millions. On the whole the statement reflects a very satisfactory condition of the Royal Bank, its solidity and earning power, and the shareholders of the banks absorbed by the Royal during the past few years, must appreciate their improved position — shareholders in a strong, stable and flourishing financial institution, which by virtue of its achievements, shows that, in spite of the prevalent, there is a Royal road to success.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood is manager of the local branch, which has contributed a large share to the general progress attained.

THE REVIEW AND THE NAVY.

Our evening contemporary seems to think it has the Examiner in a corner. In commenting upon our reference to the wonderful naval construction in Britain, the Review says:

And the pity of it is that Canada has no share in this work of co-operation, no representative in the fleet that is keeping the Germans penned up and the seas open for all but the commerce of hostile powers. But for the party, the leader and the Senate which the Examiner loves to eulogize, the three dreadnoughts which Premier Borden proposed would have been finished now, riding the waves on the lookout for the foe, each vessel a model of its kind, bearing upon its bow some historic Canadian name. Does the Examiner and do other Liberal papers feel any contrition for their past record on the naval contribution, or do they simply try to forget and let it go at that?

This is twaddle. Neither "the Examiner nor other Liberal feels any contrition for their past record on the naval contribution." Nor do they try to forget; they are proud of it. It is not the fault of the Liberals that Canada has not a navy of her own as a part of the Imperial navy, such as Australia has.

What is the record of the Review's party? Are they proud of it? Six years ago an unanimous parliament voted for the principle of a Canadian navy. Sir Robert Borden spoke eloquently in its favour, and pointed out the patriotic development of Canadian resources it would produce. Acting in good faith upon the unanimous mandate of Parliament, Sir Wilfrid passed an act providing for a Canadian navy, and when he was retired from office he left tenders for the construction of ships for his successor to deal with. What did Mr. Borden do? Carry out these plans? No. The Nationalists wouldn't let him. They were not going to have their sons "disemboweled" on Canadian ships, fighting Britain's battles. The navy idea was abandoned, and to suit the demands of the Nationalists the contribution policy was decided upon—it was an easy thing to give money—and it involved no contribution of Canadian men. But for the Nationalists and the party they "held up" Canada would have had a navy like Australia's, built at home, of native materials—by native workmen, manned by native sons. If there is any contrition called for, it is on the part of the party manipulated, in the highest national interests, by the "Nationalist" element, and given encouragement in these late days for Mr. Bourassa to declare that Canada has no obligation or duty to help fight for Britain's cause.

IS KIEL CANAL SAFE SHELTER FOR THE [illegible]S INTERNED NAVY?

While much in all probability of what is being said concerning the great air raid which Great Britain and France are said to be planning on Essen, Kiel Canal, and other fortified cities must be taken with the proverbial grain of salt, there is probably a basis of truth which inspired hope that such an undertaking will be successfully attempted.

Previous signs have pointed to preparations for some extensive raids, and in these it is likely all forms of aircraft will be utilized. The tendency has been to form an air squadron along the lines of a naval squadron with small, fast planes as destroyers and heavy fighting machines carrying quantities of explosives as battle cruisers. There is good reason to believe that with a large fleet and carefully organized campaign, the Allies would be able to inflict widespread damage in Germany, and help materially toward bringing the war to an early close.

Of course, there are grave dangers to be faced in such an effort, but the inability of German guns and gunners to deal effectively with aerial attacks has become notorious. Soldiers writing home from the trenches repeatedly state that enemy airships are frequently brought down by allied guns whereas it is seldom that the entente loses a machine through the same cause.

Of course, the story of how the airships are to be arranged and how the attack is to be carried out originated in great measure in the mind of the correspondent, as it is certain the Allies are not informing the enemy just what they intend to do, but that does not affect the value of the news that a new onslaught is under consideration.

At [illegible] the aforesaid arrived [illegible] in the early morning. The only [illegible] commencement was able result would be obtained by a fierce shelling of the great Krupp Works. On these the enemy largely depends for his supplies of guns and ammunition; in fact, with this plant out of operation he could not long continue the struggle. The true worth of such a bombardment would not be measured by the actual damage, but by the hindrance to manufacturing.

In Kiel Canal the Germans navy (ah [illegible]) there is again a target is riding at anchor, apparently safe from attack by water. In a comparatively small area are gathered together all the fast warships, and a cloud of destructive bombs dropped on these during a rapid flight over by hundreds of machines could not fail to considerably reduce the number of vessels, not to mention the men who are on board.

There would certainly be losses among the attackers. Some of the fliers and the ships they use would never return from the trip, but only about a couple of thousand men would be engaged in the work with five hundred machines. It appears worth while to risk the lives of this number for the object in view, and compared with a land battle of the same magnitude, the loss would certainly be very small.

H. G. Wells, noted English novelist, very strongly urged such a raid months ago, and his idea was received with little hostile criticism. If one is to be attempted, Britishers will look forward to it with considerable hope, and it may be that a success-

REPORT OF CANADA'S PENSION SCALE

Some interesting comparisons and recommendations are made by the committee, of which Mr. Frank Dunlop is chairman, in its report to the Council of the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund Association in regard to soldiers' pensions. That the scale of pensions is too low to meet the cost of support and that no distinction in pensions should be made between the man killed in the presence of the enemy and the man who may succumb in barracks or under training, are two points made.

Are Not Enough.

"A man who has lost both legs, both arms, the sight of both eyes or is paralyzed, cannot live on $60 a month, even with the addition of $7.50 a month for a constant attendant, and it is difficult to understand what constant attendant could be procured at $7.50 a month," says the report. This same man, if he got his injuries elsewhere than in the presence of the enemy, would get only $10 a month. The married man under similar conditions is entitled to draw $11 a month for his wife. The committee thinks that he and his wife could live better than a single man with $20.50, and urges that the latter be paid the same. A man, with wife and three children, would draw $26.25 if injured on the field and $47.25 if otherwise.

The committee points out that Government reports show that food, fuel, light and rent cost the family of five in Canada $41.33 a month. A woman with a husband enlisted receives from the separation allowance, assigned pay and Patriotic Fund grant only to forty-five dollars a month. If this same woman's husband is incapacitated in the war she will have to keep him and herself on $33.33 or $40.2 a month under the pension rate.

Some Recommendations.

The committee recommends the forming of a permanent Pension Board and a speedy revision of the rates. The disabled man whose wife dies should be considered, so that his children may not have to be taken from him. The committee, in offering a new scale of pensions, points out that Canada's forces are a volunteer army and men in the ranks and with commissions are often of the same social scale; yet the highest pension a private soldier with wife can draw is $464 a year, while a colonel with wife is to get $3,370 per year.

The recommendation is made that the Government provide artificial limbs to crippled men and training them in new ways of making a living.

Proposed Scale.

The new scale of pensions recommended by the committee names $30 a month as the rate for totally disabled privates, with $180 a year for wife, a total of $4320 a year. Second degree cases, single man $300 a year, married $420; grades three to five, men less seriously disabled single $228, $144 and $84 a year. The rates for high ranks increase, a totally disabled colonel, married, drawing $1,200 per year.

The man looked down the barrel of his gun and pulled the trigger to see if it was empty.

It wasn't.

HUNGRY PRISONERS MUST FIGHT FOR FOOD WITH DOGS

Member of the Duma Reports Pitiful "Sport" in German Prison Camp

A race for food between hungry dogs and Russian prisoners is one of the sports which the Germans are accused of indulging in at the expense of their captives. The baiting of Russians by the Germans is the subject of comment in all the countries of the Allies and is arousing a storm of indignation throughout the Russian empire.

Mr. Kasalewsky, a member of the Duma, has made a report on facts which are declared to have been officially proved. He says:

"Our enemies constantly use the word 'dog' when addressing Russian prisoners. One of our men who was held in Eastern Prussia was exceedingly badly treated. He suffered from cold and hunger and resolved to escape. He made the attempt, but was captured and brought back.

"As punishment an iron collar was put around his neck and he was fastened by a chain in a dog's kennel. There the prisoner had to live. His food was brought to him in a wooden bowl, exactly as it brought to the dogs. The sergeant major every time he saw him kicked him, saying, 'Back to your kennel, dog.'

"In another prison camp in Prussia the prisoners were kept without food and then one day they were taken into the middle of the camp and a large dish of meat was placed in the centre of a ring which was formed. The same moment the starving prisoners and hungry dogs were let loose in a race toward the food. Men and dogs struggled for the meat, while the officers and soldiers roared with laughter at the pitiable sight."

Keen resentment is expressed in the Rousskoie Slovo and other Russian newspapers over the fact that Russian prisoners are obliged by the Germans to work at trench building in the French front in the zone of hostilities, and that many of them there lose their lives. French officers confirm the fact.

The Paris Journal publishes an extract from a letter with reference to the ferocious manner in which the Russian prisoners are treated. It reads:

"For the last fortnight our Champagne front many Russian prisoners reach our lines in uniform, some in a sound condition and others wounded. All arrive dying with hunger and in an unspeakable condition of filth, and they complain of the inhuman treatment that the Germans inflict upon them.

"There are at present about eight thousand of them on our front, according to their statements.

"Until recently they were employed, on French soil, digging defensive works against France. Now their employment is no longer of this kind, for the Germans act toward them with an incredible barbarity by forcing them to go out and cut the barbed wire entanglements in front of the French trenches. The unfortunate Russians are then between two fires. If they do not advance the Germans fire on them and if they do the French, seeing suspicious shadows approach their defensive entanglements, shoot them down.

"The wounded who have been brought in on the French side were all victims of this form of treatment. The Germans always abandon them when they are wounded."

Heart-struck she stands—Our Lady of all Sorrows—
Circled with ruin, sunk in deep amaze;
Facing the shadow of her dark tomorrows,
Mourning the glory of her yesterdays.

Yet is she queen, by every royal token,
There, where the storm of desolation swirled;
Crowned only with the thorn—despoiled and broken—
Her kingdom is the heart of all the world.

She made her breast a shield, her sword a splendor,
She rose like flame upon the darkened ways;
So, through anguish of her proud surrender
Breaks the clear vision of undying praise.

London's Greek Colony Devoted To Allies' Cause

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The desire of the Greek colony in London to express, not in words only, but by deeds and gifts, their loyalty to King George and to the cause of the Allies, creates another remarkable historical coincidence of the war, writes a correspondent in the Daily Chronicle. For this Hellenic rally, he says, occurs with the Allies' desire for the fall of Constantinople, and it was precisely the fall of that magnificent carbuncle of empire to the Turks in the year 1453 that was the origin of the London Greek colony. Not that the colony proper is so old as that. The first Greek refugees came west no farther than Italy, Spain and various Mediterranean Islands, and it was not until the reign of Charles II. that a large and recognizable body was found in London.

They settled in Soho, where the name of Greek street perpetuates their residence. It is true that some ingenious iconoclasts will have it that this street name is not Greek at all in its original intent, but is a corruption of Griz, short for Gregory, and derived from Gregory King, the herald and genealogist who laid out Soho. But on a show of antiquarian hands the Greeks would have it.

For some reason Soho was to the Greeks foolishness. One guesses that with their genius for trade they soon cast eager eyes toward the City. At any rate, they went there, and are there to this day, a wealthy and respected body of merchants.

At one time Finsbury Circus and Finsbury Square had many wealthy Greek residents, and it is indeed to Messrs. Ralli's offices in the Circus that the London Greeks are now sending to Mr. N. Giannocopulo their subscriptions toward a fleet of motor ambulances which they will present to the British government for use in Macedonia.

Still, it is in the Babel of Soho that the Greek tones linger on London's ear. The Church of St. Mary the Virgin which presents its dusky east end to the Charing Cross road, is lineally descended from one of the first Greek churches built in London. Its founder was Joseph Georgeirenes, the Bishop of Samos, himself a refugee. Finding his countrymen without a church in the Soho district, he busied himself to gather aid and money, and the first person to whom he went was the then Bishop of London, the famous Henry Compton—famous because he taught both Queen Mary II. and Queen Anne their lessons, and was a mighty botanist before the lord at Fulham.

The Bishop promptly granted a piece of land, and that is why there is a Compton street to-day. Not only so, but Frith street is said to have been named after the builder or agent who managed the business.

Suddenly the expectant Greeks were thrown into sore perplexity by the appearance of a rival Greek priest, who interefered in the matter and represented himself as the Archbishop of Samos. He was a pious fraud, and Georgeirenes had in the end to resort to the curious device of advertising the "Archbishop's" personal appearance and his own in order that people might know to whom they could safely make their donations. Soon, therefore, every one knew from the London Gazette that the false bishop was a tall man with black, bushy hair and a long black beard, whereas the true bishop was but "indifferent tall" and had a very little beard, but by way of compensation a wart on the right side of the nose. The wart won the day.

GERMAN MAXIMUM PRICES A FAILURE

Public Now Demand Legislation Forcing Producers and Dealers to Sell.

STOCKS ARE HELD BACK.

Farmers and Middlemen Hope That the Government Will Have to Raise the Maximum Figures.

Maximum food prices, unaccompanied by legislation compelling producers and dealers to sell at the prices fixed, seem likely to prove a failure in providing the poorer inhabitants of Germany with war rations, according to reports appearing in recent issues of leading German newspapers. That the system of "cards," which has now been extended to cover almost all food products, except meat, fish, and potatoes, and will, it is expected, include these before long, together with the millions of swine and scores of millions of bushels of potatoes raised this year, would effectually balk any attempt at "starving out" Germany, if it could be made to function properly, is hardly disputed. Consequently, the masses of the German people, particularly those living in cities, are up in arms against the farmers and wholesale dealers who are holding back their stocks in the hope of seeing the Government raise the maximum prices, to their profit and to the despair of the working classes.

In the meantime, local divisions of the various political parties in the empire contribute to pass resolutions, beginning with the declaration that Germany has plenty of food and concluding by demanding relief from the extortioners who are fattening upon the need of the people, and the semi-official press is filled with exhortations to the housewives to economize in every way possible, especially in the consumption of butter, lard, and all kinds of fat, the shortage of which is being felt very severely. In this connection Vorwats remarks:

"This warning is being impressed upon every housewife by the high prices charged for every kind of fat, and scores of thousands of families need no other admonition, as their income forces them to economise in every possible way."

Some Dodge "Meatless" Rule.

The inauguration of two "meatless" days a week has met with considerable opposition in some quarters, but the public is rapidly accustoming itself to the order, and the consumption of meat is being somewhat reduced, although not to the extent looked for by the promoters of the "meatless" days regulation. That some of the well-to-do citizens are inclined to dodge the rule is indicated by the following appeal issued by the Housewives' League of Hamburg:

"When the rule of two meatless days a week went into effect some time ago, everybody, it seemed, was entirely in accord with this regulation, which is calculated to insure the stock of meat on hand being used for the benefit of the greatest number of persons.

"In the hotels the order is being strictly obeyed—but what is the condition in the individual families? Every housewife ought to know how important it is in this time of war that the means of life be rightly distributed. The supply of meat is small, but even the poorer classes should not be obliged to live on potatoes and other vegetables alone, but should have a piece of meat a few times during the week. But there are families who do not wish to put their own comfort second to the needs of the people, and who say: 'We are accustomed to having meat once each day!' So they order on the days before a big roast, which they can eat cold on Fridays and Tuesdays, or serve in other ways.

"Housewives of Hamburg! We must make it a point of honour to observe the two meatless days! What an example for our children if we are not able for once to give up something for the good the community! We should make this single sacrifice gladly and freely!"

Although the going into effect of maximum prices for swine, both wholesale and retail, has caused a reduction in the profits of the producers and dealers, there are many ways in which the rule is being circumvented. The Allgemeine Fleischer Zeitung reports that in many cases the wholesalers refuse to sell hogs to the retailers unless the latter also take a quarter of beef or a calf at a rate that pushed the actual price of the hogs up about 25 or 30 percent, above the legal limit. The retailers, in turn, even up matters by making their customers pay the regular price for all sorts of bones and odds and ends that they throw into the scales along with the good meat. All of which gives the housewives cause to riot more or less and write indignant letters to the papers.

Still Feeding Animals in Zoo.

The question of feeding the animals in the Berlin Zoological Gardens is worrying the custodians considerably, but so far there has been no attempt to restrict the carnivorous captives to a vegetables diet, although the lions and tigers are compelled to do without the juicy horse steaks of peace times and get along with the rather tough old beef provided by the city slaughter house.

Fish has become very popular in Berlin and other large cities, and in order to supply the demand the Central Fishermen's Society of Schleswig-Holstein has issued an appeal to its members recommending that all the ponds and streams within its jurisdiction be thoroughly fished out and the product placed on the market, in an attempt to reduce the high cost of living. The appeal admits the difficulty of carrying out this advice, due to the shortage of men, and suggests that prisoners of war might be used to help. It is also noted by many farmers that the waters of Germany swarm with several kinds of fish, which, while not adapted to feed the human population, may be used to nourish the hordes of swine upon which so much dependence is laid.

One feature of the restriction of food supplies is the increase reported in the death rate among infants, especially among those not nursed by their mothers. The fixing of maximum prices for milk is relieving this situation somewhat, although the complaint is made that the prices in most sections are still much too high.

Even salt, a necessity, which is produced in Germany in practically unlimited quantities, has been forced up to such a price by speculators and big producers that the Government has begun an investigation of this hold-up of the poor.

So far cakes and several kinds of pastry may be purchased without showing a "card," but their prices have been limited in Berlin, only those bakers who agree to follow the price regulations being able to obtain flour at the Imperial supply stations.

German science is being called upon to devise ways and means of increasing the Empire's supply of fodder and in a long article in recent issues of the North German Gazette Professor Max Popp-Oldenburg tells how acorns, licaheus, horse chestnuts, and all sorts of wild berries and grasses are being utilised to feed the live stock; but he regrets to have to announce that all efforts to adapt wood shavings and sawdust to the stomachs of German quadrupeds have so far proved a failure, because of the large percentage of tannic acid contained in these products. Professor Oldenburg lays great stress upon the utilization of waste matter from the nation's kitchens.

The fact that, during such a period of economic stress, a party of foreign newspaper men who recently made a trip through Germany to see how conditions were after fifteen months of war, was wined and dined regardless of expense leads Vorwarts to observe that it is no wonder that the impression that Germany lacks tact and taste is made so frequently. Such lavish hospitality must have defeated its own object, remarks the Socialist organ, as the foreign journalists must have been provoked at being received in a manner that indicated that their hosts thought their opinions could be influenced by plenty of food and gifts.

Conspirators on Canada Arrested in New York.—These are leading figures among German agents already arrested, charged with planning to destroy the Welland Canal and with widespread conspiracy to destroy munitions shipped to the allies. KOBE A BUSY HIVE.

Most Heavily Capitalized Shipyard in Japan Filled With Work.

No visitor who enters Kobe by sea can fail to observe the great activity in shipbuilding at this port. The most heavily capitalized ship-yard in Japan is located here, and all its docks are filled with work. Three large ships and many smaller ones are in course of construction. Electrical steel riveters keep up a constant din which can be heard far out at sea.

In June there were forty-four ships, aggregating 188,000 tons in the hands of Japanese builders and the tonnage has increased considerably since that time, although the exact figures are not available. All Japanese ship-yards have orders which will keep them at high pressure for over a year. The scarcity of cargo spaces which the entire world is feeling, has thrown much business into the Japanese ship-yards.

The ship-yard at Osaka is reported to have nearly 100,000 tons of steel ships in course of construction. It is estimated that there is a tonnage of 75,000 in construction here in Kobe and small yards in various parts probably have a tonnage of 25,000 under way.

Prices for ships have risen at amazing rates. Freight is congested at practically every important port in the Far East. In giving orders, the shipping concerns inquire about the speed with which a commission can be executed rather than the charge. It is rumoured that the right of placing orders is now being sold and bought at a high premium by those interested in shipbuilding transactions.

It sometimes happens that a sudden and severe frost fixes the linen so firmly on the clothes line that a delicate garment is torn in the endeavour to release it from its frozen position. When such a frost occurs it is a good plan to throw warm water with a little salt dissolved in it on that part of the garment immediately over the line, and then to allow some time in carefully removing it. This must be done quickly, and before the water freezes on the garment.

ALD. GREEN RESIGNED FROM COUNCIL TO RUN FOR MAYOR

Had Another Year as Alderman But Waived It to Enter the Mayoralty Field — Mayor Occupied Chair For Last Time.

Mayor Buller last night laid aside with lingering touch his magesterial robes and consigned to its voluminous folds the memories of events it has witnessed over His Worship's shoulders during the past two years. Time brings its achievements, wrought by an ever-changing caste and to the great and near-great there inevitably comes the time when their efforts are halted, to slowly fade and eventually be carried afar off into the misty realm of memory. And in our own public arena the Mayor's cloak of office, visible but intangible, gathers up from year to year memories that contrast in their vagueness with the cold records in the clerk's chronicles.

But while Mayor Buller retains his position until his successor is elected, the Council is minus one member today through the resignation of Ald. Green, who thereby threw his hat into the mayoralty ring. His resignation was accepted on motion of Ald. Stratton and Edgar, and Ald. McIntyre was selected chairman of the Board of Works for the rest of the year.

Mayor Buller referred to the fact that Ald. Green, Ald. Duffus and Mr. Hartley were in the field, and whichever candidate was elected should be supported by his Council and receive the treatment he was entitled to. His Worship made a parting appeal for harmony and unity among the citizens.

Silver Tea Service Presented To The Mayor

the one end of advancing the interests of the people and that your efforts have been in a large measure successful, and appreciated by those whom you served.

We wish to acknowledge the uniform courtesy with which you have presided at the meetings of the Council and taken part in the deliberations on the questions that have come up for decision. Your counsel has been valuable, and your cheery disposition and large heartedness have made you the personal friend as well as the valued colleague of those who have worked with you.

While your decision to retire from the position of Mayor will take you from the Council, we know that you will not lose interest in the affairs which will effect the well-being of the community, and that we and the citizens may still look to you to assist in any movement that will be for the benefit of the people.

We regret that you are about to retire from the Council, and from the other positions which, as Mayor, you occupied, but we wish you continued success and all happiness, and we ask you to kindly accept the accompanying token of our good wishes.

EXPRESSIONS OF APPRECIATION AND REGRETS OF RETIREMENT.

Mr. W. H. Moore, Ald. Duffus Ald. Stratton, Ald. Dobbin, Ald Green, Mr. Gordon, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Mr. Parsons, Chief Thompson and Chief Howard made short speeches, referring to the work of Mayor Buller in the Council, his energy and zeal in attending to civic duties, and expressing regret that the system of municipal government practically necessitated the retirement of men ripened in the experience of civic work and at the zenith of their capabilities as administrators. It was stated that Mayor Buller had received the confidence of the citizens and had proven his worthiness of their trust. His tenure of the position of Chief Magistrate of the city had covered two momentous years with numerous problems and exacting demands to which His Worship had given untiring attention. In the roster of Peterborough's mayors his name would appear with especial prominence.

Mayor Buller's Reply.

"I am sure that this beautiful service is a great surprise to me," said His Worship. "I don't think I deserve it. It is the duty of every citizen to build up his city; and I only tried to do my part. If I have not always done right I am sure I am sorry, but a man in public life must be willing to be criticized, otherwise he had better not go in."

Mayor Buller reviewed briefly the progress made in Peterborough during the eight of nine years he had been in the Council. The Smith Street bridge—a monument to Mr. T. A S. Hay, and one of the finest structures of its kind in the province, has been built, miles of concrete sidewalk had been laid, and street pavement which all the citizens were pleased to have. His Worship said he did not wish to take credit for everything. The city had been fortunate in its aldermen, but there was lots of work left yet of which he particularised the trunk sewer now under construction on Park Street. Surface drainage would have to be extended. As yet it is only in its infancy in this city. The Mayor named the De Laval Henry Hope, Vermont Marble, Peterborough Machine, and Bonner-Worth Companies which had come to Peterborough within the period of his public life, and the Sheet Metal Company is beginning with 40 or 50 hands with a prospect of employing 300 or 400 in the future. The Hydro distribution system will prove one of the best assets the city will own, and Mayor Buller was sure the present Commissioners would place the system on a strong basis.

Employment for Workingmen.

The working people had been as well treated as any city could treat them, especially during the recent period of depression, which affected the whole country. The Council did its part by trying to provide work to keep the men engaged. Some people might blame the Council for spending a little too much money, but it was His Worship's opinion that the most effectual plan to build up during a depression was to provide work for those unemployed.

Of the Council's participation in patriotic work Mayor Buller simply remarked that every man present would prefer to die rather than see the Old Flag fall. The city had given in proportion to its population, and it could be proud of its enlistment from the very outset of the war.

His Worship commended to his successors the Rural Radial scheme, which, he said, must be secured east of Toronto. Considerable progress has already been made in the western end of the province, but this section of Ontario badly needs it. He referred to the opening of King Edward Park which he supported, and mentioned other activities he had engaged in.

"If I have done anything, I am only too pleased. If I can assist in any way the new Mayor and Aldermen I will do whatever I can. I thank the members of the Council the Civic Officials and members of other civic bodies for their remembrance, and wish them all a Merry Chrismas and a very Happy New Year."

Three cheers were given for Mayor Buller, followed by singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

CHARGED WITH ADVERTISING HIMSELF IN BOLLINGER BABY CASE.

CHICAGO, December 23.—Dr. Harry J. Haiselden was placed on trial before the Ethical Committee of the Chicago Medical Society on charges of violating the ethics of his profession by using it to advertise himself illegitimately. The charges grew out of a published history of the case of the Bollinger baby, whom Dr. Haiselden permitted to die without an operation because the child would always be a defective. The history appeared under the doctor's signature.

The committee will meet again to-morrow and probably will report its findings to the council of the society, which has a session later in the day. The committee conducted its hearing with the greatest secrecy but it was learned from two members that a recommendation probably would be made that Dr. Haiselden be expelled from the society. The council will review the committee's report and its findings will be final.

Dr. Haiselden told the committee that he had received no money for writing the history of the case and had not got pay from a moving picture concern which had used him as a subject in its pictorial weekly. He asserted that the publicity the case had received had been of great benefit to the cause of eugenics.

FIND EXCUSE FOR FLEET

And German Writer Says It Will Yet Be Heard From.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Announcing the contemplated sea dash, a German naval writer says that the German navy prepares to celebrate the second "war Christmas" by complete readiness, and continues:

"Our navy had been engaged in sixteen months of quiet activity, the importance of which will not be appreciated until the end of the war. Think of the situation had the fleet not kept faithful watch! England planned to land troops on the coast of Jutland. Only the presence of a strong, battle-ready German fleet prevented the realization of that plan.

"England also planned to land 100,000 Russians on German soil. The readiness of the Kaiser's fleet prevented the realization of that scheme. But for the German fleet British troops would have been landed on the Belgian coast.

"England will think twice before her fleet attacks the German navy. She knows too well that when the hour strikes the German navy will show itself second to no other fleet in the world."

PERCENTAGE OF MEN IN THE EMPIRE WHO ARE AT THE FRONT

The following are figures of forces raised by Great Britain, British Dominions and France, as given by N. W. Rowell in his recruiting address at Simcoe, Ont., December 16, 1915. The figures are up to December 1, 1915, and are in each case exclusive of casualties.

1. Percentage of population under arms:
France—Over 11 per cent.
Great Britain—9 per cent. (estimated.)
South Africa (for German S. W. Africa ex. force)—5½ per cent. of European population.
New Zealand—4.16 per cent.
Australia—3.57 per cent.
Canada—2.37 per cent.

On December 1 Canada had under arms at home and abroad 189,699 (official.)

If Canada had raised as many men in proportion to her population as the other countries, her forces would be as follows:
Canada on the basis of France would have 660,000.
Canada on the basis of Great Britain would have 540,000.
Canada on the basis of South Africa (S.W. African ex. force) would have 440,000.
Canada on the basis of New Zealand would have 332,000.
Canada on the basis of Australia would have 285,000.

Troops overseas (on Sept. 30, 1915)	16,000
Troops still in New Zealand	7,000
Enlistments Oct. 1 to Nov. 30	7,000
Total	7,000

Note—Government in New Zealand has just completed a national registration of all men of military age, and the preliminary summary shows that 250,000 men of military age will join the expeditionary forces if required.

SOUTH AFRICA.
(Information obtained by cable.)

Expeditionary force for German S. W. Africa (conquest just completed)	75,000

PETERBOROUGH HAS A SLIGHT EPIDEMIC OF MEASLES

Medical Officer of Health Urges Isolations—Remnants of Food Should Be Burned and Eating and Drinking Utensils Sterilized

Toronto has about 2,000 cases of measles. Peterborough has a large number. Here are directions issued by Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, Toronto Medical Officer of Health, for treating such cases:

1. Isolate the patient. Even in the case of mere "cold" this should be done.

2. Confine the patient to one well-lighted, well-ventilated room, preferably one with a southern exposure and as far as possible from other rooms in the house.

3. All eating and drinking utensils used by the patient should be sterilized by being placed in boiling water or other disinfecting solution.

4. Burn all remnants of the patient's food.

5.—Allow no children who have been in contact with the case to mingle with other children.

6. Since the great danger from measles lies in the complications which sometimes ensue, it is always advisable to secure medical advice.

WHAT THE Y. M. C. A. IS DOING FOR THE CANUCKS AT FRONT

The work of the Y.M.C.A. men at the front is vividly portrayed by Lieut.-General Sir R S. S. Baden-Powell in a letter telling of his experiences on a dark, squally evening, with cold driving rain," on a ground that was a sea of mud, at "one of our base camps, somewhere in France."

On the one side was a town ablaze and alluring—but out of bounds. Up in the camp "where all was dark and wet, I could see in the dim twilight in front of me a crowd of queer figures, glistening with wet. They were soldiers, for the most part wearing, in spite of the endless variety of practical articles of clothing issued them, a garment which is not officially supplied; they were using, just as they did in the rain in South Africa fourteen years ago, their waterproof sheets as hoods and cloaks to keep out the wet; and slithering and plunging in the deep slime, they were all drifting in one direction. This was not towards the town, but towards the big hut which loomed from out the darkness, bearing the red triangle of the Y.M.C.A."

He goes on to tell of the light and warmth within; of the smoke; of tables and benches crowded with men, reading and writing letters, or eating supper; in another hall of a variety entertainment, with the audience rocking and crying with laughter — the chairman a chaplain and scout master; and twenty more of these Y.M.C.A. establishments that he visited "only to come away each time, more and more impressed with the value of their good work."

He adds "The fear which has been expressed that they might be over-religious in their atmosphere, or too tied to one form of religion, proves itself to be unfounded. Not only do they cater for men of all creeds, but for men of all colours, for two of the huts which I visited were designed for the use of our native troops from India, whether Gurkhas, Garhwalis, Sikhs or Pathans, irrespective of caste or religion."

It was a far cry from a Niagara Military camp in 1871, where this work was inaugurated by Secretary Wilkie, to Valcartier and Salisbury Plains of 1914, to Shornoliffe of 1915 and a dozen posts in the thick of the Canadians along the fighting lines. But the leaven of the Canadian example of 44 years ago spread over the world, took in the Boer War; the Spanish-American War; the Russo-Japanese War, and was prepared to do service on an unprecedented scale when the Great War of 1914 broke over the world.

Just to illustrate one aspect of the comprehensive activity of the Y.M.C.A. captains at the front; in a single week there were forwarded from England by a representative at the base there, for use at the front; 30 packs of Canadian newspapers; 25 parcels of current magazines; 456 lbs. (crates) of used magazines; 20,000 sheets of note paper and 15,000 envelopes; 4 gross of pencils; 2,000 daily papers; 3 dozen footballs; 1 dozen baseball sets; 1 dozen sets checkers; 1,500 postcards; caps, shirts, boot polish, belts and various personal things; two watches and two stylo pens, writing wallet, pair trousers, 20 Y.M.C.A. signs.

Here is a typical outline of the kind of service the Y.M.C.A. men are rendering to the boys—from an account sent by Capt. Whiteman, with the 10th Battalion in France. He is with the forces on the fighting lines, with a small wood for reserves in the rear. "I have purchased a small tent, in which I sleep and keep my supplies," he writes. "The engineers have made me a couple of large tables and for the past two months I have been running an open air Y. M.C.A. within a thousand yards of the front line. Thus I am able to serve from my open air centre the half of the battalion that is out of the trenches. . . . Every week I give my gramophone a one or two days' trip to the front line within 150 yards of the enemy. . . . In the damp, unwholesome atmosphere of a dug-out, men cannot sleep all day long, so you can imagine that any respite from the tension of trench life in the shape of something to read, a gramophone concert or a quiet chat is most welcome."

To this programme were added "all kinds of sports and games, and every evening a sing-up concert, . . . with a piano from the nearest town."

Add to this a lending library of 200 books, and the uplifting influence of a scene like this as described by Capt. Whiteman: "I wish you people in Canada could have witnessed a scene that occurred at one of our closing concerts during one of our rest periods. From a rudely constructed platform I was leading the boys in singing choruses and old home songs; some seven or eight hundred men were there sitting round in a huge circle in the flickering light of several coal oil torches. The time had arrived for closing, and I said: "Well, boys, this has been pretty good, but what do you say to closing it with the singing of that dear old hymn 'Nearer, My God to Thee'? A roar of 'sure' was the immediate response, and someone shouted 'Everyone stand up,' and to a man they arose and sang. My, how they sang! I shall never forget it. I stopped singing and listened, and as I heard the great volume of song rising from that crowd of strong men, as I looked up to the starry heavens, and then at those hundreds of weather beaten faces showing dimly through the flickering light, I could not but feel that here was a really religious act, a sincere offering on the part of that crowd of men."

Such is only a glimpse of what 27 Y.M.C.A. men are doing for Canada's soldiers overseas.

There's surely no better gift wherever there is a Victor or Victrola.

Nothing more acceptable; nothing more enjoyable.

Stop in any time and we'll gladly give you a descriptive list of the newest records and play any numbers you wish to hear.

BAKER'S FAMOUS LONDON CHOP HOUSE CLOSED AFTER 200 YEARS' EXISTENCE

LONDON, Dec. 23.—After an existence of more than two hundred years, Baker's famous chop house in Change Alley, Lombard Street, is closed and, like the sites of many other of the old coffee houses in the triangle composed of Lombard Street, Cornhill, and Gracechurch Street, may be yielding place to banking and insurance necessities.

Nobody seems to know exactly when Baker's came into being, but there is reason to suppose that it was built soon after the great fire of 1666. It is a tradition that the original Baker was formerly the head man at Lloyd's coffee house, near by. At any rate, his business had attained a firm foothold early in the eighteenth century and sales such as were customary in coffee houses in those days were frequently advertised to be held at Baker's. Change Alley, it may be recalled, was at one period a centre of great speculative activity, and when the South Sea Bubble was at its height Baker's was thronged by punters of all degrees.

It is the distinction of this famous coffee house that within its walls the London Missionary Society was conceived. There met at Baker's in November, 1794, a number of eminent nonconformist ministers, and it is recorded that they united "in prayer and deliberation on behalf of millions of their race suffering from sin and debased by idolatry." The upshot was the formation of one of the greatest and most successful of British oversea missionary enterprises.

Probably it is a century and a half since any of the Baker family was proprietor of the "chop house," as it came to be called in later years, but successive owners steadfastly adhered to the traditions of the place, taking pride in its old fashioned but by no means uncomfortable interior and its reputation for honest English fare, served by honest English waiters. The ground floor, with its high partitions, is mainly consecrated to the succulent chop or steak. On the floor above is the dining room, where a joint dinner has always been the distinctive feature. A juicy sirloin, piping hot from the kitchen, is brought into the middle of the room of speedily carved. A leg of mutton, equally hot, presently takes its place and shares the same fate. A succession of single joints marks the busy hours of the day.

Baker's has always been faithful to the willow pattern plate and to pewter, and it unobtrusively boasts a number of interesting relics of former days. In one of the walls is a picture of James, a famous writer — possibly the waiter whose characteristics John L. Toole is said to have gone to Change Alley to study. James was at Baker's for thirty-five years, a length of service understood to be equalled by at least one of the old hands today.

FOUND BELGIANS IN GREAT WANT

American Food Expert Went Into Their Homes and Saw Their Destitution

NEW YORK, Dec. 23. — Horace Fletcher, the food expert, who has just returned from Brussels, stated at the Hotel Wolcott that Belgium is in dire straits as far as food and clothing are concerned. Many of the people are suffering, especially children, who are crying for food.

Mr. Fletcher is a member of the New York branch of the Belgian Relief Commission and an important member on account of his theories and practices in dietetics.

The call for aid cannot be made too strong, says Mr. Fletcher. "One morning," said he," while in Brussels, I saw a load of coke passing. It was followed by three boys, who were picking up minute bits which fell from the cart. I went home with these boys and found that their thrift was due to real suffering. Not only was there no fuel in their houses, but no money with which to buy it and their clothing, which had not been renewed for a year and a half, was worn thin.

"Conditions like these are practically universal."

According to Mr. Fletcher there are millions of Belgians destitute of food and clothing, all of which must be supplied through the relief organizations. It is to meet the conditions that Mr. Fletcher describes that the Belgian Relief Committee of Montreal is endeavouring to have Canadians give from their bountiful harvest of wheat this year. A bag of flour is a mere atom in the immense wheat crop and yet that atom will keep the Belgian family alive a month.

Opium Worth $450,000 Seized on Steamer

SEVENTY CASES TAKEN FROM SHINYO MARU ON COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, December 23.—A shipment of opium intercepted here aboard the Shinyo Maru of the Japanese line, in transit from Hong Kong, China, to Salina Cruz, Mexico, was found to-day, according to customs officials, to be the largest seizure of the contraband and drug ever made in the United States.

Seventy cases, valued at $450,000, were taken from the vessel. No effort had been made to conceal the drug and the steamship officials said that they would protest to Washington.

The seizure was made under a federal law prohibiting the shipping of opium through a United States port.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—Being of British birth, and naturally deeply interested in the war, I was much moved by the patriotism with which Judge Hayden appears to be imbued; and when you consider that he has given three sons for the cause, his loyalty cannot be questioned. I have in mind his remarks to the Grand Jury some days ago, regarding the hiring of male teachers physically fit to be soldiers.

A far more serious condition of affairs was brought to my attention the other day when I was informed that one of the aspirants for the Mayoralty for 1916 was a military man; in fact one of Canada's representatives at the coronation of our late King, and one of the city's military representatives who went to the station to receive the King's brother, the Duke of Connaught;—but at that time there was no war on.

Now, I am not acquainted with the prospective candidate, but if these are facts what effect would it have on future recruiting if the man who occupies the Mayor's chair was a military man, physically fit? In the name of loyalty what would the citizens of Peterborough answer be, if such a man had the nerve to offer himself as a candidate?

I only hope that I have been misinformed, and that no such condition exists in our fair city.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours, etc.,

BRITISH BORN.

The Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—Things are all going wrong this war year. Whatever it is that has come into the lives of our people we seem to be cutting away from a whole lot of things once considered essential and that certainly made for the gaiety of nations. For instance:

I do not hear anything at all of the hammering, sawing and splitting that used to go on at this time of the year when aspirants for municipal preferment were all busy constructing platforms on and from which to appeal to the ratepayers. There is a silence. Too much of it in fact. What might be the reason? I puzzled over the thing, and I think I have reached a conclusion that is a reasonable one. They have no models to go by. For sure the Old Masters who fell to in Decembers of years past, and built up platforms, are all gone. Platforms that were alluring, feasible, attractive and convincing. Works of art. Craftsmanship at its best. These platforms met a public need for uncertain information. The poor man's own forced precariously, in anticipation of the great opposite. It was simply a

Take the days of James Stevenson, Tom Cahill, John McNaughton, William Toole. Shall we ever see their like again? Not by a jugful. The moulds were broken after these municipal enthusiasts were made and educated. They built platforms that were works of art. Each plank a promise but so put together that the thing could be taken apart and the planks shoved under the barn where the rude gaze of an enquiring public could not penetrate. Lots of promises made, never intended to be filled. But pleasing to the electorate. All wholly wrong, you will say. Possibly so. No one should make promises not intended to be filled—except for practice. In those days there were stock wrongs to be righted. Crying crimes to be punished, municipal evils to be suppressed, and on the strength of all this they climbed into service. Stayed there, too. Earned the good will, respect and esteem of the people. What is the matter with the present generation. Where is the snap, virility and even ferocity of the old fighters—in a municipal sense—of years ago. Are we debilitating as a people. Are we a city and is this progress.

But, as I said, there were no models. Then the proper thing to do is not to cry over spilt milk but set to and make some new ones. That onerous duty should devolve on some one. Who will volunteer? One volunteer is worth ten pressed men. Advice is about the easiest thing in the world to fish up, because it doesn't cost anything and is most likely to be worth about as much as it costs. That commercial rule is one seldom found wrong.

So here goes. Who will tackle the job. Just for a try at a symetrical, comprehensive and unassailable platform. One not corrugated or patched. Offer it—or sections of it—to any and all candidates. Refreshed and strengthened by the sight of good suggestions we may have a crop of candidates where now is a dearth. We must encourage. Give the workman the tools, and let him to his job.

And thanking you for the space that might have been filled with something more pertinent and sensible, I am, in Faith, Hope and Charity—especially charity.

SAYS BLOODSHED IS USELESS NOW

Hungary's Premier Says War Has Reached Fixed Results.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 23.—Count Stephen Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, in the House of Magnates, discussed the probable duration of the war. He said the length of the conflict depended upon those who started it.

"We will continue to fight until they cease their attacks upon our security, independence and national greatness," the Premier said. "We will continue the war until our enemies see that any further prolongation merely causes humanity useless suffering without bringing them a hair's breadth nearer their goal. The events of nearly a year and a half on the various arenas of the war have given the situation a definiteness. Already our enemies can know that they cannot accomplish the object of their attack and that our victory will create a guarantee for our security but by no means involve encroachments upon the existence of the other great powers of Europe, as their victory over us would do. To-day any further prolongation of the war by them means a perfectly useless blood shed, while it means for us also the shedding of precious blood. Still it cannot be doubted that it means far greater sacrifices for the losing side, for it must bear, at least, a part of the winner's losses.

"Every further drop of blood shed in this terrible struggle of nations will be shed in vain and the cry to heaven for the responsibility therefore must be borne by those who conjured up the war from selfish motives and lust of conquest, concealed behind hypocritical phrases, and who now refuse to stop it."

TOWNSHEND LOSS OVER THOUSAND

Heavy Casualties Since Retreat from Bagdad, Says War Office.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Comparatively heavy losses have been inflicted on the British Army in Mesopotamia in the severe fighting near Kut-el-Amara, following the retreat of the British to that point. The secretary for India, I. Austen Chamberlain, announced in the House of Commons to-day that the total of casualties of General Townshend's force, since the return to Kutel-Amara, was 1,127, including 200 deaths.

BRIDGENORTH ITEMS OF INTEREST

BRIDGENORTH, Dec. 23.—The village had a recruiting officer Tuesday drumming up recruits. Reports says he was quite successful.

Ice on Chemong lake is in good condition and teams are crossing it. This is earlier than usual.

There are a number of empty houses in the village now, as quite a few people have moved away on account of the absence of work.

Election Prospects.

There is quite a stir over municipal affairs, and all kinds of predictions. Some say the old council will be returned by acclamation. Others say a new council is needed, but election day will tell the tale.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood restoring qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use feed the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure lasting benefits.

A FIFTY-FIVE YEAR JOURNEY

Letter Which Was Mailed in 1860 Received in 1915.

A letter written by the Rev. Samuel Ward, of Neoga, Ill., on November 6 1860, the day he cast a ballot for "good Abe Lincoln," was received at Los Angeles, Cal., recently by Professor W. B. Ward, of Occidental College, a son of H. O. Ward, of Zanesville, Ohio, the man to whom it was addressed. Where the letter went after it was mailed is a mystery.

The next postmark after that of Neoga, in 1860, is that of College Station, N.Y., August 28, 1910. The letter reached Zanesville last October and after search had been made for the addressee, was forwarded here to Professor Ward, who lacks three days of being as old as the letter.

The man blew out the gas to see if the asphyxiation tales were jokes.

They were not.

PETERBOROUGH'S RETURNED SOLDIERS RECOVERING AND WELL TREATED

Report of City Council's Special Committee Reassuring to All Those Interested in the Welfare of the Men Who Have Come Home—Other Matters Handled by the Council.

GRAND JURY'S REPORT

At the special meeting of the Council last night a communication was received from the Soldiers' Aid Association requesting that a local branch be organized. Mayor Butler expressed the opinion that it would not be an easy matter to get a gathering together until after the holidays, and as the subject is one that it will be of increasing importance it was left over for the 1916 Council. Alderman Edgar and Alderman Stratton, as members of the Council's special committee to attend to returned soldiers, stated that they had recently called at the homes of eight or nine soldiers and did not find one of them home. Private Levoir, a single man, adopted two cousins and is owing money from the Government for their allowances, Alderman Edgar reported. It was reported that he had received $308 of his own money from the Militia Department, but says he only received $108.

Alderman Stratton stated that every home he and Alderman Edgar called they made complete enjuiries as to how the returned soldiers were being treated, and in every case there was nothing but satisfaction with the treatment the men had received. It was evident that the Patriotic Fund was being fairly and equitably apportioned. Another feature was that in every case the soldier was well enough to be away from home. One man was going to Westwood, another to Port Hope, and the others were on holiday shopping trips uptown.

Mayor Butler expressed his pleasure with the report, not only to the reference to the soldiers' ability to be out and around, but also to the fact that Alderman Dobbin was handling the Fund so satisfactorily.

Two Poles to Be Removed.

Alderman Saunders wants two poles on Romaine street between George and Aylmer streets, moved back and his motion, seconded by Alderman Duffus, calls for their removal right away out of the dangerous position Alderman Saunders said they now occupy.

Left to Engineer.

Alderman Duffus stated that a Mrs. Torpey in the West Ward had a sewer connection repaired and requested that if the City Engineer recommend her account for the work that it be passed. It is for $14. The Council agreed.

Advertising Banner.

The Poultry Association was granted permission to stretch a banner advertising their annual exhibition across George street, on motion of Alderman Green, seconded by Alderman Duffus.

Endorsed Account.

Mr. Parsons endorsed Ed. Butler's account for the cost of relaying a sewer to his house, 207 Perry street. All the work was done on the street between the sewer and street line. The Council recommended that this be paid.

Wants $3.00 a Day.

W. Withers, caretaker of the incinerator, probably had his eye peeled for Santa Claus when he sent in a petition for an increase in salary to $3.00 per day. He is now receiving $2.60 a day. Left over for new Council.

Notes from Board of Health.

Two recommendations from the Board of Health were turned over to the Property Committee. One recommends that coops, yards, etc., for ducks, poultry and other fowl be withdrawn at least 20 feet from any place where food is prepared, served or sold. The other suggestion was that restaurants be required to provide washbasins for their patrons. Referred to the Property Committee.

$25 to Teachers' Institute.

Mr. H. A. Yenney, secretary-treasurer of the City Teachers' Institute, requested that the Council's usual grant of $25 be made. This was accedded to on motion of Aldermen Stratton and Dobbin.

Grand Jury's Report.

Crown Attorney Hatton submitted a copy of the Grand Jury's report recently presented to Judge Huycke in the County Court. A recommendation that a farm be obtained for prisoners drew a remark from Mayor Buller that this was an important and serious matter. It would require several counties to handle it.

The report was passed on to the incoming Council for its consideration.

Christmas Cheer By St. Paul's Presbyterian Sunday School

Programme Was Interspersed With Musical Selections—Stirring Address by Capt. Charles Ackerman—Meeting Was Something of a Departure From the Usual Form.

As announced from the pulpit on Sunday last, the action of the Sunday school was something of a departure from the usual programme, which has been in the past, for the distribution of baskets of food, fruit and vegetables, to the poor of the city. It having been learned that there was little destitution in the city, the officers decided to make their offering to the Red Cross Society. For this purpose envelopes were distributed on Sunday and returned at this meeting, when the very creditable sum of $32.00 (thirty-two dollars) was realized.

After the singing of a hymn by the school and prayer by the pastor, a short musical programme was carried out. Choruses by the little tots of the primary departments, under the direction of Miss Monro and Miss Cameron were well rendered.

Miss May Nelson and Miss Hazel Davidson, in their character songs received the well merited applause of the audience, and the manner in which they rendered their numbers, stamp them as soloists of no mean order. Mr. Allan presided at the piano. Little Miss Agnes Logan pleased the audience with a piano solo very nicely rendered.

Interesting Feature.

A very pleasing and interesting feature of the evening, was the presence of Captain Charles Ackerman who, for forty minutes, held the audience almost spellbound by his graphic description of scenes on the battle field, and the detail work of the care of the wounded, and took occasion to eulogize the work of the ed Cross nurses, of the efficiency of whom he could speak at first hand. He had a number of souvenirs picked up on the battlefield the recital of the securing of some of which seemed somewhat gruesome, but only serving to emphasize the horrors of war. From evidences produced of the very narrow escapes from death, of both himself, and brother Arthur, they would seem to bear charmed lives. He was accorded hearty applause at the close of his address.

An address by Mrs. Allan on Red Cross work, was another very interesting feature of the evening. In a very pleasing and forcible manner, she outlined this work from its inception up to the present, showing what a powerful factor this society is in the present great struggle. Time and space will not permit of more than a very brief reference to this very interesting address. We only hope that Mrs. Allan will give us the benefit of a repetition of her address at some future time.

Recruiting Sergeant Percy Luther, though suffering from a cold and having recited at four different meetings during the day, delighted the audience with two patriotic recitations. Judging by the expression and force of utterance he is not very much in love with the Kaiser.

After a vote of thanks to all who had taken part in the programme, proposed by Mr. Ellis, and seconded by Mr. Ferguson, and unanimously carried by the audience, the meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. Medill, the superintendent, presided in his usual efficient manner.

'phones are only for use on military business.

Mr. A. H. Stratton has received word from his son, Lieut. Wilfred Stratton of the 57th Regiment, that he is going overseas on January 1st with the first draft of mechanical transport drivers for the British Army. Lieut. Stratton will be home to-morrow on leave.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 23.—Brigadier-General Logie, when he came here yesterday to straighten out the trouble as a result of the clash of factions of the 86th Machine Gun Battalion and Canadian Mounted Rifles, not only told the officers that he would hold them responsible for the conduct of the men, but he also read the riot act to the rank and file. He declared that peace and order would prevail here if he had to bring troops to Hamilton and use force to prevent disturbances. He asked the men to forget their differences and promised that the "village cut ups" who started the trouble would be severely dealt with.

Trooper Harold Farr of the 6th Canadian Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 8th, has the following to say in the course of a letter to his mother. The latter resides on Gordon Avenue:

"Just a few lines to assure you that I am well. Just had a look at the Examiner and saw that Pte. Arthur Phipps had quite a reception. He has had quite an experience and is lucky to have survived.

We have had a mighty lot of wet weather and the trenches are in a pretty bad state. Never mind, it will soon be freezing up, which will make it better, although much colder. I have picked up a pair of waders which will come in useful when we leave the trenches for a rest. Our artillery is playing old Harry with the enemy trenches and I guess they are pretty well annoyed.

I saw one of the residents of the King of Belgium on my travels. It is all shattered and blown to the dickens. All the chateaux and good sized houses have shared the same fate, and even the workingman's little home has suffered. Most of the better class have started little stores and are catering to the soldiers."

The results of the recent provisional school of infantry at Kingston were announced yesterday. Among the officers who qualified as lieutenants were: Hon. Capt. J. H. Burnham, Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp, Lieut. R. R. de Puigalon, Lieut. J. G. Quachenbush, Lieut. J. M. C. McC. Coote, Lieut. J. A. McNab, and Lieut. A. P. Stock of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion.

Capt. R. E. Layfield, Quartermaster of the 80th Battalion, is home for the Christmas leave.

OTTAWA, Dec. 22.—The Militia Council has arranged for a real Christmas dinner for all the Canadian troops, both in Canada and in England. Instructions have been sent to commanding officers of all the battalions to allow for an extra twenty five cents per man to be spent on the rations for Christmas Day. This will allow for the regulation turkey and plum pudding for all the men in uniform.

Lieuts. R. P. A. Crisp and R. R. DePuyjalon, of the 93rd Battalion, arrived in town last evening after a successful recruiting trip in Buckhorn and the surrounding district, where they got four recruits. From Buckhorn they went to Coe Hill district, giving speeches at a Christmas tree at Glenalder on Monday evening, the 20th, where they succeeded in getting five recruits. On Tuesday evening, after giving an address at Lasswade, where they met Lieut. Carter, who made an excellent speech, they got two more recruits. Many others of the young men of the above districts announced their intention to enlist shortly.

HOUSES WERE NOT PLACARDED

Three Local Men Summoned to Police Court for Not Placarding Houses in Cases of Measles

For neglecting to have their houses properly placarded, in connection with an outbreak of measles, Harry Baker, Arthur King and R. W. Graham, were this morning summoned to Police Court in answer to a charge of a break of the Health Act. All three men pleaded not guilty. They claimed to be ignorant of the law which requires that all houses must be placarded in cases of measles and other contagious diseases.

Sanitary Inspector Spence gave evidence concerning the case.

Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, said it was absolutely impossible to control measles without the co-operation of the public.

Magistrate Dumble at first imposed a fine of two dollars in each case, but subsequently relented and allowed the defendants to go with a warning.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

CAPT. PARK TO HANDLE THE BELL IN TO-NIGHT'S BIG HOCKEY GAME

Capt. M. H. Park of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., and for the past four or five seasons one of the stars of the Peterborough Hockey Club, will referee to-night's hockey game between the fast Toronto R. and A. A. seniors and the Peterborough Electric intermediates. In spite of the sudden thaw there is a fine sheet of ice available for the fray and the exhibition will be a battle all the way. The Toronto men are bringing down nine or ten men, and as they are scrapping for a place, they may be depended upon to put up a lively argument. The Electrics are in good shape, although they will be without the services of Pete Spratt who hurt his back in practice on Monday night. Coach Breen considers a rest better than a game for the defence man at this stage. "Red" Briden will be moved back to the defence along with Jerry Coughlin, and Walter Jackson of last year's juniors will get a chance to win his spurs at left wing.

The game is called for 8.30 o'clock and an unusually large crowd for the first game of the season is expected.

The T. R. and A. A. line-up will be:
Mitchell—Goal.
McLaren and McLean—defence.
Burrell—Rover.
Smith—centre.
Kerr—Right Wing.
Sullivan—Left Wing.
Series and Raymond—Spares.

Electrics.

The following players are requested to be in uniform to-night — Tobin, Coughlin, Briden, Baillie, Evans, Jackson, Montgomery, W. Hamilton and L. Rose.

LINDSAY CURLERS ARE GETTING READY FOR THE OPENING

LINDSAY, December 23 — The Lindsay Curling Club, under the presidency of Mr. T. A. Fisher, look forward to a successful season. The year 1915-16 season opened this week with a larger membership than ever and players from skip to lead anticipate many grand gatherings around the "T." There is perhaps no game where man mingles with his fellowman, irrespective of creeds or politics, as in the good old Scotch game of curling. On the ice all men are equal.

The new president is a genial, good-hearted gentleman and a true devotee of the game, all of which augure well for a record year for the curling club.

HINTS FOR NEW CURLERS

(And Some Old Ones.)

1—Get to the rink early. Get your broom. Get your stone on the ice on which you are to play.

2—Be ready to play promptly. Don't wait until your opponent's stone has stopped running to hunt up yours. While he is playing hunt up yours. Clean the bottom and be ready, "standing in position" to play when your skip signals. ALWAYS be ready. Don't delay the game.

3—Having played your stones be ready to sweep. Follow the stone, always ready to sweep, should your skip ask it.

4—Never follow in front of the stone so as to hide its running from the skip. He must see it.

5—Do not sweep in the rings. Stop at the line in front of the ring. Skips and Vice-Skips only are permitted in the rings.

6—When the game is over, don't leave your stones "on the ice." Put them away.

7—Never "spit" or throw matches or cigar stubs on the ice; a disgusting habit altogether too prevalent. Help to rectify this.

8.—DON'T GROUCH. Don't try to "skip" the rink unless you have been asked to do so. Don't find fault with the ice, your broom, or with any of the players. Play the broom, do your very best and look pleasant, not forgetting to be "always ready." Remember the player that is a "grouch" is surely preparing his "doom" as a curler in the Lindsay club.

GOOD MATERIAL OUT AT JUNIOR PRACTICE

The Peterborough Electric juniors had a big flock of players out last night and there is keen competition for places on the team. From now on the squad will be cut down in size, but enough players will be retained to ensure a lively scrap for places. Usually a junior team is hard up for goalkeepers, but the Electrics have a flock this year. In addition to Legros, last year's goaler, there are Claude Montgomery, a brother of the intermediate right wing, Austin O'Brien of the Collegiate and Eakins, a Warsaw boy. Legros has been showing good form on the defence and will likely be played there. Another good defence player is Cliff Jones. Among the most promising forwards are Lornie Rose of last year's juniors, Roy Cherrett of the Central school team, Fred Graham formerly of the Boston Exploits, Percy Hamilton, Leith Bartley and E. Smythe. The juniors will practice to-morrow night between 7 and 8 o'clock.

NEWLY FORMED HOCKEY CLUB

At a meeting of St. John's Young Men's Bible Class it was decided to form a hockey club, the following officers being elected:

President—R. Brown.
Sec.-Treas.—A. Pitchford.
Committee—J. Thirnbeck, C. Flowers and B. Park.

The team is willing to enter a Junior City League for men under 18 years.

JERRY COUGHLIN ELECTED CAPTAIN

At a meeting of the Executive of the Electrics Hockey Club, yesterday Mr. Carl Schmuck was elected Manager of the Intermediates. The Intermediates have selected Jerry Coughlin as their Captain for the season. F. D. Craig will act as Manager of the Junior team, the Captain of which has not yet been selected. Coach Billy Breen will, of course, coach both Juniors and Intermediates.

Lt.-Col. Johnston To Face Puck

Commanding Officer of 93rd Battalion Will Formally Open the Hockey Season

Lt.-Col. Johnston, the Commanding Officer of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, has kindly consented to face off the puck in to-night's hockey game at Brock Street Rink, between the Electrics and the T. R. and A. A. which will open the hockey season of 1915-16.

Hugh E. Conners Gets Night Soil Contract

Appointed Scavenger at $7 a Day Under New By-law Which Will Be Enforced in 1916

The following recommendation from Sanitary Inspector Spence was adopted by the Council last night:

Having been appointed by the Property Committee to make an arrangement for scavenging within the city, we recived offers from two men, and recommend that a contract be given to Hugh E. Conners to remove all night soil from all the closets and cesspools within the City of Peterborough, and dispose of the same for one year, and that he be paid therefor $7.00 per day. Mr. Conners is to provide a refuse ground at Mr. A. Vass' farm in North Monaghan, and offers as sureties Messrs. Arthur Vass and Albert Vass.

WADED THE ICY RIVER FOR FUEL

In Saxony and Bavaria, where the old-time hatred of Prussia has always been smouldering, the situation has at times given rise to considerable uneasiness, says a Berlin despatch. Even more serious is the outlook in the heterogeneous Austrian Empire, where the people are far worse situated than here and where all necessaries of life have reached prices unheard of in Germany. Here better organization has alleviated the inevitable sufferings of the poorer classes.

In the Dresdener Volks Zeitung the following paragraph appeared in an editorial which deals with the sufferings of the very poor in the Saxon capital during the present spell of cold weather:

In Freezing Water.

"Last Thursday while passing across the Karola bridge I saw a sight so pitiful and horrifying that I could hardly believe my own eyes. Between 40 and 50 women and children were wading about in the icy water of the Elbe up to their waists fishing for little pieces of coal and wood which had been carried down by the river during the recent floods. For almost an hour I stood looking at this dreadful scene, and when I left the poor starving people were still continuing their search. Passers-by stopped and talked in low voices. One of them said to me that a law ought to be passed to prevent such revolting sights, but I answered him: "Necessity knows no law."

TOLD SANTA TO GIVE AUTO TO BELGIAN BOY

"I asked Santa Claus for that big automobile but mother said to tell him to give it to one of the little Belgian boys who had their houses broken down by the Germans and hadn't seen their daddies for a long time." This is the substance of part of a conversation between two women overheard in the Empress Grill on Tuesday night after a fatiguing shopping tour. They were relating experiences with Santa Claus letters. One was recounting what she had heard her four-year-old boy tell a little companion. It is an actual fact, too, that this mother who could easily have impressed Santa Claus into bringing that automobile adopted the wiser course of teaching two little lessons to her son. One was that of sympathy and the other of unselfishness. Evidently this mother desired to temper her boy's desires by a first thought of the needs and wants of others.

A Grand Gift For a Friend

Nothing Would Be More Appreciated Than a Daily Paper.

A subscription to the Daily Examiner for six months or a year would be a most acceptable present to many of your friends in or out of the city. The Examiner will mirror the daily events in this city and district and keep your friends in close touch with their old home town. A subscription would prove a present for every day in the year and would enter into the daily life of its recipients. As an interesting gift that will wear well for the whole year, a subscription to the Daily Examiner is in a class by itself.

The Daily Examiner is delivered in the city at $1.00 for 3 months $2.00 for 6 months, or $4.00 for a year. Out of the city by mail, $3.00 per year. The Examiner is one of the best of the smaller city dailies, and you can depend on getting the news in it.

WIDOW TELLS HOW HUSBAND DIED

ACTOR'S BABIES SAW ZEPPELIN ATTACK ON LONDON THAT KILLED THEIR FATHER AND CAUSED A PANIC.

NEW YORK, December 23.—Mrs. Grace Blakeley and her two little sons, James and Foster, have arrived on the American liner St. Paul, to make her home with her mother. Her husband, James Blakeley, an actor, died of heart disease two days after a Zeppelin bomb had struck the theatre in which he had been playing.

The same night that the theatre was bombarded Mrs. Blakeley and the little boys watched a Zeppelin from the roof of their home in the suburbs. The youngsters were highly excited at watching the German aircraft attack London's theatrical district. They were too young to realize the tragedy.

"To-night's the Night" was the production in which Mr. Blakeley was playing at the Gaiety Theatre. A bomb struck the roof of a building adjoining the theatre and caused such consternation among the audience that the Gaiety was emptied in less than ten minutes. Blakeley left his dressing room and as he reached the street another bomb struck the house.

The shock rendered him unconscious, and he died two days after he had been taken home. His wife was known on the stage before her marriage as Grace Riepello. She said yesterday that she would take up her profession again.

OBITUARY

MRS. PAUL R. WALKER.

The death occurred yesterday in the Nicholls Hospital of Mrs. Paul R. Walker, wife of Mr. Paul R. Walker, 259 Dublin Street. Deceased was well known and highly respected and leaves a wide circle of friends to mourn her loss. Deceased was 34 years of age, and besides her husband, leaves four small children.

This morning the remains were forwarded to Port Dover, where interment will take place.

SUFFERINGS OF THE ARMENIANS

Hundreds of Thousands Killed, Exiled or Forcibly Converted.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—A despatch to The Times reports that all Armenians in Adrianople have either been massacred or deported by the Bulgarians, 1,000 men being deported to Asia Minor. Women and children were detained two days in prison before their removal, says the despatch, and were subjected to brutal treatment by their captors. Many were placed on sailing vessels bound for Asia Minor. Two of these vessels foundered off Rodosto and a majority of the exiles on board were drowned. Continuing, the despatch says:

"A memorial presented to the Bulgarian Government, invoking interference in behalf of the persecuted Armenians, gives a frightful picture of their sufferings in Asia Minor at the hands of the Turkish authorities. The document furnished a list of twenty-nine districts, in which the Armenian population, consisting of between 800,000 and 900,000 persons, either were killed, exiled or forcibly converted to the Islam religion."

Von Papen Makes His Departure

Says he Has no Feeling of Bitterness Toward U. S.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Dec. 23.—Captain Franz von Papen, the German military attache recalled on the demand of the United States Government, sailed for Europe on the Holland-America liner Noordam, leaving behind him a farewell message declaring that he departed without bitterness and with confidence that history will establish the cleanness of his record.

"After all," he said, "this war will not be won by the Providence Journal and the New York Telegram with their hyphenated supporters. It will be decided by the successes of the invincible German arms. I go home with the unshakable conviction that no effort, however insistent it may be, will accomplish the fervent desire of our enemies to embroil my country with this great nation.

"Personally speaking, no greater satisfaction could be given to me than the fulfilment of my ardent desire to be called home, where soldiers are more urgently needed than here."

Numerous gifts were tendered Capt. von Papen before he went on board, among these were flowers, a basket of champagne, a case of sherry, a keg of cider and a keg of sauerkraut

IS LLOYD GEORGE LORD NORTHCHILLE'S TOOL?

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The Herald to-day published a cable from its London correspondent to the effect that the feeling in England is that Lloyd George is being used by Lord Northcliffe as a monkey to pull the conscription chestnuts out of the fire. The cable indicates that the Liberal, Labour and Irish members of Parliament are beginning to distrust the apparent alliance between Lloyd George and Lord Northcliffe.

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S ARMADA

New York Times Suggests That Naval Lord's Plan Was Possibly Nearer Realization at One Stage Than Was Apparent

The evacuation of the British troops to the Suvla Bay and Anzac zones in Gallipoli seems to be received by England with a sort of melancholy mingled with a feeling of relief. The official announcement tells of the loss of six great ships, of some 100,000 British—the French losses are unknown—a record of brave failure or fruitless, costly successes, of blundering, of disaster, disappointment of the high hopes stimulated by the easy smashing of the entrance forts of the Dardanelles. For a long time English public opinion has been weary of the expedition so brilliantly begun; and now it is content to make the best of a bad job. The part of politics, of ferocious anti-Churchillism, the fondness of democracies for heroes and scapegoats, has been very great, indecently great, in judgments of the Dardanells campaign. Of course success is usually the sole justification and criterion of military and naval movements, and the world is crule to failure.

Was the atempt to force the Strait the madness that the foes of Winston Churchill have represented it? There were sound reasons for seeking to gratify and encourage Russia. To open the Dardanelles so that she might receive munitions and send out her grain through the Black Sea, to impress the Balkan States, these were feasible objects. A naval campaign approved in advance by the French Admiralty and by the Russian Government, it is a little rash to call preposterous; and even if it dragged and failed in spite of military support, even with full remembrance of the futility of ships of war against modern fortifications amply supplied with munitions, even if all the gallantry of the assailants won by a few square miles of the peninsula, was the venture not worth making, was it not on the perilous edge of victory more than once?

The losing of a ridge that had been desparately won by the Allies took from them what seemed an assured and deadly cutting of the Turkish communications. An associated Press dispatch from Vienna, printed in yesterday's Times, asserted that even after the loss, on March 18, of the Bouvet, Irresistible, and Ocean, and the serious injury of five other ships, the eleven remaining vessels of the allied fleet could have forced the Dardanelles on March 19. This on the alleged authority of artillery officers, who say that the battery most feared by the Allies had only seventeen shells left after answering the tempestuous bombardment of the day before.

This, it may be said, is legend, fiction, gossip, "well found" but not history. It is interesting to remember, however, that rumors of the removal of the Ottoman seat of Government and the embassies to an Anatolian towns were common at the time and telegraphed here, as were reports of families of Germans in the service of the Porte leaving or preparing to leave Constantinople. There was also the report that the English forces had a fatal rest of thirty-six hours granted them. Whatever of surmise or guess may have circulated in the bazaars or found its way to the West, there may be reason for believing that the Turks were more than once frightened, so far as a race of fatalists can be frightened; that they expected to have to pack up and leave; that there was one and more than one, golden moment when the enterprise of the Allies might and should have won.

This, it may be urged, is Maudlin Mullerism; the event and not the possibility counts. But let the imagination do justice to Winston Churchill, if not all the facts and too few of his countrymen do. The man who made ready and mobilized the English Fleet at the beginning of the war did the Allies a service vital and memorable; a primary, fundamental, continuing service. The Dardanelles venture has not pleased Fate, but was it rash or mad? The man responsible for it is doing his duty in the trenches while the Jominis and Mahans of press and Parliament have been snarling. Meanwhile, the British still command the entrance to the Strait.—New York Times.

CODERE NEEDED THE MONEY

Motive which Crown Says Induced Him to Commit Murder.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Lieut. Codere, acting adjutant of the 41st Montreal Battalion, was charged to-day with the murder of Sergeant Ozanne, canteen secretary of the Canadian Mounted Rifles. Hubert Hull defended him on instructions from the Dominion Government. The prosecuting counsel said that the allegation was that Codere, being pressed for money in December, having drawn several cheques which had been dishonored became possessed of £500, the property of Ozanne, in Canadian notes. These he exchanged in London. He never paid Ozanne back. On returning he used a portion of this money in discharging two of his dishonored cheques. Then he lured Ozanne to Arundel House on the pretence of paying him the money back there. He induced him to sign a receipt for £292, which deceased never received. Accused, continued the prosecuting counsel, then murdered Ozanne under circumstances to be related. When arrested £218 was found on him.

Evidence shofed that on November 27 accused's credit at the bank was four pounds odd. Several cheques were dishonored subsequently. The case is proceeding.

We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

THE POPE IS VERY NEUTRAL

Declines to Decree Canonization of Joan of Arc During War

PARIS, Dec. 24.—"Monsignor Touchett, Bishop of Orleans, asked the Pope during a visit to Rome to hasten the canonization of Joan of Arc," says the Rome correspondent of the Petit Journal. "The Pontiff, however, pointed out the significance attaching to such a step at the present time, when Joan of Arc more than ever is a symbol of the military valour and heroism of France, and said that to avoid the appearance of hastening the canonization, which could be considered contrary to the neutrality that the Vatiran desired to maintain towards all the belligerents, he had decided to postpone the proceedings until after the war."

Another Arrest Has Been Made

Alleged to Have Been Koenig's Spy in Europe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—The allegation that Paul Koenig, alleged chief of the German secret service in this country, sent an agent to Italy, France and England to secure military information was made when William McCulley was detained at police headquarters at the instance of the department of justice.

McCulley, who is said to have been an associate of Koenig's, is the man who is reported to have gone abroad McCulley is said to have successfully evaded the detectives watching the French and British ports.

TO EARMARK ALL REVENUE

Money for Motor Licenses to be Used On Roads.

In future the automobile license department of the Ontario Government will come under the Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid Minister of Public Works instead of under Provincial Secretary Hanna. Mr. Macdiarmid stated this morning that the revenue from motor taxes would be used for good roads. This follows out the suggestions of the Motor eLague that the revenue from the motors should be earmarked and used for road purposes.

The revenue for 1915 from automobile licenses etc., will be about $275,000. Last year the Department of Public Works spent about $00,000 on good roads. The Hon. Mr. Hanna admits that certain changes regarding the automobile license regulations and fees are under consideration.

SANDOW WAS SHOT AS A SPY

German Samson Said to Have Been Executed Last June.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 24.— Eugene Sandow, reputed to have been the strongest man in the world, was executed in Londo Tower after facing a military court on the charge of being a German spy, according to Mrs. A. A. Harper, head of the Harper Institute of London, who is a visitor here.

"There can be no doubt that Sandow was shot," said Mrs. Harper. "I know all the leading physical culturists of London, many of them close friends of the athlete, and despite the silence of the authorities and the censorship, we have obtained indisputable evidence of the execution last June."

Sandow, a German, formerly conducted a great physical culture establishment in London. After rumors that he was a sympathizer with the Germans began to spread, he suddenly dropped from sight. He had erformed in America.

Martyred Belgium Cries for FOOD!

You have Plenty — Share it!

We cannot—we MUST NOT let the destitute Belgians starve! No victory could be lastingly glorious if it involved the decimation by famine of a small nation that deliberately sacrificed itself rather than sacrifice Honor!

Earl Curzon of Kedleston, says:

"We have to relieve from privation, and from worse, these unhappy people during the forthcoming winter, the second winter which they have passed under these cruel conditions; we have to keep alive their vital resources, to support their courage, and enable them to continue to endure".

THE

has been and is administered with an Efficiency and Economy never before equalled in Public Relief Work.

All accounts are audited, and every pound of food and supplies is accounted for. The arrangements are absolutely effective for securing that none of the food or money goes into the hands of the Germans, is requisitioned by military authorities, or in any way diverted from the object for which it is given.

Nearly 3,000,000 Belgians must depend this winter on charity! Without help hundreds of thousands will starve! We in Canada have plenty! In the name of humanity and of the cause for which we are fighting, let us do our part toward saving these heroic allies!

JOHNNY'S BROKEN PROMISE

A Christmas Fairy Story For Children

It was Christmas Eve. Outside the wind blew keen and cold, making people hurry quickly along to complete their Christmas shopping, and then go to their snug homes.

Inside one cosy room, in a big house in the square, sat a little boy, turning the pages of a beautiful picture-book. Every now and again he blinked his eyes lazily at the ruddy, flickering fire.

"Well, Johnny," said his mother, entering the room at that moment, "have you yet got ready for the wonderful parcel of toys you promised Tom for his brothers and sisters? He is down in the kitchen waiting for it now. Tell Tom I'll send it round in the morning."

"Tom will be very disappointed," said his mother; "don't you think if you hunted round now you could get it ready. He wouldn't mind waiting, I am sure."

"Oh, I can't!" and Johnny kicked the picture-book fretfully; "I feel too tired, and, besides, Tom knows it will come in the morning. It will be better getting it Christmas morning than Christmas Eve".

"I think Tom was looking forward to putting something in each of his little brothers' and sisters' stockings to-night, after they had gone to bed."

"Oh, he won't mind," said Johnny, swinging a foot idly backwards and forwards; "besides, I can't look the things out now; I'm tired."

Johnny closed his eyes, and did not see the look of disappointment his mother gave him as she left the room. He only opened them again on hearing a long-drawn, heavy sigh echo through the room. It sounded as if it had come from the very bottom of some one's aching heart, and Johnny stared in amazement on seeing a little old bent man walking across the room towards him, leaning heavily on a curious twisted stick. When about two yards away he paused, and, raising his head, gave Johnny such a long, sad, sorry look that the little boy felt frightened—yes, he really did!—and wondered what he had done to be looked at in such a way.

"Who are you?" he demanded, trying to conquer his nervous feeling.

The old man put his hand up to his eyes, which glittered as if they were full of tears.

"I am the most miserable man on earth," he replied "I am the minder of the 'House of Broken Promises,' and I feel my position most of all at Christmas-time. Then my heart aches so, I scarcely know what to do for the pain of it. How would you feel if you heard the crying of the disappointed ones—those who might never have been disappointed had their friends, or the people who call themselves friends, either kept their promises, or not promised in the first place to send them presents or it may be food). Isn't it terrible? Just think of those people eagerly waiting for the good things promised, and just imagine how they feel as the time goes on and the good things never come!"

Johnny hung his head, and his cheeks grew hot. He suddenly remembered his promise to Tom. Had Tom felt like that, too? Yes, he must have done!

"You cannot imagine how I feel," continued the old man, his eyes growing more and more sad as he spoke. "As the broken promises come to me sobbing to be put away in the house, I don't think any one has a harder task than I, and at Christmas time I always feel as if my heart will break. You would be surprised if you only knew the numbers of broken promises I have to put away. I'm going to take you to see them".

"But I don't want to see them," cried Johnny, drawing back in his chair; "I don't, really!"

"Ah, Johnny," said the old man, "you must—however much you may not want to. It is for your good, and you have brought it all on yourself. Don't you think I know of your broken promise to Tom, who has gone home sobbing with disappointment through your forgetfulness and selfishness? Poor Tom, who was eagerly looking forward to the sight of his little brothers' and sisters' delighted faces over their toys to-morrow morning, as they get so few things because their parents are poor."

Johnny dropped his head lower and lower. "I am sorry," he said, big tears in his eyes; "I didn't think of it that way."

"Come," said the old man, "we will go at once; it is generally for want of thought that broken promises occur."

He tapped thrice on the floor with his stick, and Johnny felt a cold wind blowing all round him; so cold it was, and as it blew it made long sobs and sighs, as if people were in it, crying. Johnny shivered—it was so uncanny.

Then suddenly he found himself standing outside the door of a black house with square, ugly windows all covered with cobwebs.

The old man unlocked the door with a large key, and beckoned Johnny to follow him. Johnny was astonished to find the house entirely composed of one big room, with great shelves all round—some empty, and some filled up with queer-looking, crooked things like small broken sticks.

In the centre of the room was a desk with a big fat book upon it; and over the desk swung a tremendous lamp, with a white shade, through which were reflected these words:

"This is the Black Room of Sadness and Sorrow,
In which are stored—always and ever—
Fair promises made, and broken to-morrow."

The old man went across the room to the desk and opened the big book; then he tapped on the floor with his stick;

"Come," he cried, "I am ready to enter you now. All you poor victims of people's thoughtlessness waiting outside, come in and report yourselves!"

A door in another part of the room opened mysteriously, and in came a long procession of things like broken-backed sticks, with tiny feet and little stick-like arms. Some hopped, some jumped, some shuffled along, some tried to walk, fell down, and were helped by the others behind them. But oh! it was such a sad procession that Johnny watched with big tears rolling down his cheeks.

Each one bore in its hand a tiny card, and each one, as it came to the desk, gave the name of the person who had broken it. As they did so, the old man wrote them in the book and then directed the poor broken promises to the shelves on which they were to lie.

Johnny started as one poor broken promise gave his name in a trembling little voice. "Oh, don't write it down, don't write it down!" cried Johnny, taking hold of the old man's arm; "I'm going straight home now at once to pack up all those things for Tom; he shall get them to-night, indeed he shall."

Even as he spoke the broken promise seemed to straighten, and—how it happened Johnny could never tell you—the next second he found himself in the cosy room at home, with the fire flickering and making pretty dancing pictures in the mirror of the sideboard opposite. He got up quickly and ran down into the kitchen.

"Has Tom gone?" he cried.

Yes, he has gone over an hour ago; but Johnny packed up that parcel all the same, and, in company with his nurse, marched round to Tom's house—and stayed to help Tom fill the stockings, too!

You will guess how much he enjoyed himself, and will understand when I say that he made up his mind on that Christmas Eve never again to have a broken promise stored away in the black room of sadness and sorrow.

"ANURIC!"

THE NEWEST DISCOVERY IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Experiments at Doctor Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for a large trial package. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Doctor Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you, without fee or charge.

NOTE:—French scientists affirm that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and is a harmless but reliable chemical compound that may be safely given to children, but should be used only by grown-ups who actually wish to restore their kidneys to perfect health, by conscientiously using one box—or more in extreme cases—as "Anuric" (thanks to Doctor Pierce's achievement) is by far the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector obtainable.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

WINDOW OF PANTRY HIS ROAD TO LIBERTY

Interned British Officer Used Stratagem to Elude Danish Guards.

A remarkable story of the escape from Denmark to England of Lieutenant-Commander E. Layton of the British navy is told by a Liverpool correspondent. Lieut-Commander Layton was in command of the submarine E-13, which was bombarded in Danish waters by the Germans.

The E-13 was shelled and destroyed when lying helpless where she had stranded off the Danish coast. The members of the British crew were interned at Copenhagen on parole, but the commander refused to promise not to attempt to escape, and was kept under close surveillance at the naval barracks.

Despite the utmost vigilance and a double guard, however, he managed to escape by an ingenious plan. One night when all was quiet he left his bed, putting in his place beneath the sheets a dummy, and got through the pantry window. The naval barracks were situated on an island off the coast so in order to get to the mainland of Copenhagen he had to jump into the water and swim for it. From Copenhagen he made his way to Bergen and thence to Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Two other officers also made an attempt to escape the same evening, but were captured before they could get outside the dockyard boundary. Eight days previously Lieutenant-Commander Layton had intimated that it was possible he would attempt an escape from the dockyard should an opportunity occur, and after this the authorities kept on the alert.

At 1 A. M. it was discovered that the three prisoners had escaped. The two other officers were recaptured near the dockyard boundary where fleult by the fact that he had not comficer then went to the commander's room to ask for an explanation, but that officer had already vanished, and in his bed lay a doll made up of a large sponge and some cushions.

The journal adds that it was supposed Lieutenant-Commander Layton swam out to a motor boat which was in waiting and conveyed him to Maimo or some other place on the coast of Skane.

An account given by the London Times says that Lieutenant-Commander Layton, in escaping from the naval barracks, lowered himself from a window by a rope. He had previously obtained a thick serge suit and changed into it. He swam in his clothes, a task rendered more difficult by thefact that he had not completely recovered from an attack of influenza.

On a ferryboat he turned himself into a porter and managed to get the job of carrying a passenger's heavy bag to the station. There he boarded a train and in due coarse reached the dock side, where he caught a train to Christiania.

On the boat from Bergen to England a passenger asked him if it was true that he was an American. He replied that it was, whereupon his fellow traveler remarked: "If you were not so darned sure about it I should say you were a British naval officer." When the travel-stained young Englishman, without money, presented himself before a transport officer at the British port he was not unnaturally looked upon with suspicion, but he was soon able to establish his identity.

The man asked the girl to marry him to see if she was engaged.
She wasn't.

OXO CUBES at the War

The value of OXO CUBES to all branches of His Majesty's Forces has received remarkable endorsement in numerous letters received by OXO Ltd., and the Press, from those on active service and in training.

OXO CUBES exactly meet their needs. They take up little space; are easily carried and can be converted quickly into a hot nourishing drink which, with bread or biscuits, will sustain for hours.

In the home, OXO CUBES are handy and good for many purposes—ready in a moment as a warming, strengthening and sustaining beverage. For Soups, Stews and Gravies they are an economical substitute for fresh beef. OXO CUBES save time, trouble and expense.

"Oxo is comforting, it is sustaining, and it is palatable, three constituents which make for popularity. In addition, it is pure and wholesome, and also of the greatest use as a stimulant. To the fighting man exposed to all kinds of weather it is an admirable remover of chills. It enjoys enormous popularity with the troops, and we cannot imagine a more acceptable gift, for Oxo is thoroughly appreciated by soldiers and officers alike. Oxo Cubes are just the thing the soldier wants. With a little hot water he can turn Oxo into nourishing soup of a warmth and piquancy that will drive away the effects of the most bitterly cold night or day, whether on guard, in the trenches, or in dug-outs."

"Daily News," London, England, September 9th, 1915.

OXO in the Trenches.

"In the trenches we specialise on hot drinks, ranging from tea to OXO, and I think to really appreciate a hot drink you should have a spell here."

"Daily Telegraph" (St. John N.B.), March 26th, 1915.

From No. 3 Field Ambulance, 1st Contingent, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

"During recent night manœuvres on Salisbury Plain we found OXO invaluable as a very sustaining hot drink, and is considered by all to be the real goods."

WEEP NOT, O FOOLISH ONES.

Weep not, O foolish ones, or if ye must,
Weep for yourselves, still blundering in the dust
Of wasted bygone years:
Still shackled heavily and creeping slow
Along the weary way all men must go
Until their freedom nears.

Weep not, beloved ones, for when ye weep
It rains in Paradise, and we who sleep
So soft, so sound, at last,
Wake from our radiant dreams of joy to hear
Slow dripping on the golden roofs, each tear
Dimly recalls the past.
Weep not, ye kindly ones! Life is so hard
To leave in honor, and with scars unmarred,
Forgiveness to attain.
Our mangled forms, that strew the fields to-day,
Are but as outworn garments, flung away!
We have not lived in vain!

A. Barton Hepburn, Banker, Writer, Sportsman, Young at Seventy, Returns from His Rocky Mountain Hunting Trip Ready to Work

R. A. BARTON HEPBURN, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank, is known in Wall street for his ability to handle big financial deals.

Mr. Hepburn returned to New York a few days ago from a six weeks' shoot in the Rocky Mountains. He travelled over the Canadian Pacific and struck back into the Canadian Rockies from Banff, taking with him the usual outfit, so easily obtainable from the Brewster Transfer Company. He bagged considerable game, including grouse, moose and deer, but was disappointed because a grizzly bear failed to keep an appointment with him. Mr. Hepburn explained that he thought the bear rather discourteous, as he wanted the grizzly's pelt to hang between the skins of the two lions he shot in Africa.

"But," said Mr. Hepburn hopefully, "another time will do just as well."

Mr. Hepburn learned to shoot—and shoot straight—long before he knew anything about banking or had any thought of writing books, and although he will celebrate his seventieth birthday next July the love of outdoor life, the desire whenever opportunity offers to get in close touch with nature, is as strong with him to-day as ever.

Loves Contact with Nature.

In "The Story of an Outing," in which he relates some of his experiences while pursuing big game, Mr. Hepburn says:—

"All hail every wholesome influence that lures from the fetid artificiality of modern life to the pure air, the bright sunshine, the detonating thunder, the storm with its fury of swish and drifts, to glorious contact with the forces of nature, be they of gentler or sterner mood, where we may recreate and exclaim with the greatest of poets:—

"'And thus our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books, in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones and good in every thing.'

"The outdoor life sweetens all existence; it cultivates the pure and wholesome in one's life and aspirations; it lures from the man-made attractions, that pander to sensation, to God-made attractions, that sustain the source of being; in advancing years it enables one to exclaim:—

"'Though I look old, yet am I strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors to my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forehead
Woo the means of weakness and debility.'"

Mr. Hepburn was born at Colton, N. Y., where he passed his youth and early manhood. Colton is situated in the foothills of the Adirondacks, on the banks of the Raquette River, a beautiful stream and the largest in New York State with the exception of the Hudson. In the short distance of a quarter of a mile in the village of Colton the river falls ninety-two feet in a succession of cascades and roaring chutes, producing a scenic effect of wonderful beauty and impressive power. The latter is now being converted into electricity and wired to distant points. But the story of those happy days of his youth is best told in Mr. Hepburn's own language.

Lived as a "Regular Boy."

"Skating and swimming, boating and sledding, became a second nature to me," he says. "Fishing, rendered captivating by the abundant supply in various lakes and streams; shooting, inspired by the manifold bird life, aquatic and land lived, local and migratory, as well as mammals, best represented by the deer and occasional moose, and carnivora, including the lynx, wolf, bear and cougar, naturally inclined every boy to become a disciple of Isaak Walton and Daniel Boone. Masculine ambition found expression in these channels and prowess with rod and gun was a generally coveted attainment.

"At the age of seven I was the proud owner of a three and a half pound muzzle loading shotgun, and chipmunk and red squirrel filled the measure of my ambition. However, I soon coveted bigger game, black and gray squirrel, grouse and pigeon. Then it was my happiest fortune to possess a rifle, with its wider range and greater effectiveness. The lowly chipmunk was regarded with scorn and deer and dangerous animals thenceforth furnished the imagery of my dreams, and then alone could satisfy my big game aspirations. My big game was very difficult, was just beyond the skyline and changed in character, keeping step with growing age, increasing strength and more efficient firearms." Here Mr. Hepburn pauses in his story to philosophize in this wise:—

"The same evolution characterizes life. 'Man never is but always to be blest.' The criterion of success, the measure of our ambitions, changes with advancement, each succeeding height scaled broadens the horizon and brings within the range of vision greater possibilities and the unattainable of yesterday becomes the indispensable of to-morrow."

"Giant eland which I killed. It weighed at least 1,200 pounds."

"One of the lions soon after being shot."

"Photograph of myself and S. C. Fields, head of the big dry goods house of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago and New York, who was my shooting companion on the trip."

"This represents the conclusion of the safari the day I killed two lions. They would have been enthusiastic, anyway, but they each expect a rupee on an occasion of that kind."

Shoots Lions in the Open.

It was undoubtedly Mr. Hepburn the banker who made that observation, but the passage derives additional significance from the experiences of Mr. Hepburn the sportsman, who sighted two lions on the horizon of an African plain about three years ago and after an exciting chase of two miles had the good fortune to bring both animals to the ground. In this encounter his youthful ambitions to shoot "big game" were fully realized. The first lion no sooner fell dead with a bullet in his brain than Mr. Hepburn heard the second lion roar and saw the beast ready to spring. Again the banker's aim was true and the second lion was slain. Mr. Hepburn describes his feeling on this occasion as follows:—

"I had two lions, and I got them in the most approved manner. I did not shoot them at a kill from a boma nor shoot them from a tree. I got them in the great wide open after the most exciting horseback ride I ever experienced. It was great luck, availed of with good judgment and good execution, and I was satisfied.

"Satisfied? Every fibre in my system tingled with delight, every sportsmanlike impulse, every mental process revelled in serene happiness."

Mr. Hepburn admits that an African big game shoot costs money, time and hard work; it costs inconvenience and annoyance from insectivora and excessive heat and involves exposures to possible local and climatic disease, but the experience, the pleasure and the general satisfaction of the trip, he says, surpass all cost and all risk. It is Mr. Hepburn's belief that a vacation consists in "going away somewhere and getting another kind of attire"—a tire which enables you to return and appreciate the comforts of your home, the society of your friends, the nobility of your calling and assume your functions as a useful factor in the economy of life with energy and confidence.

From Legislator to Financier.

Mr. Hepburn began his career as a banker in 1880, when he was appointed Superintendent of the Banking Department of the State of New York, an office which he held for three years. He had practised law and served five years in the Legislature. In 1885 he was appointed United States Bank Examiner for New York and served in that capacity until 1892, when he became Controller of the Currency under the Harrison administration. The following year he accepted the presidency of the Third National Bank, and he held that position until 1897, leaving it to accept the vice presidency of the National City Bank, which he held until 1899. In 1900 he was chosen president of the Chase National Bank, and in 1911 he was elevated to the chairmanship of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Hepburn also occupies a place on the directorates of a number of other large financial institutions and some of the largest industrial concerns in the country. He has been president of the New York Clearing House and also of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

During all the years he has been actively engaged in the banking business Mr. Hepburn has been a diligent student of the great financial and economic problems that have confronted the nation and he has contributed in an important way to the discussion of these subjects. He was one of the leaders behind the campaign for "sound money" which was launched during the McKinley administration and helped to found the Academy of Political Science at Columbia University, which now has a membership of between four thousand and five thousand.

As secretary and treasurer of the Sound Money League, organized by Mr. Henry Villard to conduct an educational campaign through the newspapers, the colleges and universities and various business associations, he learned that the people of this country generally had only a hazy conception of the workings of their banking and currency systems and knew even less about those of other countries.

His Book on Finance.

"Every week," said Mr. Hepburn, "I would receive thousands of letters from all parts of the United States asking for information on the subject. People would write in for some of the simplest facts regarding our financial history. It soon became evident that there wasn't any literature in existence that would enable the student to find what he was looking for without doing a lot of unnecessary digging around, and that a book giving access to general information of that character would supply a public demand."

Accordingly, Mr. Hepburn gathered up the facts which he had collected and published them in book form under the title of "The Contest for Sound Money." This volume was given a wide distribution, more than ten thousand copies being sent out to all the libraries in the country and the various colleges and universities. It carried the history of the country's currency down to the defeat of the free silver movement.

Within the last year Mr. Hepburn has rewritten that earlier work and supplemented it so that as now issued it covers the period from the adoption of the United States constitution down to the present time. The book came from the publishers a few weeks ago under the title, "A History of Currency in the United States." It furnishes interesting and instructive reading. The opening chapter tells how wampumeage, tobacco warehouse receipts and other queer instruments were used as currency during the Colonial period. Subsequent chapters deal fully and explicitly with our coinage laws and coinage by our mints. The book gives the complete history of the national banking system, and contrasts and compares the banking systems of the various States; it relates the history of legal tender notes and discusses them as a substitute for taxation, touching upon the political history of the period, these notes having been made a political issue; the history of the silver controversy is fully told, especially from the so-called "crime of 1873," when the silver dollar was demonetized, down to the gold standard act of 1900. In the preface to his work Mr. Hepburn says:—

"Fortunately, all schemes of dishonest finance have been signally defeated by the people, and now we are reaping our reward. We stand forth pre-eminently as a nation whose credit, firmly based on a gold standard, is unimpaired; whose exchange is at a premium the world over, presaging a period of worldwide financial growth and development. The story of our financial history, from the early beginnings to the very superior Federal Reserve system upon which we have just entered, has the quality and charm of romance, alike interesting and instructive. This experience should be of great value as a guiding influence in aiding us to fortify our present commercial standing and banking power."

A general review of the conditions which have developed since the European war broke out concludes with this statement:—

"The opportunity is golden. With improved banking facilities we can assert ourselves as a nation, and the war necessities of other countries give us a great opportunity to become a creditor nation."

That is the viewpoint of the banker and student who has shot "big game;" who has scaled the walls of the counting room and gained a vision of greater possibilities on the broadening horizon of the future.

How He Writes Books.

"How have you managed to find time, between fulfilling your calling as a banker and your quests for big game, to do as much writing as you have?" Mr. Hepburn was asked.

"It is all accomplished by the help of a system which I have employed for a number of years," he said. "Always when I do any work I do it so that it can be preserved. Then if the time comes when I may have occasion to make use of facts and figures which have been gathered for any purpose I can always turn back to them. In the course of his activities almost every man acquires a great deal of information. The great thing is to have it in such form that it can be utilized when wanted.

"Then, in the summer time I usually stay pretty close to home, as the saying goes. When the shooting season is closed and the fish are not biting there is not much to draw one away from the city. Almost everybody else goes out into the country, so that for about four months there are no social responsibilities to distract your attention, and in that time you can do a great deal of quiet, undisturbed thinking—can go home in the evening, put on your pajamas and get down to real serious work.

"Some bright chap has remarked that genius is ninety-five per cent perspiration and five per cent inspiration. Well, I can do a good deal of work when I perspire freely."

SKATING—ROLLER OR ICE—IS THE WINTER SPORT FOR EVERY ONE IN NEW YORK CITY

UNLESS you skate this winter you will probably be as hopelessly out of the social whirl as a one legged man at a sword dancing contest. The one armed paperhanger with the hives will have no more trouble on his mind than the person who cannot glide over the ice or matched maple on the steel blades or the rubbered rollers.

Since dancing has run its race—the term is used advisedly—skating, the more natural and at the same time as good a general exercise, is coming back into its own.

Skating takes on the forms of the dance but employs a more general use of the physique than the terpsichorean effort. Skating has been established in many of the former dance studios. To be socially alert one now must be an accomplished exponent of the "Dutch roll," the "tango skip," the "half split" and the "break time." New expressions fit the new diversion. One does not refer to skating as skating. It is called in the new circles the "floor glide."

Along Broadway and in the whole calcium district entire dance floors have been remodelled to accommodate skaters. Where once the one-step was hectically supreme now the undulant sway of the "roller two-step" makes for less avoirdupois and more perspiration. Where once the Senegambian orchestra rolled and churned to the tune of "Hold Me in Yo' Lovin' Arms" and other tender melodies now a brass band blares forth the information that "the 'skeeter skates and the hoptoad hops." A stringed orchestra is drowned in the rattle of the rollers.

All over New York amusement places are rearranging their auditoriums to take care of the skaters. It is believed the return of the sport will be as hectically hailed as was the first opening of the dancing places.

"The lute lies broken; gone afar from us the lutinist."
The brooding moonlight lingers on the heath—
Once more must England come with gentle tread,
To bring her tears of tribute for the dead
And lay upon this brow a laurel wreath.

No more down furze-lit lanes his feet shall go,
No more the fields shall hush to hear his song;
That heart which beat with Bion's rapture strong,
Now with the old Earth Mother lieth low.

A noble music haunts the restless sea,
The winds of Heaven finger soft his hair;
Ay, Nature, saith: "To-night let skies be fair,
For Keats, the star-eyed, guides him o'er the lea."

Year follows year, the Summer's bloom and die,
And ever dreaming eyes Death's mist must fall;
Brother to brother, dust to dust must call;
And souls of men must greet Eternity.

Kindred of Keats and Shelley—ah! they pass,
And he who heeds not now our idle praise,
Sang gloriously of England's glorious days,
Yet pierced the thrilling secrets of the grass.

Ay, deem not England weak, if, bending down,
She brush away to-night a furtive tear,
And 'mid War's swift events that crowd the year,
Give him a Poet's bright, immortal crown.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reverie—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

It is a pernicious notion to think that the woman who wears herself out, body and soul, and never asks or hopes for one hour's relief from weary care, is the best mother. She may be good-hearted, but she has poor judgment; otherwise she would manage differently and try and keep sane and do the work which God probably created her to do. Every mother needs occasional relief from her cares. The other day I met a mother in her home moving feebly about, pale and worn to a shadow, who certainly bids fair to become another domestic martyr and evidently will soon succumb to fate. She told me that she had fainting spells and that the doctor had ordered rest and quiet, but she could not leave "baby." But it seems that it would be better to leave baby a while than it would to die or go insane and he would probably be a good deal better off in the hands of an older woman. Experience is of as much account in child management as it is in any other kind of business, and a visiting grandmother who can tell the difference between temper and cholera infantum would be a blessing to any town.

Every ology under the sun is taught except physiology, in a practical way. We do not need self-sacrificing martyrs for mothers half so much as we need women with good sense — women who will take the trouble to learn something about motherhood and the care of children before they bring children into the world.

Love is the great magician that can turn sordid surroundings into a home of happiness, that can transform age and wrinkles into youth and beauty. To those who will resolutely look at the good and ignore the faults in those whom they have chosen for partners for life, the ennobling influence on themselves and that 'partner is unspeakable. Many a light-minded, careless woman has become a good wife and mother because her husband trusted her and expected it of her; many a rough, rude, boorish man has become refined, kind and gentle, because he knew a good woman loved him and expected it of him.

Each man is surely building up a monument of deeds each day he lives, and the stones are swiftly gathered as the years onward speed. Be they smoothly dressed and chiseled, be they broken and unhewn! On the soiled, neglected esplanade with splintered fragments strewn? Bring the trusty square and plummet, try to pitch with steady hand, for without a true foundation, no monument may stand.

It is from eight to sixteen that boys begin to break away from parental control and the restraints of the fireside. It is then that they seem to feel that they know more than they who bore them; it is then that they begin to assert the liberty of the streets, and taste its delusions, its vices, and its crimes. Said an English jurist of great distinction: "A large majority of all the criminals who are brought before me have been made what they are by being allowed to be away from home evenings between the ages of eight and sixteen."

There is nothing in the world that grows upon one so fast as a desire to loaf. The growth is gentle and pleasant at first. We "put off" a little thing, dodge some little responsibility, or do some little shirking just because we don't wish to exert ourselves. It is a little thing, but it can't be rubbed out. It is the beginning of a disease of the will—a drop from the bucket of mortal force; a scratch on the face of self respect. A gallon is made up of drops, a death gash is only a wide and deep scratch.

TWO KINDS OF GIRLS.

One is the kind that appears best abroad—the girls that are good at parties, rides, visits, balls, etc., and whose chief delight is in such things. The other is the kind that appears best at home—the girls that are useful and cheerful in the dining room, sick room, and all the precincts of home. They differ widely in character. One is often a torment at home, the other a blessing; one is a moth, consuming everything about her; the other is a sunbeam, inspiring light and gladness all around her pathway. To which of these classes do you belong?

Beauty enchants and grace captivates for a season, but a well informed mind and a cultured heart will make a home beautiful when the bloom of beauty has faded and gone.

* * *

Gentleness and cheerfulness come before morality, and if the morality you possess makes you dreary, you have the wrong sort, depend upon it.

* * *

All men are our brothers; and when we injure them by lies which cut like a sharp razor, by sneers, by innuendoes, by intrigues, by slander and calumny, by hatred, malice and all uncharitableness, by want of thought or by want of heart by the lust of gain, by neglect, by absorbing selfishness, we are inheritors of the spirit of the first murderer.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Edited by Dr. David H. Reader, Chicago, Ill.

How a woman solved the problem:—One morning about four or five years ago a very weak and sorry looking woman came to the Home Health Club offices for help. She had with her a lusty boy of perhaps eight months. It was about all she could do to care for him and when one of the women working in the office learned that the poor mother had traveled with the babe in a day coach from one of the big steel plants near Harrisburg, Pa., she at once took charge of the infant so that the poor mother could at least rest while she talked with me.

The actual physical ailments of the woman were not of a serious nature, but although naturally a large and vigorous woman of rugged, Swedish parentage, she was almost exhausted.

One of the underlying principles of the Home Health Club and the one that has contributed the greatest amount of its success, is that unless the cause of any ailment is first located and removed, a cure cannot be brought about. It took a deal of close questioning to find out the cause in this case because both the woman and her husband were well born and of proud stock, but I persisted until I learned that there were four more little ones at home and that the husband and father was a laborer in one of the big blast furnaces and must stand half naked before the intense heat as long as he could and then run for the cool, fresh air for a brief breathing spell. At times the air outside was icy cold and his body would be dripping wet with perspiration, but he must have the air and the brief rest. His wages were good and they had a small home almost paid for, both of them had worked very hard and saved every penny possible, but for the past few months the husband had coughed almost day and night. His immense body had dwindled until he was almost a skeleton, while his cheeks were pale and hollow.

Worry and work combined had broken the mother down and the case looked bad for the children. Her husband had no other trade and work in all other lines, especially for unskilled labor was hard to get. If he stayed where he was it would mean certain death and perhaps for the mother also.

I had on my desk a bulletin from the Department of Interior at Washington, D.C., giving a list of public lands in the U.S. that was subject to homestead entry and I showed it to her explaining that if they would sell their home and go to a high, dry, climate where her husband could work in the open he would, possibly, get well. They could get a homestead free and the money they would get a homestead free and the money they would get from their house would help them to get a start.

The look of hope and gladness that came into her face was wonderful to see, she was better and stronger when she started home the next day and she felt so sure of the future that she adopted my suggestion and took a berth in the sleeper. Now, I am going to let you read a letter that I received from her a few days ago.

"I must also tell you that we have now made our final proof on the land and it is ours. We have eight head of horses, four cows, a lot of pigs, poultry, etc. We have a very comfortable house and good barns with a full line of farming implements that are all paid for. We have placed a small mortgage on the farm for 5 years at 6 per cent. but the personal property value is greater than the loan. We have 320 acres of land with 100 acres in cultivation. This year we have harvested over 1000 bushels of wheat that weighs 60 pounds to the bushel, also over 800 bushels of oats. My husband is strong and rugged and seldom coughs. He is an excellent manager and our home is very valuable. I tell you this because we have you to thank for it all, next to God; we have nothing of which to complain."

I wish I could as readily persuade many others that are suffering in the cities to get out into the open and make good as this family has done. Their story should be an inspiration to many. Not all should go where they did. Climatic conditions that are just right for some would be bad for others, but there is a place that is just suited to every individual. To some I recommend the soft, warm southland, to others the dry, warm southwest, to others the north and the northwest, while still another class are at their best by the sea where they can feel the salt spray in the air. I will be glad to help you to solve your health problems.

"I will gladly answer all inquiries for information of health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 3000 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage."

ATTRACTIVE FUR SETS

Quaint Muffs and Becoming Neckpieces

FASCINATING CAPS TO MATCH

NEW YORK, Dec. 24. — Just as the tinkling of sleighbells delighted the hearts of the children and grown-ups of yesterday, so are we of today enraptured with the thought of winter, when tiny coasters may once more be brought into use, and the snow king, zealously guards his domain—mountains and streams in glittering snow-clad loveliness.

For these days of sleighing and skating, not forgetting the gorgeous wintry mornings when a brisk walk over frozen paths brings a glow to our cheeks and brightness to our eyes, clothes must play as important a part as for any other occasions.

Attractive Fur Sets.

Fashion decreed at the beginning of the season that fur was to be popular, and old Father Winter has approved the notion by sending us a brisk, crisp winter that makes the touch of fur, no matter how small or how large, quite consistent.

In muffs and neckties there is wide choice both as to models and materials. It is no longer considered "home-made" to carry a muff of velvet, heavy silk, or velours, with just a band or two of fur, by way of trimming, or for that matter no fur at all. These sets are often made to match coat or suit; one especially pretty set worn recently with a tailored suit of dark-brown drvetyn, was of silk plush in the same tone as the suit, trimmed with strips of beaver to match the trimming on the suit. The muff was made in the popular melon shape, the plush being shirred to a very small opening at the hand, and banded with a two-inch strip of beaver. A broad Puritan collar of the plush completed the set, and a small hat, with a band of the plush around the edge and a beaver ball on the tip-top of the crown, was a chic accompaniment. This set was to be worn with the suit and also with a heavy, belted and pocketed top-coat of dark green velours, intended for sleighing, motoring and like purposes, when warmth was necessary as well as becomingness.

© McCALL

Another pretty set of close-haired fur, made from an old seal coat, had a barrel muff and the regulation throw-scarf. This set was completed by a long tasseled cap made of the same material as the loose, box-coat, which was of dark green duvetyn, also banded and cuffed with seal. Gold cord, silver and gold lace, is used for the more dressy muffs and neckpieces, and oftentimes there is a metal or velvet rose as an attractive bit of colour.

The Popular Tam-o'-Shanter.

With the awakening of the out-of-door spirit there has come a demand for comfortable headgear; not the freakish hats and caps which were introduced when the motoring fad came in, so hideous and unbecoming, but chic, little caps and tams made up in sweater cloth, lamb's wool, the material of the coat or suit, or knitted to match sweater or scarf. These caps are extremely youthful and chic, easily made, and the height of comfort.

To Clear the Complexion.

A glass of hot lemonade taken night and morning is a good thing to clear the complexion. Squeeze half a lemon into a tumblerful of boiling water, sweeten very slightly and drink as soon as it is cool enough.

Another thing a girl with a muddy complexion should do is to have a quick all-over soap and water wash every morning with hot water and then a sponge down with cold, ending up with a good rub with a rough towel.

As to food, don't eat rich, highly-seasoned things. Light home-made pastry doesn't hurt, neither do plain cakes, but don't go in for tinned salmon and lobster, curry or rich heavy cakes, and dont' drink much coffee or cocoa.

Now, as to the way to treat your face itself: If your skin is really very thick and muddy, it is an excellent thing to wash it every night at bedtime with very hot water and "green soap." Lather your face well and you will find the soap brings away blackheads and is most cleansing, but it is only suitable for really thick skin. It is apt to irritate a fine or thin skin.

Let the soap remain on a few minutes, then rinse it off in very hot water.

In the morning sponge your face with cold water and then wipe it over with eau de cologne and water or a little camphor and water.

ECZEMA ON ARMS ITCHED AND BURNED

Unsightly. Could Not Put Hand in Hot Water. Very Painful. Used Cuticura. Completely Healed.

Ipperial, Sask.—"My eczema appeared as a rash and itched and burned very badly. It was certainly unsightly and I could not put my hand in hot water or work at all when it was at the worst. Both my arms were covered with the eczema and it was very painful. One day the chemist advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I immediately used it, washing my arms and hands with the Cuticura Soap and then applying the Cuticura Ointment. In a month all signs of that awful disease had gone. I was completely cured." EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

7432

Although this is labelled a shirt waist it offers an excellent design for part of a costume and will make up well in all materials used for the average dress.

In the front of the waist there are two tucks of medium size extending to yoke depth at each shoulder. The opening is quite low and the closing at one side. The edges of the neck are trimmed with a small but ornamental collar the forward ends of which continue along the edges of the opening in shawl fashion. The back of the waist is plain.

The sleeves are quite close. They are of regulation shirt sleeve shape and open at the back of the hand. They are finished with a turnback cuff and may be made full length or shorter. The material of the body of the waist continues below the waist line, where it is held down by a tape, but may be cut off and finished with a band.

Taffetas, satin, voile, crêpe de Chine, &c., can be used for separate waists and the lighter dress fabrics when the waist is part of a costume. The sleeves may be made of sheer material with good effect.

The waist pattern, No. 7,432, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material with ⅛ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN THEY MET AGAIN

By R. PEMBERTON SLADE.

Mildred and I were about the same age. We were twenty. I was very much in love with her, but I hadn't a cent in the world, nor had she. A girl at that age is far more developed than a man of the same years. She seems to advance quicker, but not so far as the man. I know there are women nowadays who will not admit this, but I am not going to stop in my story to argue the point. At all events, when Mildred and I were twenty I was still a boy building castles in the air, while she was looking at her and my present and future status in a rationalistic way.

I was going out to China to engage in business and to live there indefinitely. I was to take a clerkship at the bottom of the ladder, and I had not heard that promotion was very rapid. I was unreasonable enough to urge Mildred to engage herself to me. Of course she declined, but not for any reason except that she considered that an engagement between us under the circumstances would be unjust to both.

"Very well," I said. "Do not consider yourself bound to me, nor will I consider myself bound to you, but so sure as the world turns on its axis I will return, and if you are free and willing I will marry you."

So we parted. I went to China determined to attend strictly to the work of advancing myself so that I might return for my love. I wrote her occasionally and received replies to my letters. I was bent on keeping my promise and strained every nerve to achieve the wherewithal to enable me to do it. But the luck was against me. I had been with a firm five years when they failed and went out of business. I found a position with another concern, with which I spent another five years. I was just about to be admitted to the firm as a junior partner when the head of the house died. His widow insisted on the business being wound up that she might get her capital out of it and go home to America. This threw me out again. By this time I had acquired a little capital, and, putting it with that of another man, we went into business together. Within a year we lost all the capital of both by speculation. I started in again with borrowed money and in ten years found myself with a fortune.

I was now forty-two years old, and Mildred was the same age. For the last ten years I had heard very little from her, but knew that she had not been married. I suppose it was pride or obstinacy, or both, that induced me to go back to America for her. Of course an absence of twenty-two years from a woman one loves—or has loved—must make quite a difference in his feelings for her. It occurred to me, however, that when we came together we would go on from where we left off. I wrote reminding her that I had told her when I separated from her that I would surely some day come back to marry her and I was now about to do so.

I received a reply to my letter the day I sailed. Mildred confessed that she had been waiting for me all these years, since she had believed I was just the man to do what I had said I would do. "Fortunately," she said, "all my friends tell me that I look ten or a dozen years younger than women of my age, and there is hope that my personal appearance won't shock you."

I confess I was greatly agitated when I called on Mildred, sent up my card and waited for her to receive me. When she came in she was naturally embarrassed. As for me, I was surprised, for she did not look more than twenty-eight. While she might well have changed so much that I would not know her, I saw her just as I remembered her, though a few years older, and yet not old enough to take her beyond the pale of young lady hood.

After a separation of more than two decades beginning just where we left off was impossible. I found that I must win my love again—not that I felt any anxiety as to how my courtship would result, but that we were both changed. I knew very well that Mildred would not have known me had she not expected me. And as for her, though she was not so changed in appearance as I, there was in her those other changes that come over us so imperceptibly that one's friends do not notice them unless they are separated from us for long periods. One change in her was more marked than any other. I had left her an extremely matter of fact woman. Increased years seemed to have developed a certain ideality that I had not noticed when she was younger. But I am inclined to think that every trait there is in us is developed as we grow older.

In a month we were married, since I must get back to my business. The ceremony was over when my wife introduced a lady as her older sister. I was much disconcerted.

"I remember your younger sister Florie, about six years old when I left America. I never heard of an older one."

"I am Mildred," said the older.

"And I am Florie," said the younger.

I stood mute, looking from the one to the other. I can't say that any one defined feeling prevailed. They neutralized one another.

"I am too old for you now," said Mildred, "but you are too good a man to be lost to the family. I have engineered all this. Florie helped me."

Long Sermons.

Perhaps the lengthiest sermons on record were preached by Isaac Barrow. On one occasion when preaching in Westminster abbey, at a time when visitors were shown around the place after the sermon for a fee, he kept on so long that the authorities "caused the organ to play till they had blown him down." When he preached on charity before the lord mayor and aldermen the sermon lasted three and a half hours, and if the collection came after that it probably suffered. And, again, when he had arranged to preach on the words "He that uttereth a slander is a liar," precautions were taken beforehand, and he was prevailed on to preach only the half relating to slander, leaving out that which had to do with lies. In this way he managed to finish in one hour and a half. Very likely some of his hearers wished that he was not quite so fond of work. —London Standard.

Turkish School Children.

Turkish children recite their lessons all together in the old fashioned schools, and if you could hear them you would think that you had gone into Wonderland with Alice, where "things wouldn't come straight." The little girls go to school in groups, and with them is always an old servant who carries all their books on what looks for all the world like a small clothes tree. The boys go and come in two long lines attended by their teacher. They carry their own books and wear long trousers and fezzes exactly like their fathers. Some of the tiny girls carry their own little tables and drawing boards. In the gipsy village in Scutari the children learn their lessons by songs in the street. They stand in a circle with a big girl in the middle, and they get noisier and noisier the more interested they grow.

Khartum.

Khartum owes its existence to an oriental form of treachery. When Khedive Mohammed Ali invaded the Sudan in 1820 he marched triumphantly to Shendi, where his troops were entertained at a banquet by the submissive natives. But while the khedive's high officials were seated at the feast they shared the fate of the viands and were themselves reduced to funeral baked meats. Full of fury, the army fell on Shendi and demolished it. Marching south, the invaders reached the junction of the Blue Nile and White Nile. With the conqueror's instinct they recognized that the strip of land, with its few fishermen's huts of straw, formed ideal strategical headquarters, so Khartum finally grew into the most sensitive part of the Sudan organism.

Electric Railways.

The first attempt to build an electric railway of which there is any record was made by Thomas Davenport, a blacksmith and wheelwright of Brandon, Vt., in 1835. The first overhead trolley idea was exhibited in Chicago in 1883, and the first practical overhead trolley line was built in Kansas City in 1884.

Legal Necessities.

"I understand you have placed your son in the office of a firm of big lawyers so that he may learn the really important things about his profession."

"Yes, and he is being taught them too. Why, the very first day he was put to work drawing up fee bills."

If Food Is Too Salty.

One often puts too much salt in food while cooking it. To remove the salt place a wet cloth over the top of the vessel in which the food is cooking, and the steam will draw the salt into the wet cloth.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Fighters Who See No Battle.

During a sea fight the engine room men tend the great engines of a battleship with all the care that they would bestow upon the same delicate yet mighty mechanism in time of peace, roaming listlessly, yet with a definite purpose, around the engine room with oil cans in hand bestowing drops of lubricant here and there as required. Theirs and the stokers' is almost—not quite—the hardest part of the whole grim drama of a naval battle, for they are absolutely cut off from the fight and are only cognisant of it by the quivering of their ship as the great turrets over their heads fire or as the enemy's shells thud against the armor or when some stray shot finds its way through the steel wall and the bunkers to the boilers. Such an event blends a whole stokehold in one frenzied orgy of death—death by exploding shell and scattering fragments of steel; death by awful wounds from flying, burning coals or death by scalding, hissing, blinding steam as the water tubes burst all around them. —London Tit-Bits.

His Tendency.

"Does your boy show any literary tastes?" asked the visitor on the farm.

"Well," answered the father as he gazed down the road at his son driving home the lost pig, "he can pen a stray article now and then."

CAPT. FRANCIS GRENFELL'S REGIMENT TO HAVE HIS MEDALS

LONDON, December 23—The late Captain Francis Grenfell of the Ninth Lancers, the first officer in the present war to win the Victoria Cross, was so grateful to his men that in his will just admitted to probate, he leaves them all his medals. Captain Grenfell, who was a well known polo player, left unsettled property of the gross value of $202,000. His will reads:

"I give to my regiment, to whom the honor of my gaining the Victoria Cross was entirely due, thanks to the splendid discipline and traditions which exist in this magnificent regiment, all my medals, including the V.C."

A very stout lady at the Zoological Gardens was seeing the lions fed for the first time, and was rather surprised by the limited amount of meat that was given them.

"That seems to me to be a very small piece of meat for the lion," she said to the attendant.

The man looked at the good ... more than ample girth with ... cially appraising eye.

"It may seem a small pi... indeed to you, mum," he said "but it's heaps for the lion.—Exchange.

FRENCH AVIATOR HOLDS UP A GERMAN TRAIN

The Paris Petit Journal gives the following account of an episode in aerial warfare:

"Our biplane is at an altitude of 1,5000 metres. The people in the train below do not see it, as it is right above them. Suddenly, like an eagle swooping down on its prey, the French war bird descends at a steep angle on the supply train. Luck is certainly with the aviators. To both right and left open fields and on a narrow railroad bank the train in plain view. No obstacles in front or rear; no woods, not a tree. Heads come out from the car windows, but are again drawn back in terror at the sight of the French tricolor on the biplane. Confusion starts among the German soldiers, who fight and jostle one another in a mad scramble to get in under the seats in the coaches.

"Slowing down a bit, our pilot runs his machine up parallel with the train, and the machine gun operator opens up with a sweeping broadside. It is good French bullets that plough through the walls of the compartments with a vengeance. In an instant the air is rent by yells, shrieks of pain and the groans of the dying. The French aviators are flying so low and so close to the train that they can look through the windows on either side of the cars. After having showered these with a formidable hail of bullets the biplane comes up abreast with the locomotive. Another dose from the machine gun lays low the engine driver and his assistant, at the same time dealing mortal wounds to the engine itself. The locomotive stops abruptly with a snorting, hissing sound, as it belches forth volumes of steam. The train is dead.

"From the coaches the 'boches' come scampering out and hurl themselves down the embankment in an indescribable frenzy. They slip on the gravel and tumble around in a struggling mass. Our biplane has gone aloft a bit in the meanwhile and circles around the place of the recent encounter, taking in all the details of the spectacle. Not a German soldier has enough presence of mind to make an attempt to bring down the French bird with a well aimed shot. They are all too confused by their harrowing experience.

"Our aviators soon return to their stations and report the incident, which they describe as having been quite 'amusing'."

Report of the Auditors to the Shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, 1913, we report as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet and compared it with the books and returns at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches. We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

We have checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches at a date other than, and in addition to, the verifications at 30th November, 1915, and found that they were in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

AS WE GROW OLDER

our minds are quite as active as in former years but our strength does not respond when we need it most; perhaps the kidneys are weak, the liver torpid, rheumatic pains or stiffened joints beset us, and we cannot easily throw off the colds that winter brings.

What we need is the rich cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion to renew the blood and carry strength to every organ of the body, while its glycerine soothes the respiratory tract, and its hypophosphites strengthen the excitable nerves.

Scott's Emulsion is a scientific oil-food, of unusual benefit to those past fifty years—particularly during the colder seasons, it imparts warmth and creates strength. One bottle will prove its worth. No harmful drugs.

NO TOUCH IN THE FRONT TRENCHES

Fighting as Usual on Christmas Day—Visites in Churches Near the Firing

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, via Paris, Dec. 21.—The whistle of bullets overhead, the roar of giant artillery in the distance, effectually dissipates all Christmas spirit of "peace on earth; good-will toward men," in the first line trenches.

Viewed from here it is easy to understand why officers and men are unanimous is not wishing to observe Yuletide.

"It would only make us homesick," said one French officer. "This is a war to the death. We are not like the armies of old which armisticed for the celebration of Christmas. It is necessary to forget the home festival this year and reserve our celebrations until victory."

During the past month the military mails have been overcrowded with letters and packages, with presents for the men in the trenches. Piles of bundles out here in the bomb-proof shelters remain unopened by common consent until Christmas morning. Then the officer commanding each section will play Santa Claus and distribute the gifts from home.

Decorate Churches.

Behind the battle lines the celebrations will be chimefully religious. Many of the churches, though partially destroyed, are being decorated in French colors, evergreen, holly and mistletoe by soldiers off duty.

On midnight of Christmas eve will take place perhaps the most impressive ceremony of all. A solitary figure will enter the ruins of Rheims cathedral and pray for the success of the French armies and the rest of the souls of soldiers who have fallen in defense of their country.

This will be Cardinal Lucon, who regularly prays twice a week in a hole in the untouched wing of the cathedral. It is impossible to hold mass inside the cathedral, so completely has it been wrecked by German shells. Therefore the aged cardinal offers devotions alone to the accompaniment of shrill cries of crows and the reverberating echoes of distant cannon.

Solemn high mass will be held Christmas eve and several services during the day, following in the sacristy of Soissons cathedral. The sacristy is intact, the bombardment having occurred on the opposite side. On the small altar a tiny light burns continuously.

"Although the enemy without reason destroyed the outer shell of the House of God, this light, typifying eternal faith in the heart, burns forever," said the priest in charge.

Shopping at the Front.

Christmas shopping is going on busily at populous towns like Epernay and Chateau Thierry, situated close to the front. Besides showing appropriate gifts for soldiers in the trenches, the shopkeepers display many suitable presents for the folks at home. Toys predominate but sweetmeats and various household knickknacks, fancy pin-cushions, sewing bags, toilet sets and expensive jewelery, are also sold as in times of peace.

The approach of the holidays, bringing with it the realization to the men in the trenches that they must fight for their homes instead of playing Santa with the kiddies about, evidently has not depressed the soldiers who are as optimistic as ever. Officers and men are remarkably comfortable in the trenches, now dspite the cold and the wet snow. The bomb-proof shelters are dry and well-heated. The rats and vermin have largely been killed off by a new serum supplied by the Pasteur institute.

A civilian visitor is struck just now by the seeming emptiness of the first line trenches. It is impossible to believe that the enemy is only a few yards distant. Of course the men are there but out of sight in their new warm dugouts. The only visible sign that the army is on the alert are the salient sentinels at concealed advance posts, ever ready to give instant alarm.

All in Fine Shape.

The men continue in fine physical condition. I was told that there is a minimum of sickness, even based on peace statistics. I saw a Landes battalion, a stirring military band at its head, pass in review before the French generals. Swarthy, strong soldiers from the Basque country swung along with the free and easy stride of trained athletes ready to enter the Olympic games. There were no exceptions. Seventeen months of the war seemingly have served as only so much physical training.

The French soldiers are confident of victory. They are confident that Christmas in 1916 will find Germany broken and French families reunited.

JAPANESE DO THINGS IN TOPSY TURVY MANNER

Whenever They Have Spare Moment They Run and Take Bath.

I just can't get used to how turned around, upside down, inside out topsy turvy, things are in Japan. A Japanese carpenter draws the plane toward himself, and a blacksmith sits down to work.

A Japanese blacksmith never knows the joys of getting tickets to the circus, for he hasn't any place for the advance man to paste up his three sheets. The whole front of a Japanese blacksmith shop is open, with other buildings jammed up so close on each side that the circus man couldn't get a poster in.

A Japanese book begins on our last page and finishes on our first paragraph. And their sentences begin at the top of the page and read down, like long columns of figures. They wear white to funerals and judge poetry by the beauty of the handwriting.

Japanese houses haven't any chimneys, so you may see a whole plateau of houses with not a single curl of smoke as far as the eye can reach. The Japanese cooking is done outside the house in a little charcoal stove. They have no stoves to keep themselves warm, only little hibachis, gallon jars with charcoal in them covered with fine ashes. There isn't enough heat in one to singe a miller, and whenever they get too cold they take a warm bath.

Bathing is a sacred rite. Whenever they have a spare moment they run and take a bath. When business is dull they hurry to a public bathhouse and jump in. If they miss one train they take a bath while waiting for the next. They take hot baths—steaming, sizzling hot. And the strange thing is they don't do the bathing in a tub. They have little foot baths about the size of crocks that they use for washing themselves and when they are thoroughly clean they climb into the tub.

If you should get into the tub first the proprietor would break into tears and tell you that you were bankrupting him, for the same water is used all evening, no difference how many guests the hotel has.

After smoking awhile they crawl out, steaming all over, gently blot themselves, get into kimonas and sit around bare ankled. One would think that before the evening was over a fleet footed runner would have to be dispatched for medical assistance, but instead of that they never catch cold.

RUSSIANS KEEN FOR WAR.

Red Cross Work in Empire Engaged for on a Colossal Scale.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Ian Malcolm, M.P., for Croydon, who has just returned to London after a tour of 12,000 miles in Russia as Commissioner for the Red Cross Society said this evening that the spirit of the Russians was remarkable.

"From the Czar, by whom I was received, to the lowliest peasant woman," he said to an interviewer, "there was not one thought of peace until the Germans were beaten or the last Russian soldier has fallen.

"Although I visited 180 hospitals in Russia, and the Red Cross work being accomplished over there is quite wonderful. They seem to think in millions. I had inspected the work in France and Italy, but in magnitude it is not comparable to that in Russia. The stores alone are colossal, and you would see a room in a palace filled with perhaps a million pairs of boots and a huge concert hall crammed literally to the ceiling with warm clothing.

"One figure alone will serve to indicate how immense is the Red Cross activity over there. They have dealt with over 100,000 enemy wounded besides their own casualties."

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chase's Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsenburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I could not just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

A LULL IN THE HARD FIGHTING IN THE VOSGES IS REPORTED TO-DAY

French Official Despatches Say That There Was No Important Fighting Last Night--Austria Will Not Comply With the American Demand But Will Press For a More Detailed Statement Regarding the Sinking of the Ancona.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, Dec. 24.—A lull in fighting on the slopes of Hartmannsweilerkopf was reported in official despatches to-day. The War Office announced this afternoon that no important fighting occurred last night.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 24.—Premier Sazanoff, in a speech before the Duma to-day, reaffirmed the determination of Russia to carry on the war to a successful conclusion. "The latest peace rumours are senseless," the Prime Minister declared. "The Entente Powers present a firm front against the enemy. On every front victory draws nearer. In Persia the Russian army has captured Hamadan and Kun. Their successes have ended the German attempts to stir up trouble in that quarter. In Greece the relations between the Government and the Entente Powers is well defined. following the fortifications of Salonika."

The budget committee of the Duma adopted resolutions declaring no peace possible until Germany's power is broken and asserting as a necessary guarantee in any peace agreement the consolidation of Russian influence in Persia.

ROME, Dec. 24.—A battle has been raging for three days between the Serbs and Bulgarians in the Albanian Mountains near Elbassan, the Serbian Prince Alexis Karageorgevich reported on his arrival here to-day. "Our men are fighting fiercely, splendidly," he said. "They have stopped every enemy charge and are conducting themselves as confidently as though they were carrying the campaign into Bulgaria." The Serbs now hold the line extending roughly across the Albanian mountains from Scutari to Mont Giovanni di Medua, thence to Durazzo and Valona, where the Serbian right wing forms a junction with the Italian forces.

ATHENS, Dec. 24.—The Greek Government to-day granted furloughs for one month to fifteen per cent. of all classes of reserves. In some quarters this is taken to mean that Germany has given definite assurances that no troops of the Central Empires will cross the Greek frontier for at least another month.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—What has happened to Henry Ford became one of the overshadowing news items in London to-day, temporarily upsetting interest in the "boys" Ford planned to bring out of the trenches before Christmas day. Scandinavian press despatches were most contradictory. One report said Ford had quit the expedition and was en route to Bergen to take the steamer Bergensfjord for America. Another said he probably was in a sanitarium in or near Christiania, taking the rest cure and planning to join the peace party at Stockholm. The vanguard of the peace party is expected to reach Stockholm this afternoon.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—In a cable to the Toronto Star to-day, Jas. L. Garvin, famous editor and political leader, intimates that the recent changes in the British headquarters staff are signs of political upheaval and marks an epoch in the conduct of the war. He says Lord Kitchener has been Britain's major or armies and may yet be the shaper of our destiny, but the Empire's new chief of staff, Sir Wm. Robertson, will be our director of campaigns on all fronts, and our real military head in the war.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—British Embassy to-day officially denied the report that Great Britain had declined to permit the shipment of American Red Cross supplies to Germany.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—In her next war Great Britain intends to be practically independent of the United States for food and munitions. Work has already been begun by experts of the British Government on plans for building up in Canada and other British colonies of munition works, and for intensification and extension of farming. This was learned to-day from sources close to the British Government. If Britain could purchase all her supplies and munitions at home, and in her colonies, ability to make loans from her own people would be greatly increased.

ZURICH, Dec. 24.—Reports from German sources to-day said that the Kaiser is suffering from a recurrence of the trouble reported to have affected him last year, cancer of the throat.

GENEVA, Dec. 24.—It is rumoured in Vienna that Austria will not in her next Ancona communication now nearly ready, entirely comply with the American demand for disavoyal and punishment of the submarine commander, but will present a more detailed statement concerning the sinking of the Ancona.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—The Exchange Telegraph's Bergen correspondent cabled to-day that Henry Ford left Bergen to-day for America.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—The inland revenue statement for the month of November just issued reflects the general prosperity of the country. The total receipts were $2,383,894, an increase of $779,000, as compared with November, 1914.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—Sir Sam Hughes, who has been confined to his bed for a couple of days with lagrippe, was able to be at his office this morning. He leaves to-night to spend Christmas at his home in Lindsay.

MR. JOS. WEARING A CANDIDATE FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.., member of the local Bar, has announced that as a result of numerous requests from friends, he will offer himself as a candidate in the coming election for the Board of Education. Mr. Wearing taught for a considerable time both in Ontario and the west, and for a number of years before coming to Peterborough worked under the direction of the different provincial governments of the Dominion in establishing and operating schools for immigrants in the newer parts of all the provinces.

Tender Jumped The Track

This morning a tender on one of the Canadian Pacific Railway locomotives ran off the track near Tweed and caused a temporary tie-up of some of the passenger trains. Several of them were late. Traffic was particularly heavy on all trains passing through this city, a condition which is only to be expected at this season of the year.

An electric motor no bigger than a watch is said to produce one horse power.

AN OVERCOATLESS CHRISTMAS FOR THE SALONIKI ARMY

British Troops Buy Turkeys By the Thousand and Plum Puddings Arrive From London For the Soldiers

A LULL IN FIGHTING

SALONIKI, Dec. 24.—This will be an overcoatless Christmas for the thousands of French and British troops in Saloniki, and at the allied front, the weather suddenly moderating and there are no traces of snow at Saloniki. The troops are buying turkeys by the thousands. The army mail arrived last night, laden with thousands of plum puddings from London. The telegraph office is besieged by officers, sending home Christmas greetings over the single cable wire. It is improbable that any informal truce will be agreed on over Christmas Day, though the lull at the Greek border probably will continue. The divergence in Slav and Anglo-French calendars brings Christmas for the opposing armies on different days.

Indian Was Fined Five Dollars

Redskin Was Picked Up in an Intoxicated Condition—A Cock-Fighting Episode

An Indian from Roseneath figured on the Police Court docket this morning. He pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk. The accused made a strong plea for leniency, working in an old-time Christmas story that is so familiar to juries at this season of the year. The Indian reminded Magistrate Dumble that he had one relative with the Overseas Forces, and a mother at home who would be unwilling to spend Christmas without the company of her somewhat wayward son.

He as fined $5.00 with an option of fifteen days in gaol.

Oscar Coons and John Duggan were fined five dollars each. They pleaded guilty to a charge of being interested in a cock-fighting episode.

On Monday Evening, Jan. 3rd, 1916, the Ladies of Trinity Church, will serve a Fowl Supper from 5 until 8 o'clock, in the basement of the church, after which an excellent Program will be delivered. Tickets 50 cts.

Greeting

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
Right, right, north and south let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the end of great fear that the eagle began,
Sing of glory to God and of good-will to man!

—Whittier.

SANTA CLAUS AND CHRISTMAS SPIRIT AT THE ARMOURIES

Lt.-Col. Johnston Remembered Turkey and Plum Pudding For Peterborough Soldiers To-morrow Although Greater Part of the Men Will Spend Christmas at Home—Nephew of Peterborough Man Honoured for Services in the Field—To-day's Military News.

The spirit of Christmas was in evidence at the armouries to-day. Various presentations took place, half the men are away on leave, and there were mysterious whispers of turkey and plum pudding for those who are on duty to-morrow. Yesterday afternoon the Salvation Army presented every member of the battalion with a handsome illustrated souvenir of Peterborough. Drilling has practically been suspended over the Yuletide.

Lieut. C. R. Widdifield, who has been acting assistant adjutant of the 93rd, joined the ranks of the benedicts to-day.

Many of the Peterborough boys with the 59th Battalion, 33rd Battery and other units are home for Christmas.

Pte. Harold Chapman of the 81st Battalion, Toronto, is the guest of his uncle, Mr. George Lenton, London street.

Congratulations are due Company Sergt.-Major S. Calladine and Company Quartermaster Sergt. Williams of the 93rd Battalion. It is a boy in each case.

Lieut. Wilfred Stratton, who is leaving for overseas at the beginning of the New Year with a draft of mechanical transport drivers for the Imperial Army, is home on a few days' holidays.

Pte. Ed. Sheppard, a Peterborough boy with the 70th Battalion, London, was a visitor at the armouries to-day.

4.—Promotions.

Reverting to D. O. No. 45 of December 17th, 1915. The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the date of Corporal Payne's promotion to Sergeant, to date from December 1st, 1915.

KEITH G. LECH,
Captain
Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

The sum of two dollars has been donated to the 93rd Battalion Band Fund by Mr. H. Newton.

A letter acknowledging receipt of the "season's greetings" from the city, was received at the City Hall this morning. The names mentioned in the letter are all Peterborough boys, namely, Lieut. M. M. Robison, Lieut. John Dewart, Privates B. Beach and John Wood. All are members of the 86th Machine Gun Battalion which is being raised in Hamilton.

To-day was house cleaning day at the armouries. Half the battalion is away on leave and for the balance drill was forgotten and the men donned fatigue suits and gave their winter home a thorough cleaning not that the barracks are not always kept clean, but this was a special occasion. Chief Howard and a couple of his men assisted in the operation by flooding the cement floor of the drill hall with a fire hose, after which the 93rd men, armed with brooms and scrubbing brushes, gave the floor a thorough manicuring.

As many as possible of the men of the 93rd will be allowed to go home for their Christmas dinner, but for those who are on duty at the armouries there will be a Chistmas dinner, of turkey and other good things. Sergt. Cook W. Wride, who has just completed his course in the School of Cookery, is home from Kingston in time to superintend the Christmas fare for the 93rd boys.

Santa Claus eluded the sentries at the armouries this morning and succeeded in penetrating into the sanctum of Lt.-Col. Johnston. The commanding officer was called from his office for a few minutes and when he returned he found his desk covered with an array of Christmas gifts. Among them was a magnificent gold-headed cane suitably engraved, a gold mounted fountain pen, a cigar case, a silver match box and a box of cigars. There were no names attached to the gifts, but it is strongly suspected that the noncoms and men of the 93rd know something about them.

Armourer Sergt. Geo. Grange and Corp. A. E. Lacey of the 93rd Battalion, who have been taking an armourer's course at Kingston, are home on Christmas leave.

Sergt. Harold Knapman of the 33rd Battery, is home on leave from Kingston.

Havelock is to inaugurate a campaign to secure a half platoon at least, and possibly a platoon, for the 93rd Peterborough City and County Battalion. A deputation, consisting of Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., and Mr T. P. Lancaster, editor of the Havelock Standard, has waited upon Lt.-Col. Johnston, in connection with the matter, and promised that if an officer was sent to Havelock, permanently, that the Village would undertake to raise at least 25 men, and possibly more, for the 93rd. Needless to say the offer was accepted, and the 93rd officers will do everything in their power to assist the Havelock people in their effort to raise their complement. Recruiting throughout the County, generally, promises to be brisk after the holidays, and with their 500 mark for Christmas reached Lt.-Col. Johnston and his staff are looking forward confidently to a brisk campaign to secure the balance of the battalion.

"I should worry!" Jack Reeves who worked here some time ago on shells and later at the same work for the Vickers Co., in Montreal, has enlisted in the Guards, and is now to be found as No. 177530, Private J. T. STILL FIGHTING FOR POSSESSION OF FAMOUS PEAK

French Still Claim to Hold Part of Hartmannsweilerkopf But German Statement Reports it a Serious Repulse

ACCOUNTS DO NOT TALLY

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The German forces at the Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, the desperately contested peak in the Vosges which was the scene of a notable French victory on Tuesday, further decreased the French gains to-day by retaking the positions wrested from them on Tuesday on the left of the French position on the northern slopes of the mountain. At this point the French troops retreated to the positions they occupied before the attack.

According to the official communique issued by the French War Office to-night, the conquered positions on a front of two kilometres are still in the hands of the French as the fruits of Tuesday's attack. These positions are on the French centre and right, taking in the heights south-east of the summit and to the south as far as the Wattweiler farm.

A heavy snow storm interrupted the infantry fighting to-day, but this afternoon the German artillery began a violent bombardment of the summit and the northern slopes, and it is presumed that further counter-attacks will be made as soon as the weather conditions are more favourable. The French repulse appears from the German official statement issued to-day to have been serious. The Berlin War Office claims the capture of 23 officers and 1,530 men in the counter-attacks.

The discrepancy between the French and German versions of the fight for the summit of Hartsmanns-Weilerkopf persists in to-day's statements, the Germans announcing that they have re-captured the summit, which, they insist, was taken from them on Tuesday, while the French, who have steadily claimed possession of the summit since last April, say that the Germans are now bombarding the summit, implying that it is still in French hands.

Alderman Stratton Again a Candidate

Alderman Stratton, who represents the Centre Ward in the City Council announces himself as a candidate for re-election. He can very justly do so; for he has made an exceptionally good alderman, careful, painstaking and intelligent, in that he took pains to inform himself in relation to the problems the Council had to deal with. As Chairman of the Finance Committee, he has fully justified his appointment. In a very difficult and trying year he has, as is admitted on all hands, handled the financial situation most satisfactory. He has generally, to his credit, applied the practical knowledge gained in a large and successful business experience to city affairs, to which he has given thought, time and attention.

Judge Huycke desires that every person who believes he or she has any evidence appertaining to either side of the School Board Investigation, communicate with him as soon as possible.

MR. CRANE ON STAND

The conclusion of the investigation into the affairs of the Board of Education loomed in view this morning by the acceleration of examination and the mutual arrangement on several points. In fact, Mr. O'Connell commenced his argument shortly after twelve o'clock, but owing to the prospect of interruption for the noon recess in the middle of his review of the facts Judge Huycke proposed an early adjournment until two o'clock.

Mr. O'Connell brought out what appeared to be an important point in his introductory remarks when he stated that the section of the Act authorizing an investigation for malfeasance or breach of trust on the part of a municipal officer or servant assumed the proper election of that person. This particular court, he observed, had no jurisdiction in the question of the validity of an election; hence the investigation could not apply to Mr. Gordon's right to sit on the Board of Education. Under the provisions of the governing clause his acts could be investigated if desired, but the fact of his proper election was assumed. From this it would appear that the Board of Education's proposed enquiry concerning Mr. Gordon would have to be otherwise arranged.

Mr. Alex. Weddell was re-called at the resumption of the enquiry. He stated that the typewriters were ordered on April 20, and delivered on May 8, 1914.

It often happens that you remit insurance premiums to the head office before the insured pays it?" Mr. O'Connell asked.

"Sometimes," Mr. Weddell replied

And that occurred with School Board's insurance?

Yes.

Mr. Hall—"Do you recall any particular instance when a remittance was forwarded by your Company before the premium was received from the Board"

"No particular instance."

Regarding Hill, Weddell & Company's account in the Royal Bank Mr. Weddell stated that only fire insurance went into it.

"Did Mr. Hill keep his persons' account in that fire insurance account?"

"No."

"It related solely to the fire insurance business?"

"Yes."

Mr. Weddell added that any money withdrawn was for the needs of fire insurance affairs.

FRIDAY, DEC. 24, 1915

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS.

The Examiner gives all its readers, and the city and country, the steriotyped, but sterling, old wish—

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

THIS CHRISTMAS.

Christmas comes to us this year of grace with many of the conditions wanting that we traditionally and personally associate with the day. In the matter of weather we narrowly escape, if we do escape, the little calamity of a "Green Christmas". Besides, this Christmas finds us in the most tremendous welter of war and carnage the world has ever seen in its six thousand years of recorded history, with all their wickedness, sin and wrath. When we see these things in Europe that react upon the whole earth besides, the superficial reasoner concludes that Christmas and Christianity are a failure, and that the spirit of peace on earth and good will to man has vanished away. But this is not so. Christ is the rock and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. From all this raging sea of carnage and destruction, the Day Star shall rise with renewed brightness. The order of nature and divine destiny does not imply a dead level of peaceful uniformity. The elements rage and the storms sweep away the beautiful handiwork of God, bow the high trees and lash to pulp the sweetly blooming flowers. But the tempest passes away, and the brightness of sunshine and the sweet, refreshing of the rain, heal the wounds, and we realize the beauty of the lines of Moore:

How calm and beautiful comes on
The stilly hour when storms are gone;
When warring winds have died away:
And clouds, beneath the glancing ray,
Melt off and leave the land and sea
Sleeping in bright tranquility.
Fresh as if day again were born,
Again upon the lap of morn.

This awful war will cease and we shall have a peace we can value more highly for the price it has cost. Christ came to earth to the angelic tune of "Peace on earth, good will towards men." But the Christianity that came then was sore buffeted, it was crucified of wicked men, whose passion of prejudices, the fruit of a warped and prostituted religion and self-righteous hypocrisy were the same in spirit as the evil spirit which is to-day again crucifying Christianity. Christianity was crucified for the world's salvation, and the sacrifice is being repeated to-day. The principles of Christianity are outraged and ignored, and the wrath of man takes on the spirit of the devil. But out of the evil good will come. We have had negations of Christianity a thousand times in the past as great in principle, if not as disastrously exhibited in degree, as we see to-day upon the war-racked soil of Europe. We cannot see and solve the mysteries of the divine workings; but, if we have faith, we can be sure that out of this tumult will come peace, and the new conception of Christianity will bring to humanity a new sense and enjoyment of salvation from organized sin and violence. It is sad that in this immense strife between the powers of light and darkness so many homes will keep the Christmas sadly—with many a vacant chair. But these things happen every year though perhaps fewer in numbers. The Lord of Christmas is still in heaven, ruling the destenies of men and guiding us through ways we know not to the fulfilment of His divine purpose, which is, though we cannot see it, for the good of ourselves and the world.

BANK OF COMMERCE.

With a strong exhibit of liquid assets, and with profits for the year not far behind those of the years of expansion preceding the war, the annual statement of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the year ending November 30 is calculated to satisfy both the shareholders and clients of the bank, as one which in these difficut times reflects the highest credit upon the officers of that institution, and particularly upon Sir Edmund Walker, the president, and Mr. John Aird, who has now the title, as he has for some time had most of the responsibilities, of the general managership.

The Bank of Commerce has been strikingly free during the whole of the last two years from the consequences of the diminished demand for commercial accommodation which has affected some of the other banking institutions. The current loans in Canada of the Bank of Commerce are at the present time no less than $130,893,064, a reduction of little more than a million from last year and of only five and a half millions from the amount thus employed in 1913, at the height of Canada's period of expansion. There has, however, been a reduction during the two years of about eight millions in current loans abroad.

In spite of these continued large services to Canadian trade and industry, the Bank of Commerce has materially strengthened its liquid assets during the past year, being enabled to do so in part by a largely increased amount of deposits; and it is worthy of note that an exceptionally large proportion of these liquid assets is in the form of absolute cash. The liquid reserves to-day amount to $101,173,357, and compare with $93,983,654 a year ago; they represent 45.4 per cent. of the public liabilities this year, as against 43.1 per cent. a year ago; and the cash items—specie, Dominion notes and instantly convertible paper—$55,752,032, or 25.2 per cent., of public liabilities, as against $43,354,378 a year ago.

Profits for the year, as might be expected with funds so actively employed, were not far behind those of previous years. They amounted to $2,362,036, or 8.25 per cent. on the capital and rest combined, as against $2,668,233, or 9.36 per cent., in 1914. After deducting the war tax ($122,907) and making the usual contribution to the officers' pension fund, there was still a handsome surplus left after the ten per cent. dividend and two per cent. bonus were paid as usual. In order that the fullest provision might be made for any possible deterioration of securities, the directors have decided to set aside one million dollars as a reserve against further depreciation, a course that will no doubt meet with general approval.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford is manager of the local branch of the bank, which has largely shared and contributed to the conditions that permit so extremly gratifying results of the year's operations of this great Canadian bank.

A NEW SPIRIT.

Mr. John Redmond has received a very touching letter. It is from a Belfast lady who has spent much time and money in opposing Home Rule. She writes to say, after Mr. Redmond's speech, she is reconciled to Home Rule and feels that her life work has been wasted. "After Dublin boys and Belfast boys have fought shoulder to shoulder in the trenches," she says; "there can never be two nations in Ireland again."—London Daily Mirror.

FIGHT FOR WORLD FREEDOM.

"Realizing to the full the tragedy of this war, we in Canada pray that the whirring loom of time may weave the mighty events of the next twelve months into an abiding peace. But there is with us the most intense conviction that the cause for which we fight does truly concern the freedom of the world, and that there can be no enduring peace until it fully prevails. Interwoven with this conviction is an equally intense and unalterable determination to spare no effort and shrink from no sacrifice necessary to make so great a cause triumphant. Finally, we have faith that this war heralds not the "dies frac," but the regeneration of our civilization, founded as it is upon so many centuries of aspiration, endeavour and sacrifice; faith also that humanity's struggle against the enthronement of force above right will not be in vain."—Sir Robert Borden at Canadian Club, New York.

TRUE PATRIOTISM OF SIR WILFRID.

The Montreal Star is not an advocate of the Liberal cause or a supporter of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but, while the Liberal leader is still being attacked and denounced by the Tory and Nationalist press of the baser and more vital type as disloyal, it has not hesitated to publish the following manly and honest appreciation of this recent truly patriotic and ringing message to Canadians, saying:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered an address at the Monument National which will encourage every Canadian patriot bent on winning the war. It was an address that must greatly help recruiting, which is the most practical expression of patriotism at this critical time. Sir Wilfrid's masterly review of the events beginning with and following the brutal Prussian attack upon France in 1870, puts the events of the present war in an illuminating perspective; and he never said a more farseeing and statesmanlike word than when he declared that "if Germany triumphs in this war, the United States will regret its neutrality on this occasion, as Britain to-day regrets its neutrality in 1870."

"Sir Wilfrid has from the first seen the issues at stake in this conflict in their true character. A life-long Liberal, he sums up, in the best fashion for his own mind and the minds of his fellow-Liberals, these vital issues in the ringing statement: 'Young Liberals, this war is the cause of Liberalism.' He means by that that the Allies are fighting for the right of every people to govern itself in its own way—as witness the efforts of France to carry liberty to the French Provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, as witness the determination of Italy to rescue the Italians of the Trentino and Istria from Austrian tyranny, as witness the Russian proclamation of autonomy to the Poles.

"Sir Wilfrid is for the entente cordiale on both sides of the Atlantic. That is the true patriotism in Canada as in Europe. British and French in origin, we must draw closely together and feel more constantly our solidarity of interests if we are to survive in the stormy days to come. This is no time for small nations to be divided against themselves. For wholehearted union in Canada, Sir Wilfrid has always stood, and his latest utterance will long stand as an important contribution to that vital necessity of our national life."

ONTARIO OPPOSITION LEADER AND HIS JOURNALISTIC CRITICS

We are at a loss to know what can have moved our usually calm neighbour, the Montreal Gazette, to make an onslaught on the leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, and to bring against him charges which contradict each other. Mr. Rowell, it is said, "belongs to the narrowest sect within the party." But it is also said that Mr. Rowell is too broad.

Sir Wilfrid had his faults, but never played such a many-sided part as this at one and the same time. As an opportunist, he suffered himself to be tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine, but was apparently not equal to the feat of advocating rank contrarieties in a single performance."

It will hardly be said that Mr. Rowell is an opportunist in regard to prohibition. No one could have taken a more definite stand upon that question, or one so diametrically opposite to that of the political opportunist. Then where and in what respect has he advocated "rank contrarieties?" He has coupled democracy and Imperialism, says the Gazette. Who would seperate British Imperialism from democracy? To make such a separation would be to declare that in this war we are playing the part of hypocrites. A thousand times it has been said that in this war we are fighting the battle of democracy and humanity. Were these mere catchwords, mere devices for beating the Germans in argument? Mr. Rowell thinks not. He assumes that we are sincere, and he is ready to carry out in Canada the policy for which our men are fighting in Europe. Surely if the charge of opportunism can be made, it is not against Mr. Rowell, who couples democracy and British Imperialism, but against those who would separate these ideas.

Mr. Rowell, it is said, is a free trader and a protectionist. Who is Canada is not? The settled policy of Canada is a compromise between absolute freedom of trade and protection carried to the extreme of exclusion. We all read with satisfaction the reports of increase in our foreign trade, the reports of the growth of our domestic manufactures. The thing that needs to be checked is the abuse of protection for selfish ends and, for the creation of monopolies. For this purpose we need vigilant criticism, and a strong sense of the value of freedom.

Mr. Rowell, says the Gazette, advocates reciprocity and the protection of the Canadian market. Where is the contradiction? The reciprocity proposal which Mr. Rowell advocated provided for a free exchange of farm products and did not touch manufacturers except in a very slight and incidental way. Under it, the manufacturers' market would have been protected and the farmers' market would have been enlarged. Tilley's tariff of 1879, embodying the National Policy, contained an offer of reciprocity with the United States in farm and other natural products. There was no inconsistency in that. There is no use in threshing over the old straw of 1911, but the facts are as we say. There is no inconsistency between reciprocity and moderate, reasonable protection.

If it is wrong to try to associate democracy with Imperialism, what shall be said of Lloyd George? He is an earnest champion of social reform. He is, above all other public men in England, the advocate of vigorous prosecution of this war. But he speaks and acts as he does, not because he loves war, but because he believes that the Prussian disease must be cured in order that social reform may be advanced and democracy come to its own.—Star.

London, Dec. 23.—The honour list issued to-night includes five officers of the Canadian contingent and one in the Newfoundland regiment.

The following is appointed Companion of the Distinguished Service Order:

Lieut.-Col. Victor Wentworth Odlum, 7th battalion, "for conspicuous ability and energy. He personally superintended arrangements for a bombing attack made by his battalion on the night of November 16-17 near Messines, and by his coolness and determination was largely instrumental in bringing about the success of the exploit." Lt.-Col. Odlum is the nephew of Mr. Geo. W. Powell, Peterborough.

Jean's Christmas

[From the Montreal Daily Mail]

The clatter of little Jean Chausseaud's wooden shoes on the cold pavements of Liege were muffled by the light fall of snow, as, clinging to his mother's hand, he hurried to the dull quarters, which had been their home since the great battles of the early days when the German soldiers had swept into the city. Little Jean was quite content. He was only four, and at four years a good mother and a stomach full of nice warm soup and wholesome bread constitute all that is necessary for contentment.

Little Jean's mother was unhappy. Grief had worn lines in her young face—grief born of the loss of two brothers fighting the battles of Belgium; the battles of the world—and to-night the stain of fresh tears showed dimly in the dusk of the afternoon.

"My poor Jean," she murmured, as she drew the little fellow closer to her, as if to protect him from the sharp blast that met them as they turned the corner. "My poor Jean," and once more she crumpled a small bit of paper to her breast.

Little Jean looked up at the mention of his name. "What is it that you wish, mamma?"

"Not you, my lad, sobbed the woman, "not you, your father." And once more the tears welled from her eyes.

"But why do you cry, mamma," insisted the little fellow, "is it not Christmas Eve?"

Christmas eve. The mother pondered over this as they climbed the stairs in the rear to the two rooms of the once pretty home. They were the only two rooms left habitable after the bombardment, but the industrious little woman had done all she could to make them home-like, for they must be home until the war was over. Until the war was over. How she hung on that thought and she breathed a prayer that it might be finished soon.

Christmas eve. Again she took the crumpled note from her breast and kissed it. Tears prevented her reading it but she now knew the words and she knew the love that, under the circumstances, had prompted the writing of such a cheerful note. Capt. Jean Chausseaud was wounded; not seriously he said, but that was always his way. He would cast aside everything for her; everything for her and their country. And he had told her to be brave, brave for his sake and for little Jean's.

She would not tell the lad. She knew that little Jean was wise beyond his years and that her grief would be his if he but knew the truth, but she decided to follow her husband's injunction and be brave for his sake and little Jean's.

Brushing aside the tears and throwing off her shawl, she gathered together some fuel, fuel that came from the ruined front of the home, and lighted a fire.

She unwrapped the parcel little Jean had seen her bring home and cut the bread for Jean and herself. Then she heated the soup. Little Jean had had his soup at the "canteen," where the good American lady had spoken kind words to him. He could not understand them, but he knew they were kind because she had smiled as she patted his curly head. He had had his soup, but the mother set two dishes and gave him a bit of hers, after the fashion of mothers like his. How good the soup tasted after the walk in the sharp wind. How good the bread tasted, bread made from Canadian flour.

The meal over, little Jean slipped off his his wooden shoes and curled up in a chair. How heavy those shoes were. He was not used to them. Before the big war came little Jean had worn shoes like Canadians wear, but now such shoes could not be had because little Jean's father was not there to give them the money to buy them. Even the stockings that were wearing thin had been sent to him by the mother of some little Canadian boy. He had been with his mother when she got them from the lady at "Le Comite." Yes, and the warm clothes he wore were once worn by a little Canadian boy, but they were getting thin, and mamma's clothes were thin, too. Once on the way home he had seen her cringe and wrap her shawl tighter around her as they faced a piercing gust of wind.

The meal was over and Mamma Chausseaud wrapped the bit of bread that must serve for breakfast and carefully put it away. Then she sat down and took the lad in her arms, and told him once more the story of the Christ-child who was born long, long ago, and why the day was called Christmas. She told him of the sacrifice of Calvary which gave a world its religion, which will always be sacred; how Christ gave up his life that others might live.

"Just like Uncle Georges, mamma?" piped the little lad.

"Yes, my boy, like Uncle Georges."

"And Uncle Francois?"

"Yes, Uncle Francois, too."

Again the little fellow nestled in his mother's arms and heard the rest of the story.

Sleep hung on the little eyes and the little fellow was sent to his prayers before the battered crucifix on the wall—a prayer for Belgium, for the father fighting for Belgium and for the Canadians, to whom Belgium is looking for her food while she fights the battles of the world.

Off to bed the little fellow went while the mother sat and gazed into the past, into days when all were happy and there was plenty. Christmas eve. What would Christmas be to big Jean? What would it be to the lad? She would make it what she could. But on second thought, what could she make it? She was thankful for the Canadian bread, but what did that mean to the boy of four. He considered the food put into his mouth his divine right. It was his right, she thought, a wave of bitterness sweeping into her mind. She quickly aroused herself from this mood, however, and thanked God that the lad had not asked her about Santa Claus and if the morrow would bring the toys and gifts that his father had heaped upon him, even in the days before the boy was old enough to understand.

Her mind wandered through the happier days and soon became a dream as she slept in her chair.

A sharp knock at the door aroused her. She started from her troubled sleep, first hesitating to answer it, then preparing herself for the worst news, the news that she feared most, she opened the door.

Powdered with snow, there stood a big man from the Committee, and he bore a huge parcel.

"For Madame Chausseaud," he said and he thrust the parcel into the arms she had unconsciously stretched out to receive it and was gone in the darkness.

With trembling hands Madame Chausseaud opened the parcel. One by one she laid out the garments it contained. The little coat, mittens, warm stockings, underwear and shoes—real shoes, no more sabots for Jean. Then came the coat for herself and other warm clothes.

With a smile on her face she carefully planned the laying out of the gifts so that little Jean might find them when the dawn of Christmas Day drove the sleep from his blue eyes.

Christmas Day dawned dull and gray and little Jean Chausseaud, sitting up in his bed, gazed with wonder at the array before him.

"Oh, mamma," he called to the woman in the other room, who was cutting the bread that was to be their Christmas breakfast. "Oh, mamma, see what Santa has brought."

One by one they held up and looked over the clothes, the mother listening intently to the childish comment.

"And see the pretty card. I found it in the pocket," cried the little fellow. "What does it say; read it to me."

And the mother read the words, among the tinsel and evergreen: "Joyeux Noel du Comite de Secours Belge du Canada."

"And there is more on the other side," said the lad, taking the card from the mother, and bending over him, tears and smiles vying with each other, she spelled out the words, "A Merry Christmas, from the Belgian Relief Committee of Canada, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal."

She knew the word Canada and she said a silent prayer of thanks for the generous people of Canada, who had given little Jean his Christmas.

Von Rinteler Spoke of War In Year 1906

Declared Germany Would Crush France If Latter Sided With England

MOROCCAN CRISIS THEN ON

Kaiser's Agent Thought His Country Would Have Our Sympathy—Free Sea Cry Old.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Franz von Rintelen, the German secret service agent who came to this country last April for the alleged purpose of instigating strikes in munition factories and causing complications between this country and Mexico, was in New York ten days ago during the Moroccan controversy that nearly plunged Europe into war, with the nations lining up about as they are at present. At this time von Rintelen had an office in a William Street office building, and was supposed to be one of the American representatives of either the Deutches Bank, or the Disconto Gesellschaft of Berlin.

Von Rintelen landed in New York, it was said yesterday at about the time that the Moroccan crisis was at its most critical stage and when war clouds hovered over all Europe. The visitor, who is a reputed intimate of the Kaiser and Prince Henry of Prussia, told an acquaintance that a war was looming up and that if France sided with England Germany would crush France and compel the French people to bear the expense of the struggle by contributing to Germany an indemnity in territory as well as money.

The man to whom von Rintelen unbosomed himself met the German at a housewarming in Fifth Avenue, in the latter part of February, 1906, when the Algeciras Conference, called to discuss the Moroccan situation, was in session. The man who told the story of von Rintelen's visit to New York is close to French official agencies in this country and is a warm friend of Ambassador Jusserand. The housewarming was at one of the finest homes in Fifth Avenue, not many blocks distant from the present home of Andrew Carnegie.

Met at Banker's Home.

"It was nearly tne years ago," said the man yesterday, "when I was introduced to Franz von Rintelen, who is now held a prisoner in London by the British authorities, and who is known to have come to this country a few months ago to stir up trouble that would damage the cause of the Allies and help that of Germany and Austria-Hungary. I met him at a housewarming of a prominent New York banker. The affair was an event of the season, and among the artists who appeared were Kubelik and the late Mme. Nordica.

"When I was introduced to von Rintelen he took me for a Frenchman and addressed me in French. As I subsequently learned, he had no idea that I was an American citizen. The Algeciras conference was then in session, and the European situation was, as you will remember, critical. Our conversation finally drifted to the European crisis, von Rintelen himself bringing up the subject. He was very bitter against England, and asked me if England and France were going to line up together in the event of a war. I did not give him any satisfaction on that score, for the very good reason that I was not in a position to give it.

"Von Rintelen said that, so far as France was concerned, France would have to choose between England and Germany. If she decided to side with Germany everything would be good and well, he said; but if she sided with England it would be the work of Germany to make France pay the cost of any war that might ensue, and the indemnity Germany would force from France would include territory as well as money.

"When he finished his utterance about what Germany would do to France I replied that, speaking unofficially, I was quite certain France could not be bulldozed by Germany or any other nation concerning her national friendships. I added that if Germany was intent on forcing a war in Europe, as seemed to be the case, at that time I thought Germany would be wise in considering a long time what such a step would mean. I said I was sure that if such a war did break out Germany would find the whole civilized world lined up either actively or sympathecially against her.

Expected American Sympathy.

"When I told von Rintelen I was speaking as an American citizen he appeared greatly surprised. He then switched to the American attitude toward Germany in the event of war, and said that he thought the United States would sympathize with Germany, since, as he put it, 'Germany would be lighting to put an end to British domination of the world's commerce.' You see the story about the 'freedom of the seas' is an old one so far as Germany is concerned.

"Von Rintelen proceeded to denounce England in bitter terms; using the same arguments that we have heard so many times of late from partisans of the Teutonic cause. He gave me his card, and I wrote his address in an old address book which I still have. I have never seen him from that day to this, and had forgotten my meeting with him until the stories of his intrigues and plots in this country came out a few weeks ago."

A Times reporter saw the old address book with von Rintelen's name and address in it, and the files of The Times show that the reception referred to by the man who told the story was one of the social events of February, 1906.

A question that might be asked Count von Bernstorff," the man added, "would be this: 'Is it not true that one of the rules of the German Secret Service, the rule that is known in every Chancellory in Europe, is that when a German secret service agent is found out, the proper Government authorities must without fail repudiate that agent and whatever activities he is supposed to have been engaged in?' I can assure you that it is a rule that is never broken by the German authorities."

Leadership of Democracy Has Passed From United States to Canada Says Toronto Writer

Toronto, Canada.

To the Editor of The New York Times.

A report published here of the speech on "Preparedness," delivered by the Hon. Joseph H. Choate before the Massachusetts Branch of the National Security League at Pittsfield, says:

"He maintained that the United States is the most hated nation of the world, and quoted Dr. Heiser, head of the medical affairs of the Rockefeller Institute, as his authority for the statement that in the British dominions beyond the seas Americans were the most hated people on the earth.

"The reason for this," said Mr. Choate, "is because this country has not taken sides in the present European War one way or the other, because they are getting fat on the trade of the warring countries, and because they are building up their merchant marine service. They are spoken of as a people too proud to fight."

So far as Canada is concerned the remarks of Mr. Choate and Dr. Heiser are too literal; they are, in fact, misleading, because Canadians make a clear distinction in their feeling and attitude toward the people of the United States as individuals and toward the Government of that country.

First—The people of Canada do not hate the people of the United States. There are too many ties of actual blood relationship, language, sentiment, and common sympathy for that. Moreover, Canadians believe that the allied cause is heartily favoured by the vast majority of Americans. If it could be shown that this was not the case, and that, above everything else, the American people have regard only for trade and profits arising out of the war, there would still be no hate of Americans; there would be surprise, bitter disappointment, and keen regret.

Second—Canadians do think that the present Government of the United States misrepresents the American people in their relation to the war. They believe that "supine" is not too strong a word to apply to the course it has followed since the conflict began.

It would be almost impossible to make any one who has not lived in Canada understand with what eagerness the people of this country looked to the Government of the United States to rise to its opportunity in the situation caused by the German invasion of Belgium. Canadians did not want Washington to send an ultimatum to Germany. They have never wanted and do not now want the United States to become actively involved in the war, and they are very strong in the determination that the United States shall have no voice in the peace terms. These phases of the war need not be discussed here.

But Canadians did hope, nay, they believed, that there would go from Washington such a message of protest as should thrill the free peoples of the world. Mr. Wilson and his Government may have shivered, but they failed to thrill either themselves or any one else, and in the hour of their failure the leadership of democracy on the American Continent passed from the United States to Canada.

Absurd, you say? Think it over. When the war is ended in the only way it can end—toward which country on the American Continent do you think the tide of European emigration will flow? To the United States, where German and Austrian propagandists, emboldened by the pusillanimity of the Government, carry on their anti-Ally campaign by use of the dynamite bomb and the toch, in contemptuous defiance of "the majesty of the sovereign State," or to the country that dared to take its place at once in "the battle line of freedom," without a thought of the cost?

Remember that Canada's offer of assistance was made to the Motherland before war was declared, and without a thought of what it might mean in bringing "war orders" to this country. Canadians think that the tide of emigration will flow to their shores; that in the years to come it will even bear on its bosom the peoples against whom Canadians now fight, because they, too, will finally see that Canada, though it owes allegiance to a Crown, is a democracy in spirit and in truth.

It is perhaps true that before the war most Canadians found more or less comfort in the reflection that in time of trouble our big neighbour to the south would be more than a reed to lean upon. Not that they ever doubted the ability of the British Empire to give them all the aid they might need. But the knowledge that the United States was so near helped somewhat when the alarmists talked of a world combination against Britain and sudden dashes on the outlying sections of the British Empire. To-day Canadians know that their confidence in the United States is unfounded; they believe that the Government of that country at any rate would maintain a strict neutrality, no matter what might betide Canada. The knowledge has come by degrees, but it has sunk deep, and Canada is the better for it, and is unafraid.

Canada's faith in herself and the Empire was never greater than it is to-day; her respect and love for the Mother Country was never stronger. Canadians as making many comparisons just now, and many of them are not complimentary to the United States. Suppose, they say, that the United States and not Britain had been at war with Germany, and that a great American lines had been destroyed under the conditions that attended the sinking of the Lusitania, with the loss of many British subjects. Would Britain have waited seven months in passive patience for an answer to a demand for disavowal and reparation? Americans know she would not have done so, and so do Canadians. Is it necessary to recall all the turnings of the other cheek of the United States Government with ineffable politeness to the mailed fist of German autocracy? Are the people of the United States proud of that record, down to the "closed incident" of the Cavell murder and the haste of their Government to save the face of the German Government, in that the crowning infamy of the series of shameful acts that has marked the contravention of the rights of Belgium —the little kingdom that was not too proud to fight for honour?

Americans have sometimes seen Canadian militiamen at their annual training in peace time. I wish that many Americans could have been in this city a few days ago to see the great parade of overseas battalions, a number of which had just completed months of strenuous camp training, and had hiked from Niagara-on-the-Lake to Toronto, some eighty-odd miles, under conditions as nearly as possible approaching those of actual campaigning. American onlookers would have then understood why Canadians, who know that these troops represent a small part only of the Empire's resources in men, believe that the defeat of the central powers is certain.

While waiting for the parade one little group discussed the latest American note to Britain, and particularly those sections in which the rights of neutrals are so sonorously referred to, and the blockade is spoken of as illegal. The "rights of neutrals" part drew stinging comparisons with the attitude that the United States Government had taken—or had not taken in the case of Belgium. Then, to the blare of bugles, the soldiers began to pass. A woman in the group wept as one regiment went by—her husband was in the ranks; one of her boys is in an English hospital recovering from wounds received in Flanders; another is now in the firing line in France. She waved bravely as her husband marched by, and then, wiping her eyes, she said: "Thank God I'm a Canadian!"

A Few Words About the Mistletoe

By "THE MAN ON THE STREET"

The cult of the Mistletoe, in the Old Land has long been practised, and assiduously persevered in, from remote ages. Like many other good old-fashioned customs, long may it flourish! There are distinct smacks of sweetness in carrying out the ritual of the sacred parasite. If there be any who doubt me—well let them try it, and later on I don't think they will be very disappointed.

• • • •

Mistletoe is a tiny plant which is seen only in the winter time, and is generally found growing on door ways or light-brackets in the most secluded parts of houses. It often thrives on landings or hall-ways, and sometimes lands people. It has also been met with on staircases, but in these cases it is not kind to stare. "Fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind." Live and let live! It is by nature a parasite, and those who come under its influence seem to acquire its parasitic, sticky properties in a remarkably short space of time. Very little is known about it as, strangely enough, those who have often been in the most favourable position for observing it are usually those who pay the least attention to it.

• • • •

It would seem to require no special or regular temperature, as, though it flourishes well in the cold, it is equally prosperous in the warmth. Many say that it prefers the latter, and it would appear at any rate that it has got so used to quick rises in temperature in its immediate neighbourhood as to be quite independent of sudden changes of climate. Judging from the fact that it is found in largest quantities in dark places, it is universally believed that it does better without light than with it.

Students of vegetable life have noticed that it exercises a peculiarly subtle spell over those who come beneath its influence, particularly the younger members of both sexes. Many couples who are as a rule talkative, have been often found to become silent in taking up a position immediately under it. So much so that they occasionally remain for hours together—close together—without uttering an articulate word, though, judging from certain sounds that have been heard to emanate from the neighbourhood, they are both making strenuous efforts to get their lips to express their thoughts. From the usually happy appearance of their faces when they eventually emerge, their endeavours would seem to have been attended with a fair amount of success. It has sometimes happened, however, that the sudden approach of a third person has been able to induce speech from one or the other, or both; but in most cases it is of a very hurried description, and confined to monosyllables.

• • • •

Some authorities have stated that in certain remote places where mistletoe once used to be found, its spell seems to remain long after it has been removed. Whether this is true or not, the fact remains that many a young couple has been seen at Christmas in a corner where mistletoe might have been confidently expected, conducting themselves in precisely the same way as they would have done had it been there, despite the fact that there was not the smallest trace of it to be seen. So upon the whole it can confidently be asserted that whether from its presence or the spell it leaves behind it, mistletoe can always be depended upon to promote close intercourse and tender feelings between the sexes.

License Inspector Thornbury Seizes Liquor Going To Haliburton

LINDSAY, Dec. 24.—License Inspector Thornbury swooped down on a man from Haliburton, who was taking liquor to a local option district and seized the goods.

The party in question has been under suspicion for some time. Inspector Thornbury noticed him coming up street yesterday carrying a suspicious looking valise and followed him into a Kent street hotel, where he was intercepted by the inspector, who charged him with unlawfully trading in liquor.

The man at once pleaded guilty, but claimed it was through ignorance of the law that he offended.

He was arraigned before the magistrate and on admitting his guilt was permitted to go, but the liquor was confiscated and will be given over to the Ross Hospital for medical purposes.

The valise contained 6 bottles of whiskey and one of gin. The man is engaged as a cook in a lumber camp near Haliburton.

DIES IN CHAIR, ASSURED MOTHER WON'T BE TOLD

Columbus Prison Officials Promise to Respect Last Wishes of Murderer.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—That his mother may never know that he died in the electric chair for killing another man was one of the last requests of Peter Skribner, sentenced to be executed before dawn at the State Penitentiary here, as a penalty for murdering Detective Kaiser Barteckl in Columbus last spring. Officials promised him that they will not tell her.

A little more than two years ago Skribner left his mother in Odessa, Russia. Together they had scraped and saved $200 so the boy could come to America, make good, and bring her to live with him. The pride and confidence she has in him show plainly in the letters found among Skribner's effects.

Skribner said his mother was his only living relative; that he made no friends in America aside from the Columbus woman with whom he became infatuated and who, it is alleged, took his money and jilted him, and caused the shooting of herself and the murder of the detective who tried to arrest Skribner.

Somewhere down a by-street in the city of Odessa this morning an old doman dreams as she potters around her scantily furnished rooms, of a boy who is working hard at a good job somewhere in America.

The old woman never heard of the Ohio State penitentiary. If someone showed her a picture of it this morning, she wouldn't know what it was. Nor would she recognize a photograph of the death chamber, where a man with a masked face sits strapped in a chair, where three guards, half concealed by screens, rest their hands expectantly on electric switches. And if this scene were reproduced in motion pictures before the old woman's eyes, just as it is happening to-day, she would not know that the dying man in the chair was her son.

Inspector Seized Quantity of Nets

American Fishermen thought Ontario Authorities were not Watching.

A few American fishermen have discovered that the Ontario fish and game authorities are not as unwakeful as outward appearances might indicate. As a result of the extensive poaching attempted in Lake Erie, a large number of gill nets have fallen into the possession of the Ontario inspectors, and the offenders have been given a stiff scare.

Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries Sheriff reports that the Ontario season for gill netting in Lake Erie closed until March 15. In Ohio, U. S. A., the same law prevails, but in Pennsylvania and New York there is no close season. The American law allows any fisherman to fish in different States so long as he has a license from each State.

At the close of the Canadian season the Ontario authorities laid up the patrol boat at Port Stanley, but immediately engaged an inoffensive appearing fish tug, and placed an inspector aboard. The inspector found American nets set in Canadian waters, and seized them. They were sold by the authorities, and now another tug has been engaged to do patrol duty.

GIFTS POST FREE TO FRENCH SOLDIERS

Unless Weight Exceeds Two Pounds —Christmas Presents Choke the Mails

100,000 MEN TO GO HOME
Holiday Leave from the Trenches Generously Given—Paris Shops Are Crowded with Buyers.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Any one in France may send a Christmas parcel weighing up to two pounds to a soldier at the front without paying postage on the package. A bill conferring this privilege, which holds good from date until Jan. 6, was unanimously passed by Parliament to-day. Letters are already carried free.

The families of soldiers have not waited for the passage of this law, but have been overloading for some time past the means of transport to the front with Christmas packages. They have sent cold chickens, meat pies, hams, every variety of cake, sweetmeat, and preserved fruits, and every imaginable thing besides in the way of wearing apparel that would keep out wet and cold. Soldiers at the front are always supplied with plenty of tobacco and beverages of various sorts, and many have requested their families not to send drinkables in their packages. The Government, indeed, excludes anything put up in glass because of the danger of breaking and consequent damage to the presents of other senders.

Probably 100,000 men from the front will spend Christmas with their families. The military administration has been generous with leaves, and soldiers are now allowed six days at home, not counting the time of going and coming. Formerly the period was four days.

While Christmas in Paris will be less gay than usual, the mothers, as is indicated by the crowded shops, are buying freely for the children. The Government will not permit restaurants and cafes to remain open later than the usual closing hour of 10.30 o'clock, and there is no more reserving at high prices of tables in noter restaurants for midnight supper parties. Also there will be none of the one-time street frivolities. The church service will, be unusually impressive.

The Joys of Skating And Its Value As a Health Giver

Chicago's Commissioner of Health, Dr. John D. Robinson, praises the sport of ice skating in the following terms:—

It is a fundamental of bodily hygiene that man needs exercise. It is equally fundamental that wherever possible, exercise should be taken in the open air—outdoors if possible.

"All outdoor sports are healthful. A noted authority has given us what he calls the trinity of bodily health and vigor; and these are embodied in the air we breathe, the food we eat, the exercise we take

No doubt indoor gymnasiums for physical training are fine; but the nearer they approach outdoor conditions as to air and sunlight, the more beneficial they will be.

It is a fine arrangement in the economy of things that winter furnishes its share of outdoor sports, such as skating, snowballing, tobogganing, sleigh riding, etc. And perhaps of all of the outdoor sports skating, unless particularly beneficial to those who participate in it,

Next to ice skating in the winter time, I deem it proper to say here that rolling skating during the milder seasons of the year is equally beneficial. And both ice skating and roller skating are forms of outdoor exercise that may well be indulged in by both young and old. As a matter of fact, there is scarcely any form of outdoor diversion which can be more highly commended.

Too many of our people lead indoor lives. Thousands of people rarely see the outdoors except in the short walks that they take from their homes to the car, from the car to their places of business and a return trip of like character in the evening. Outdoor walking is almost a lost occupation. People used to take long walks in the open air; now the man or woman who indulges in outdoor walking is the exception and not the rule.

Naturally when the winter season comes the young people turn with eagerness to the outdoor sports chief among which in attraction is ice skating. But why should not older people, even those of middle life, indulge in ice skating; or, if by their indoor living and sedentary habits they have taken on avoirdupois until they fear to trust themselves on skates, why should they not indulge in long walks until they have reduced themselves to their normal avoirdupois, and then hie back to the joys of boyhood skating?

Dinner—Bacon, potatoes and beans:
Bacon ..... 30 gr.
Potatoes ..... 750 gr.
Beans ..... 130 gr.
Supper—Herring and potatoes:
1 Herring.
Potatoes ..... 600 gr.

The above is the exact reprint of part of a prisonre's bill of fare sent recently to this city by Lance-Corporal Hicks, a prisoner. The amount of food for each day of the week is printed on the margin of a sheet of paper which the soldier utilized for his letter. The remaining days vary but little from the above, with the exception of Thursday and Saturday breakfasts. Cocoa and starch meal are substituted for coffee on the former day, and potato flour, starch meal and magarine are used entirely on the latter.

Herring for supper, and salt fish and bacon figure frequently, but not largely.

It will be remembered that a gram (unit of metric systm) is equal to a little less than 15½ grains, also that there are 7,000 grains in a pound avoirdupois.

This works out at a little more than half a pound of bread for each man per day.

Daughters of England.

The letter was received by Mrs. B. Cordell, the secretary of Lodge Grace Darling, No. 18, Daughters and Maids of England, who recently gave a very successful shower for prisoners of war. Corporal Hicks wrote:

"Received your parcel last Monday, and needless to say the boys were all very glad of the contents, especially the cigarettes and tobacco-comrades, who are nearly all Canadians, and they have all asked me to express their thanks for the things you all sent. Wishing you all a Merry Christmas."

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

MORE SUPPLIES FOR THE ALLIES

What Diplomatic Break Between U. S. and Austria Would Mean.

New York, Dec. 24.—American munition makers will not be affected in their disposal of war materials for the allies should diplomatic relations between the United States and Austria come to an end, it was stated by representative men. Manufacturers, business men and bankers were unanimous in asserting confidently that no prospect is evident, immediately or eventually, of sufficient gravity to warrant the curtailment of munition exports to any amount.

Officials of large munition plants said that, instead of diminishing the shipment of arms and ammunition to the allies, the effect of a rupture with Austria would mean an increase in practical aid from America to the enemies of the Central Powers. They declared their belief that the Government even would go so far as to permit work on its own contracts to be suspended in order to facilitate and increase the shipment of munitions to the allies. Some of them added that such action on the part of the United States would be a world blessing in that it would hasten the inevitable annihilation of Teutonic militarism.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Colour and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw it through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hairs disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

THE PEACE GERMANY WANTS NOW

1. France to pay $600,000,000.
2. Belgium to pay $600,000,000.
3. Russia to pay $400,000,000, and to lose Poland.
4. Serbia to give up Macedonia.
5. England to restore Germany's colonies.
6. Belgian and Portuguese colonies to be divided.
7. Trade "Entente" among belligerents.

The Journal des Debats of Paris publishes a long article from its Zurich correspondent which goes fully into the question of the systematically organized peace propaganda which the Germans have initiated in neutral countries.

The points in the article which deal with the conditions which the Austro-Germans would presumably be willing to accept are summarized and discussed as follows:

As far as France is concerned the principal condition seems to be the reciprocal evacuation of occupied territories, but as German troops occupy a much larger extent of ground France would have to pay a compensating indemnity of at least $600,000,000.

Belgium would also be evacuated on payment of a similar indemnity guaranteed by France and England.

England would restore all German colonies already seized, and there would be a dividing up of the Belgian and Portuguese colonies, a joint indemnity being paid to Portugal.

Serbia would retain her independence, but give up Macedonia and enter a fiscal union with Austria.

Besides this Bulgaria would hold the Enos-Midia line and take back the territory ceded to Roumania, which would be indemnified in Bessarabia.

Russia Loses Poland.

Russia would lose the whole of Poland, pay $400,000,000 to get back the possession of already occupied Russian territory, and would further have to compensate Turkey in Russia Armenia.

Finally Greece would keep the islands and receive a slice of Albania, but give Austria the right of passage through Saloniki.

All belligerent countries would accept a commercial arrangement favourable to the Zollverein (customs union) into which Austria-Hungary would enter.

The article concludes: "It will be noticed that in this project very little is demanded from England, at any rate in appearance. It is hoped thereby to seduce British egotism while retaining the means to strangle British commercial power later on by a cleverly conducted commercial war. That is the best bargain they can hope for at the moment. If we accepted that Germany would rely on soon recuperating what she had lost and then would exploit the world freely."

CHRISTMAS IN BELGIUM

Christmas is a day of gladness and badness. It is the day of reflection as well as realization. To the young and carefree, Christmas is joy unalloyed. But to those of riper years, it brings its train of memories of bygone festivities—and its images of those who have gone before.

Christmas is always thus in practically every home.

And Christmas this year, will be infinitely sad throughout the British Empire, because of the absence of hundreds of thousands of those nearest and dearest to us, who will spend the day upholding the British standard and Tricolour of France on the battlefields of Europe.

Sad as it will be for us all, however, in Belgium—brave, loyal, honourable, suffering, starving Belgium—Christmas will be a day of misery and want, without a single redeeming material comfort, unless those outside the war zone assist the Belgian people.

Surely the whole people of Canada, filled to the full with the spirit of Christmas and remembering what the Belgians have done and are doing to bring victory to the Allies, will keep the Belgians in mind and give to them, of our plenty, a portion.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Duffus As Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes and sympathy and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for six years, during which time I have served on all standing committees, on many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as chairman of most of the committees, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the working of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present election, in summing up the situation I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that with six years' experience the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for six years to fail to offer my services at this time.

In these days when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city's affairs.

The City is to be congratulated upon the manner in which its finances have been handled during 1915. We have maintained a very rapid rate of progress and yet have reserved for the demands of the near future in connection with our sewers, sewage disposal plan, schools and other public works that are either inevitable, or to which we are pledged. It is with some pride that I can say that your Board of Aldermen are not only free from serious reproach or scandal, but that among municipalities it may safely be said that we stand as representatives of the highest type of municipal financial integrity. The Tax rate of the city has been held down to a point which is an evidence of the most economical government, consistent with prudence and wisdom. As to the financial position at the close of this year, it is always difficult to tell definitely until the Auditor has completed his work for the year, how the current accounts will close. We have had a number of unexpected expenditures, especially with regard to military matters in making grants to assist the Overseas battalions, and these I believe every one will approve of. Even with these unexpected outlays we hope to close the year with a balance on the right side.

There is about $30,000.00 of taxes unpaid, and a balance of $14,467.77 which has been paid on hydro-electric account and to be refunded from capital account when the matter is straightened up. With these and other items of revenue we expect that the revenue and expenditure will at least balance.

The excellence of our Fire Department is recognized not only by our own citizens, but also throughout the Province. The relations of the Chief of the fire brigade with his men and with the Council may be regarded as of the most harmonious. The lowering of the insurance rate, and the protection which the city enjoys has been favourably commented on by Fire Underwriters, and must be a source of gratification to the public.

The members of the Utilities Commission and the Council are to be congratulated on the attention they have given to the installation of the new auxiliary pumping engines which so successfully provides for fire protection to the city in the future in the event of difficulties arising with our regular water pumping system.

Much attention will have to be directed to our sewage disposal with the object of disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of by helping to pollute the waters of the Otonabee.

From a careful study of the local situation I am strongly of the opinion that a new bridge over the Otonabee river is one of those essential improvements which must come as soon as the financial conditions of the country have resumed their normal state. The present inadeqate accommodation is retarding the progress of a large portion of very desirable residential and business sections.

I am in favour of the developing of the country by radial lines of railway. This matter has engaged the attention of the Mayor and Council during the year, and the indications seems to be for an early beginning of this work, and I propose to do everything in my power to advance this in our city interest.

The City is to be congratulated upon the general character of the public servants. Their fidelity and intelligence have resulted in a prompt, efficient and satisfactory despatch of municipal business. I think the heads of departments should formally meet with the Mayor occasionally during the year that the discussions at these meetings might prove of great value in the work of the City's Government.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city. I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of these interests, such as would be consistent with good citizenship.

The successful completion of the outfall sewer, and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected, these will have my closest and most careful attention.

Completion of surface draining system for the whole city is another very important matter that should engage the attention of next year's Council, and I promise it will not be longer delayed than its urgency demands.

I am strongly opposed to any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions. Prudence and economy would seem to indicate that on streets where much wear is constantly going on, and which require extensive repairs, a roadbed of tar macadam or concrete, with concrete curb and gutters would amply serve the purpose. I have had occasion, as your representative to attend the Annual Roads Conventions held in the City of Toronto; and being specially interested in road building I have taken a live interest in this matter. Having regard to our local conditions and the nature of the valuable material available on the spot for this purpose, the City would be in a position to do its own work, employ its own labour, and disburse its paving expenditures among our own people.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and private citizens, to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to letigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

I have frequently urged the necessity of water mains, fire protection, water and sewage accommodation, for the northern portion of East City, including Auburn.

I have taken a deep interest in the effective lighting of the city and have always maintained that more light and fewer policemen would serve the city more economically and to better advantage.

The securing of new industries, consistent with the best interests of our city, has always had, and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your own hands. During the past 15 years, faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards, and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be an assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated.

I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election will increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past, and the hope that the year 1916 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours faithfully,
JOS. J. DUFFUS.

ITALY HAS 2,000,000 MEN IN THE WAR ZONE

Holds Another Million in Reserve; Reduction of Gorizia Postponed Till Heights Are Taken

ROME, Dec. 19 (by mail)—Italy now has 2,000,000 men engaged in the war, and is preparing to add another million. About a million men are on the fighting line, stretched along the mountains from Trentino in the west to the Austrian stronghold of Goriza in the east.

Another million is in reserve, for emergencies and to fill gaps in the fighting line as needed, or for operations in the Balkans.

The third million is represented in the additional classes in process of being assembled during the coming months as the scope of offensive and defensive military operations may become affected.

The Italian military campaign—what Italy has done and propose doing—is well understood by every Italian. But the outside world has had only a vague understanding of the meaning of these operations, as disclosed by official communications with the maze of obscure geographical details, about the Isonzo, the desperate scaling of Alpine peaks and bombardments among the snows, and countless predictions that Goriza will soon fall.

The military operations and what Italy has accomplished are best understood by taking a map of Italy showing the northern frontier. The Alps sweep in a great semicircle from the French frontier on the Mediterranean to the Austrian frontier on the Adriatic. This sweep of the Alps from west to east is a sort of natural bulwark or boundary of Italy, separating it from the nations and races to the north

Barrier Broken at Two Parts

But in two places this natural sweep of the Alps is dented deeply to the southward, first in the Trentino region in the west and then in the Trieste region of the upper Adriatic The natural boundary of the Alps is broken at two vital points, and Austria has stretched down at both these points and firmly established her political control, her control of Trentino dating from the time of Napoleon and of the Trieste region from the war of 1866

The first object, therefore, of Italy's campaign is to get back the two provinces which dent the natural frontier of the Alps, thus regaining former Italian territory, and re-establishing the great mountain range as the strategic defense against the nations of the north.

This main objective has necessitated dividing the campaign into two parts, one in the west, with Trent as the center, and the other in the east, with Trieste as the chief object Between 00,000 and 500,000 men are engaged in the western operations, directed toward Trieste—in all, about 1,000,000 men, with another 1,000,000 in reserve.

These two objectives, toward Trent in the west and Trieste in the east, are really two separate campaigns. Both are, however, under the supreme direction of General Cadorna, commander-in-chief, and recently communication has been established along the mountain ranges between the troops in the west and the east. Yet they are engaged in two essentially different operations.

Main Drive Toward Trieste.

The main drive of the Italians has been in the eastern section, toward Trieste, the great Austrian port of the Adriatic, lying just across from Venice. This rich prize is hardly more than ten days' march from the Italian frontier. Also, there is a stretch of level country, fifteen miles wide, around the upper Adriatic, making it easy marching from the frontier to Trieste.

And yet the war has been going on for six months—since May 23—and the Italian army is nowhere near Trieste. The military leaders say Trieste could have been taken any has been along the Isonzo river, with the Austrian town of Gorinza as the main point of attack. The Italian troops made rapid progress at first, sweeping through small towns, but as they moved up the Isonzo river toward Gorizia they found the Austrian batteries on the mountain tops.

And then began the slow and tedious process of first gaining control of all the elevated positions which could serve the Austrians before pressing forward on Goriza and time in fifteen days—but it could not be held, as the Carso mountains sweep around back of Trieste and from a circle fifteen miles back from the Adriatic, with Austrian batteries posted at every crest of these encircling mountains.

The Italian commanders therefore decided that instead of taking the rich prize of Trieste, it was a military necessity first to control all the approaches and mountain defenses.

That, in reality, has been the campaign going on during the last six months, with its maze of geographical names and mountain passes, all these being small accessories in the vast natural defenses around the Trieste region and necessary to be conquered before Trieste itself can be held

Most of the fighting in this region Trieste. This has required the movement of troops along mountain roads and the carrying of heavy guns to great heights by means of special machinery devised by an Italian automobile concern.

Each day has brought reports recording small points taken, passes cleared and further advances toward Gorisia. But all of this is merely the preliminary work of securing such military control of the Carso range and the mountain along the Isonzo river that it will be expedient, from a military standpoint, to strike for the real prizes beyond.

All Fighting on Austrian Soil.

The Italian commanders express satisfaction with the progress they have made in the last six months. All the fighting and all the progress, has been on Austrian soil and no Austrian troops have at any time entered Italy. The Austrian coast ports Porto Buso and Grado, leading toward Trieste, have been taken by the Italians and from Grado the lights of Trieste can be seen at night across the Adriatic.

Further north, in the mountain country, the Plava pass has been won though at the cost of whole regiments cut to pieces and a chain of mountain tops, villages and stations has been established encircling Gorizia. But Gorizia itself still holds out through its natural mountain defenses and its railway lines pouring in constant supplies of fresh troops and munition.

Lack of munition has proved the same check on the Italians as it has on the other entente allies. They found soon after the campaign opened that they were making only one-fifth as much ammunition as they were using. This put a check on any real fighting, and resulted in the resort to preliminaries of mountain and trench warfare. The ammunition output has been increased, but it is still far short of requirements, although supplies from America and Japan are beginning to fill the gap.

Quite distinct from the campaign around Gorizia is that in the other province of Trentino, further west. This has all been mountain fighting and little progress has been made. The great Alpine ranges sweep around further north, but down through Trentino run innumerable spurs of the Trentino alps, making it a vast stretch of gorges and peaks.

It is called Tyrolean country but the real Tyrol is further north around Innsbruck, and the population there speaks German. But here the people are all Italian in language, habits and sentiment, and although in name Austrians, most of the men have gone south to join the Italian army.

The objective in this western fighting is to take Trent, in the center of Trentino, and about fifty miles from the Italian frontier. The Italians have thus far covered about half the way, reaching Roveereto, and clearing away the Austrian mountain batteries as they have proceeded. But it is a hard, cold, up-hill fight, without much result thus far.

Summing up what has been done in these two campaigns and what it means in places captured, men engaged, casualties, prisoners, etc., the situation is about this:

In the east the Italians have advanced about twenty to twenty-five miles on Austrian territory, or about half way to Trieste, and have taken twenty or more rather important towns, notably Grado, Monfalcone, Gradisca, Cormona, San Pietro (flanking Gorizia), Plano, Caporetto, Monte Nero and Plezzo, far up on the Isonzo, besides many lesser places.

In the west the Italians have advanced about twenty miles on Austrian soil, and have taken the main town of Rovereto, half way to Trent, and numerous lesser towns and strategic points. In all these operations the Austrians have really not been making a fight, as they are too busy in Russia and the Balkans, and the Italians have been on the offensive, with the Austrians on the defensie. The net result is casualties, prisoners, etc., is about as follows:

Italian casualties, about 45,000.

Austrian casualties (Italian estimate), 90,000.

Austrian prisoners in Italy, 28,000.

Italian prisoners in Austria, 1200.

While Austrian troops have made no advance on Italian soil, some of their air raids have been notable over the great art cities of northern Italy —Venice on the Adriastic, and Verona inland —where heavy loss of life and considerable damage have occurred, with the endangering of the priceless art treasures of these cities.

The naval side of the war has had few notable developments thus far.,

The duke of the Abruzzi, commanding the Italian fleet, took the Austrian ports of Grado and Porto Buso, at the head of the Adriatic, but an attack on the great port of Trieste has not been attempted. Further south the coast of the Adriatic does not offer much prospect for Italian naval strategy.

Can Resist Army Of 500,000 Men

Allies Have a Force of 200,000 at Salonica—Fifteen Days' Work Have Resulted in Very Strong Defensive Works.

READY FOR AN ATTACK

LONDON, December 24.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphing under date of December 21, says: "The outlook is more satisfactory than at any time since the Macedonian campaign started. General Sarrail said two days ago that he was fully satisfied. Heavy guns have arrived and are now in position. The delay in the enemy's advance has been of the greatest value to the allies."

The Salonica correspondent of the Daily News telegraphing under date of December 22 says: "Assuming that the reports of the disposal of the Germanic forces are true, it is possible that half a million Germans, Turks and Bulgarians are available for an attack on Salonica. It is understood that Premier Radoslavoff, of Bulgaria, recently hinted that a smashing blow would be struck in January. Therefore the period of calm here may be short. General de Castinaux arrived here unexpectedly recently. He had long conferences with General Sarrail and General Mahon on Dec 20, and visited the French and British fronts. The population of Salonica is quiet, reassured by General Sarrail's statement that the city is not in danger."

Bulgars in Vanguard.

Despatches from Greece to the London morning papers add to the mystery surrounding the next move of the Central Powers. Correspondents of the Times both in Salonica and in Athens, and the Morning Post's correspondent, suggest that the Bulgarians will be in the vanguard of the Teutonic advance toward Salonica.

"All pretended German guarantees," says the Morning Post's Athens' correspondent, "are mere sedatives, intending to induce Greek public opinion to take the bitter dose as quietly as possible. The correspondent adds that there is a rumor in circulation that the Germans are preparing to clothe the Bulgarians in German uniforms so that Greece cannot object to their entry.

The Times' Athens correspondent says: "During the last few days the Bulgarians have been filling gaps in their ranks and occupying positions all along their front, while all the Bulgarian heavy guns from Varna already have reached their front. Strumitza, where the Bulgarians are assembling all their stores, will be the base from which they will attack the Entente allies. Their forces now number 720,000, reinforcements are arriving, and it stated that the attack will begin when 180,000 men have been concentrated. King Ferdinand and Prince Boris are visiting Monastir."

The Times Salonica correspondent says "So far it seems certain that the Bulgarian army has not been joined by the Austro-German element. Moreover, considering the heavy losses of the Austro Germans in Serbia and the further diminution of their strength by the necessity of garrisoning conquered territory and detaching large forces for guarding the line of the Danube, the prediction may be hazarded that with or without Greek consent, the army launched against Salonica will be largely, if not entirely, Bulgarian, and with perhaps some Turkish auxiliaries."

Can Defy 500,000 Men.

General Bonnal, French military expert, explaining in the Intransigeant the situation at Salonica, mentioned the German statement that the French and British forces at the Greek port now number 172,000 officers and men and are increasing, and says:

"The joint army will soon reach 200,000. They are occupying a semi-circle around Salonica, which itself is beyond the range of the heaviest guns—those carrying shells 10 to 12 miles.

"Fifteen days of entrenching have now given the defensive works a certain solidity so that 200,000 men, with ample food and munitions supplies and reinforcements available by open sea routes, should be able to resist an army of two or three times their number."

ARGUMENTATITE STAGE OF THE INVESTIGATION

Mr. Peck's Request.

Owing to the absence of teachers on holidays Mr. O'Connell had no other witnesses present, and thereupon concluded his case.

Mr. Peck stated that the evidence presented apparently narrowed down to certain issues between Mr. Gordon and Mr. Hill. But Mr. Gordon, he continued, had made a general reflection on the whole Board, claiming that nothing had been produced in substantiation of a general charge Mr. Peck suggested that Mr. Gordon withdraw any suggestion of impropriety on the part of the other members of the Board.

Mr. O'Connell replied that all the charges would be dealt with in his argument.

Mr. Peck stated that he represented the Board as a whole, in regard to the general charge made by Mr. Gordon. The nominations for next year were close at hand, and if an early result could be reached it would be appreciated.

Judge Huycke said he could not make a finding now, and Mr. Peck replied that he was particularly addressing Mr. Gordon.

Mr. O'Connell stated that the issues would be clearly placed in his argument.

Mr. John Crane.

Mr. John Crane, called by Mr Hall, said he was chairman of the committee last year that had charge of the typewriter purchase. Following a complaint from the Principal or Commercial Master of the Collegiate Institute, in regard to the condition of the typewriters, he asked for a report on each machine. He received an offer from the Underwood Co. to supply ten new machines for the nine at the School, the Board to pay $75 difference.

"I moved that this offer be accepted but I don't know whether it was in committee or at a meeting of the Board. Mr. Hill opposed this proposal on the ground that the pupils would obtain a wider knowledge of typewriting if they had different machines to practice on.

Mr. Crane said he personally favoured the Underwood Company's offer on the ground of price.

After Mr. Hill's first objection, and when the report was sent back to the Committee, Mr. Crane received a letter from the Collegiate Principal or Commercial Master advocating a uniform type of machine in preference to a number of different machines.

Commission $3.41 a Year.

Continuing, Mr. Crane said he had $10,000 insurance on school property in the Phoenix Co. His commission was $3.41 a year. He made out his accounts on the Insurance Company's stationery. Mr. Crane said he did not canvass for insurance. The agency had been handed over to him from Mr. McGill of the Ontario Bank The school insurance was put on in 1907 and 1908.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said Mr. Hill had objected to the purchase of only one make of typewriter and the Supervision Comimttee's report was sent back.

There was no other opposition expressed at that meeting but that from Mr. Hill?

"I can't say."

Was it before or after the report went back that you got the letter from the principal or Commercial Master?

I think it was after.

Mr. O'Connell asked that this letter be turned in.

Mr. Crane said he had the stationery of the Phoenix Fire Insurance in his office and used it.

End of Evidence.

This concluded the evidence. Mr. O'Connell admitted to Mr. Hall that Mr. Gordon had been elected member of the Board of Education, and had been appointed City Solicitor. City Clerfk Armstrong submitted a copy of the by-law by which Mr. Gordon was made City Solicitor and it went in as exhibit 59.

Mayor Buller and the members of the Council were dismissed without being called. Judge Huycke shook hands with each of them and exchanged the greetings of the season.

Mr. Travers Is Leaving

Is Being Transferred to the Management of the Bank of Montreal at London

Mr. R. W. Travers, Manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, was notified this morning of his transfer as Manager of the Bank of Montreal, at London, Ont. He is to be succeeded here by Mr. C. C. Abbott of Stratford.

Mr. Travers has been Manager here for the past seven years and has made a host of friends in Peterborough, who will regret his departure. Mrs. Travers' activities in many lines of useful service, will also be missed. She has been of great assistance in many worthy enterprises.

In the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Travers, Peterborough is losing two of her most useful citizens. They have done a most praiseworthy work in many charitable movements and anything that tended to make the path of life less arduous for their fellow human beings found in Mr. and Mrs. Travers warm friends and ready supporters. It is not possible for a newspaper to chronicle just what they have carried out, but there are many in Peterborough and elsewhere the happier because of Mr. and Mrs. Travers' residence in Peterborough.

Electrics Tied T. R. and A. A. In First Hockey Match of Season

In Spite of Soft Ice and Lack of Practice Teams Put Up an Interesting Argument All the Way —Briden Starred For the Homesters Although the Whole Team Looked Good.

SAILES WITH THE VISITORS

The hockey season of 1915-16 made its bow to the public last night when the Senior T. R. and A. A. team of Toronto and the Peterborough Electrics' Intermediates clashed in an exhibition game at Brock Street Rink, battling to a 4—4 tie. Considering the lack of practice of the teams and the soft ice the engagement was not a bad display of Canada's national winter pastime, the closeness of the score and the fact that the teams went at each other with an evident earnestness, kept the interest at a comfortable temperature all the way. The Electrics led by 2 to 0 at the end of the first period, and 3 to 2 at the close of the second, but the visitors outscored them 2 to 1 in the last period, earning a draw.

In spite of the bad weather and the calls of the Christmas shopping there was a fair-sized crowd present, and they seemed to enjoy the engagement. There was a khaki tinge to the proceedings and Lt.-Col. Johnston of the 93rd Battalion faced the puck, and Capt. Maurice Park of the 59th Battalion, handled the bell, while many of the officers and men of the 93rd were in attendance.

The game was chiefly interesting as an opportunity for a line on the Electrics, and the general opinion is that Coach Breen's team of fast youngsters will do. The ice conditions of course did not permit the players much opportunity to show what they could do, but they uncovered enough to indicate that with a few hard workouts and a fast sheet of ice they will take some stopping. The team is young, Jerry Coughlin being the veteran of the seven, and it is only a little time ago that the Peterborough Captain was in the Junior ranks himself, and they have plenty of speed and stick-handling ability, although of course the sticky ice interfered with the latter feature of their play. "Red" Briden, who was playing on the defence last night, owing to an injury to Pete Spratt, but whose pioneer place is at left wing, was the fastest man on the ice, his lightning-like dashes electrifying the crowd. He gets away fast and tears down the ice like a runaway motor car. Even on the spongy ice he showed fine stick handling ability, and was a very hard man to stop. Jerry Coughlin, who was his side partner on the defence, is as elusive as ever, and showed his old-time stick-handling ability. All the forwards gave a good account of themselves. Montgomery, at right wing, made a particularly good impression. "Montie" is speedy, a tireless back-checker, and he used a sweeping poke check last night with good effect. Jackson of last year's Juniors, and "Banty" Evans, playing their first game in fast company, handled themselves splendidly, and Baillie was always on the job at centre. Billy Hamilton, who was used on the defence in the second period, also looked good, while Tobin in the nets, made several clever saves.

ALVIN SAILES, former Peterborough junior, who played right wing for T. R. and A. A. against the Electrics last night. Sailes is a member of the 123rd Battalion, C.E.F. at Toronto.

For T. R. and A. A. the defence pair, McLaren, and the veteran 'Bud' McLean, were the pick. McLaren, although an clumsy skater, checked well, and was a hard man to stop when he got under way, while McLean is as vigorous in his defence methods and as tricky on the attack as ever. On the forward line was big Allen Sarles, who, a few years ago, played right wing for the Peterborough Juniors. The big fellow, who is a member of the 123rd Battalion, C. E. F., had only one practice before last night's game, but he played a decidedly useful game for the victors. Trappe, at centre, also did some nice stick-handling and rushing.

Neither team showed much teamwork, and the sniping on both sides was bad, but these defects were caused, principally, by lack of practice and the sticky ice.

The teams lined up as follows:

T. R. and A. A.		Peterborough
Mitchell	Goal.	Tobin
McLaren	Defence.	Coughlin (Hamilton)
McLean		Briden
Miles	Rover.	Evans
Trappe	Centre.	Baillie
Sarles	Right Wing.	Montgomery
Sullivan	Left Wing.	Jackson

Captain Park received a noisy welcome from the fans when he skated out on the ice to open the game, and Lt.-Col. Johnston got a similarly enthusiastic welcome when he appeared. The game was very late in starting, owing to the fact that the Toronto train was three-quarters of an hour late.

The game was fast at the go-in with the Electricts pressing. Within the first minute Mitchell had to handle shots from Jackson and Baillie. Then Briden started the excitement by a rink-length rush, his shot from the side ringing the bell.

The Electrics had several more chances during the next few minutes but Mitchell turned the shots away. Tobin, too, was tested by several drives from well out, but on the whole, during this period, the Petes had the edge. Finally after twelve minutes' playing, Baillie fooled Mitchell with a shot from well out, and it was 2—0. One of the visitors broke a skate and retired, Evans being dropped with him. There was no further scoring in the period.

In the second period, Trappe scored T. R. and A. A.'s first goal after four minutes' playing, when he broke inside with Sullivan. Tobin came out to meet them and Trappe slid the rubber into the nets. Soon after Jerry Coughlin was hurt in trying to hurdle Bud McLean's stick and had to retire for repairs, Hamilton replacing him. He was back in a short time and Jackson was sent off. Briden made the tally 3 to 1 when he brought the puck from behind Toronto's nets and shoved it past Mitchell. Sailes got it back in two minutes, when he took a pass from McLaren and scored.

The score remained at 3 to 2 until well into the third period, when Sullivan scored for T. R. and A. A., tying up the game. Evans sent Peterborough ahead again a minute later with a neat shot, but McLean and Sailes came down together and the former Peterborough player evened up the count.

The game was hard fought all the way and trouble threatened on several occasions, but Capt. Park maintained law and order in good style.

The Electrics' new red, white and blue jerseys made a hit with the fans.

HOCKEY

There will be no junior practice at Brock street rink to-night. The Electric juniors will, however, practice on Monday night at 7 o'clock.

FRIDAY'S MARKET A HUGE SUCCESS

His Majesty the Turkey Scored Another Triumph—Fowl Very Plentiful and Commanded Stiff Prices

To-day's market was some turkey-trat, believe me. Prices ranged all the way from 20 to 25c per lb. The following are a few samples: An 8 1-2 lb. bird for $2.13; (catch on to the .13); 14 lbs. $3.25; 15 3-4 lbs., $3.40, 16 lbs., $3.75; 16 1-2 lbs., $4; and 29 lbs., $5 80.

Geese acted in sympathy and commanded pretty stiff prices; here are a few: 12 lb. birds for $2.00; 14 lbs $2.40; 15 lbs., $2.55.

Butter and eggs sold at their usual figures of .30 and .40c, respectfully very little being offered.

Outside Section.

Christmas trees made their farewell appearance, ranging from 25 to 75c.

Clover hay sold for $18.00 a ton. Hardwood, in short lengths, $6 a cord; mixed wood, 4 foot lengths $4.75 a cord.

Potatoes brought $1.50 a bag; carrots, 60c., and parsnips, 75c; cabbage, 3 heads for 10c.; citrons, six for a quarter.

Apples were very scarce and of a poor quality. Culls sold from 75c to $1.25 a bag. Second quality Spies, $4.50 a barrel. Bellflowers, $3.75 a barrel.

Beef, by the quarter, 10 to 12 cents. Pork, 14 to 15c. Lamb, 18 to 20 cents. Live pigs were quoted at $10 per pair. Three bunches of sage sold for 10c.

Home-made Cooking.

A large contingent of ladies from Mrs. Kendry's Sunday School Class, in the George Street Church, had a table laden with good things to eat.

Bead Work.

A representative of the Iroquois family of Indians, from near Montreal, had a beautiful display of pin cushions and moccasins trimmed with beads.

Great White Light.

Lamp burners, suitable for ordinary coal oil lamps, giving a bright white light, and turning darkness to day, were sold at 35c each.

THE PRICE OF TURKEYS ADVANCE

Prices Advanced a Couple of Cents This Weeks

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs, appeared in 'Canadian Grocer' this week:

There are only two topics of conversation in the grocery market these days; one is as to the price of turkeys, and the other is as to situation in Christmas goods, like dried fruits, nuts, etc. With regard to the former it looks now as if there is a genuine shortage of turkeys. Prices advanced a couple of cents early this week and may be up another couple by Friday. General opinion seems to favour this and though it is by no means certain, everything is pointing that way. Last year, it will be remembered, two weeks before Christmas, turkeys were selling at something like 8c under the price assumed two or three days before Christmas. The price was low, suddenly got higher then lower again, and then finished up high; although in the last few hours of public buying, turkeys slumped again. This Christmas it is different. Prices were fairly high last week and are high still this week, and while there are, of course, a lot of turkeys, there does not seem to be the same plentitude there was last year. Farmers say they are not holding any back. They say they really have not got them to bring into the market. Anyway, be that as it may, prices are higher this year and may, as we say, touch another couple of cents ever yet. The public is almost sure, at any rate, to pay about 30c and possibly more than that.

Canadian Grocer has been amongst the prophets and what was said weeks ago with regard to currants has come true. The shipments from the delayed "Frixas" are filtering into the market. While they will be in time for the last-minute trade in the cities, it is debatable whether they will get out to the country retailer in time for him to make good with his customers. Retailers have been waiting some months altogether, for currants for Christmas, and have been assured again and again that these would be along in time. So they would have been if the exporters and wholesalers had had their way. But one cannot control ocean conditions during war time, and the hold-up has been alike a misfortune and a matter for regret for both wholesaler and retailer. Some wholesalers have been lucky and got shipments in by other boats. But the majority seem to have been expecting stuff in on the "Frixas" and probably they are just as disappointed as their clients, the retailers, who, in turn, have had to tell the customer, very sorrowfully, that they really haven't got the new currants.

The wholesale market this week is just one grand, big clean up. Shelled almonds, filberts, all peels, seedless raisins—these are all exceptionally firm and in every case, excepting in the last one, they have been just about cleaned up. Peels have been particularly in demand it seems by the retailers, and repeat order after repeated order has been sent in but it has not been found able to fill it in all cases.

As an index to the better state of trade, it may be said that although retailers bought fairly heavily a few weeks ago, there has been a great big rush of repeat orders. A great many of these have not been filled because of the inability of the wholesalers, but it is a good index to the state of trade and the state of public buying as well as to the strength of the retailers' business that these repeat orders have been coming in.

WAKE UP

OUR town should wake up to the fact that some one else is occupying the seat that really belongs to us. The intruder represents out-of-town houses that take away business that should go to our own merchants. When will our town wake up? As long as we remain asleep the intruder will keep his place. Only when we decide on the policy of co-operation are we fully awake. We have seen the havoc and ruin of neglecting home interests. Now is the time for Co-operation.

A pretty military wedding took place on Wednesday at the home of Pte. David Edwards, of the 93rd Battalion, 288 McDonnel Street, when his daughter, Miss Annie Mabel Edwards, until a short time ago a resident of Lakefield, was married to Pte. Thomas William Hardman, of Bethany, a member of the 93rd Battalion. Hon. Major Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Batt., performed the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss L. Cox, while the groom was assisted by Pte. Jones of the 93rd.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served and at which Hon. Major Davidson congratulated the young couple on behalf of the 93rd Battalion, and the National Anthem was sung.

CARSON—GUMPRICHT.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mrs. J. Gumpricht, 531 Aylmer street, when her daughter, Miss Grace M. Gumpricht was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. A. Carson of the Y.M.C.A., Hamilton, and formerly physical director of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of the George street Methodist church in the presence of the immediate friends. Miss Marjorie Cull of Orillia, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, while the groom was assisted by his brother Mr. J. M. Carson, of Montreal. The house was prettily decorated with Christmas decorations and carnations. Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. E. Mundy of Oshawa, grandfather and grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Cull and Miss Cull of Orillia. Mr. and Mrs. Carson left on the 9.05 train for Montreal, where they will spend Christmas, going on to Boston for New Year's. They will return via Albany and Buffalo to take up residence in Hamilton.

Turkeys Scarce In Old Country

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, December 24.—The goose, hare and pheasant will be substitute for turkey in many English homes to-morrow. As previous Yuletides the supply of turkeys came from America, Russia, Italy and France. The few turkeys on the market to-day came from Norfolk, Suffolk, Devonshire and Ireland.

Xmas Rejoicing On Wall Street

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, December 24.—Santa Claus drew rein in the financial district to-day, and Wall street broke into one of the wildest prosperity celebrations in its history. "High jinks" on the floor of the New York Stock exchange, on the curb, and on the consolidated stock exchange, marked the advent of Christmas. Prosperity grips all of New York in all quarters.

Crime Rampant In Teuton Lands

German Newspapers Filled With Accounts of Murders and Divorce Courts Are Busy

While the countries of the Allies all report a remarkable decrease in crime, so that even in Paris the police have little to do, it is strange fact that murders and swindling operations are rampant in Germany and Austria.

The German newspaper arriving here are filled with items of criminal news, and a big murder trial now on tells of a Berlin boy who murdered his companion in a little furnished room at night. Previous to this there was a murder involving the killing of a child. Convictions for all kinds of swindling operations occur daily and cases now occupying the attention of the criminal courts in Berlin have to do with tradesmen and storekeepers who were caught charging more for food than the law permitted.

That the enthusiasm over the war has worn off is shown by an editorial in the Prager Tagblatt, which deplores the fact that the majority of the citizens in Prague eat, drink and live as if there were no war going on at all and act generally with an indifference that is aggravating. The newspaper calls for a more serious attitude on the part of the public, who should not forget that thousands of soldiers are at the front fighting and dying for their country.

The Berliner Tageblatt also feels aggrieved. It tells of a pathetic incident. A young soldier who was seriously wounded in France was brought back to Berlin to be treated. The physicians, however, could do little for him, and now his legs are paralyzed and he has to be wheeled around in a chair. Recently his fiancee called and took his out in the rolling chair to a confectionery shop for some refreshments. The proprietor looked askance when the wounded man was wheeled into his shop and requested the young lady to take him in the rear, as his customers did not want to be disturbed at their refreshments by the sight of a paralyzed man. The young lady did so, but the remark cut her to the heart. The Berliner Tageblatt is indignant over the incident and speaks in the most caustic terms of the behavior of the shopkeeper.

The divorce courts, too, are busy and the cases all involve wives of soldiers, who, while their husbands have been at the front, have sought to lessen the loneliness of their existence by friendship with other men. A young soldier who recently returned to Berlin from the battle line was heartbroken to find that his pretty young wife had been carrying on a liaison with a neighbor. He began suit for divorce and the case is attracting much attention.

Youth of Thirteen is Sent from Front

Vienna newspapers tell of the return to school in that city of Hans Kiesel, a thirteen-year-old boy, who disappeared some months ago and went to the front. It appears now that he joined the Eighteenth battalion of the First Austrian Infantry and was for four months on the frontier of Bessarabia. He participated in two battles, was wounded in the chest by shrapnel, but recovered quickly. The general in command was very much surprised when he learned he had such a youthful soldier in the ranks and at once sent him home, as he refused to take further responsibility for the lad.

Cunningham, 331 Reid Street, a Christmas donation of $25, to be divided between the Red Cross and Patriotic funds of this city. THE VALUE OF TRUTH

Truth in business is just as important as truth in every-day life; truth creates confidence, establishes good-will and builds a reliability that will not be wrecked by the storms of competition.

Through three generations people have learned to place reliance on the advertised words of Scott's Emulsion, because they are untarnished, unexaggerated truisms about a household remedy of real and actual worth.

The popularity of Scott's Emulsion is increasing as intelligence advances, because in these days of adulterations it continues to guarantee pure cod liver oil medicinally perfected with glycerine and hypophosphites to build strength, improve the blood and strengthen the lungs. It is free from harmful drugs—a wholesome food-tonic, truthfully advertised.

Heavy Attack Upon the Asquith Ministry By London Newspapers

Only Prompt, Decisive Action by the Cabinet Council on the Conscription Issue Can Save the Prime Minister and His Colleagues From Retirement

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The Asquith Ministry was under heavy attack today. Using David Lloyd George's charge "Too late" as their slogan, influential London newspapers have launched a campaign for the reorganization of the Ministry.

Only prompt, decisive action by the Cabinet Council to-night on conscription issue can save the Prime Minister and several of his colleagues from retirement, several newspapers hinted.

Lloyd George himself, once an object of scorn among British "upper classes," probably will become the head of the Government if Asquith is forced out.

Unless the situation is met to-night, leaders now in opposition to Premier Asquith, expect to renew the fight on the Prime Minister in the Commons, reopening the discussion of the Dardanelles and Balkan failures.

The Northcliffe and other leading London papers have rallied to the support of Lloyd George. The Minister of Munitions' address to the Trades Unionists at Glasgow on Christmas Day has centred attention up Lloyd George again as did his recent criticism of the Government.

FIRE ON BRITISH SHIP DAMAGES $100,000 CARGO OF SUGAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A fire which broke out on the British steamship "Inchmoor" at her wharf in Brooklyn, damaged the cargo of sugar to the extent of $100,000, and started the authorities on an entirely new line of investigation to-day. German agents are suspected.

TO PREVENT FURTHER SESSIONS.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 27.—Newman, agent of the Ford peace party, was to-day endeavouring to close the ranks and prevent further sessions, following the withdrawal of Gov. Hanna, of North Dakota, and Mrs. Inz Milholland, Boissevain.

Swedish papers, taking a different view than that expressed by the Press of Norway, declared that Ford's expedition might actually have hastened the war's end had it not been badly managed.

Russians May Join British in Mesopotamia.—The recent news from Persia is important and reassuring. The Russians have occupied Kum and are moving southward with the evident intention of joining the British forces near Bagdad.

Germans Aid The Arabs In Egypt

Submarine a Factor in Defeat of a Detachment of Egyptians Under British Officer

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Details of the evacuation of Sollum, on the Tripoli-Egyptian frontier, which was announced at the end of November, tend to show that the situation was slightly more serious than the reports made apparent. At the time it was reported that the smaller frontier posts at Sollum and Sidi Barania had been concentrated at Matarah in order to avoid posible friction with the Arab tribes.

The Exchange Telegraph Company now reports that a strong Arab force attacked the Sollum garrison, while a German submarine appeared and began shelling a detachment of from sixty to eighty Egyptian troops, under a British officer, and that they were compelled to retire with about twenty casualties. The remainder of the men withdrew in good order to the new base at Materuh.

Turks Join The Allies On Front Before Salonica

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The battlefronts of both sides in the conflict in the Serbian theatre of war are given in a despatch from the Salonika correspondent of the Echo de Paris.

The correspondent states that sixty thousand Germans are massed around Monastir with the Bulgars concentrated in the centre of the Vardar Valley, and two Turkish divisions taking a position on the left of the Bulgars. The French are ranged in a semicircle around Salonika, with their left on the Vardar centre, facing the Greek frontier near Doiran, and their right connecting with the British troops defending Chalcidice.

It is announced that General J. F. L. Pierron de Mandenir has called on King Peter of Serbia and presented to him the War Cross conferred upon him by France. The General also handed to the King a letter from President Poincare.

King Peter, moved by this evidence of friendship, it is stated, kissed the War Cross before it was pinned to his breast.

Kaiser Richest Man In German Empire

Private Fortune Has Been Increased Enormously in Past Few Years

Thanks to the advice of financiers who, for obvious reasons, he admitted to his friendship, the Kaiser's private fortune has increased to such an extent of late years that it was estimated a short time ago by the eminent German authority, Herr Rudolph Martin, that he is easily the richest man in Germany, having an annual income of 1,000,000 ounds, derived from possessions valued at approximately 20,000,000 pounds.

Apart from the Kaisers' fortune his son, the Crown Prince, has a separate income of 60,000 pounds, drawn from property valued at nearly 1,000,000 pounds, while the Kaiser's brother, Prince Henry, enjoys some 30,000 pounds a year on account of an estate worth half a million. Altogether the principal members of the Hohenzollern family own property valued at approximately 25,000,000 pounds.

The Kaiser's fortune has been built up by investments in many businesses. He has some very large holdings in the German steamship lines, is extensively interested in the diamond mine enterprises of German West Africa, owns forests and lands to the value of $3,500,000, carries on a large lumber business, and has a horse-breeding establishment in western Prussia which brings him in a handsome revenue. Furthermoreh he has great financial intrests in a municipal lager beer brewery at Hanover, and founded an extensive pottery factory on his private estates at Cadinen.

Altogether the Kaiser owns about 20 castles and country houses, valued at 2,000,000 pounds, and various property in Berlin, approximately worth $1,000,000. In seven different provinces he owns 74 estates, comprising close on half a million acres.

It is interesting to note that ever since Germany began to make preparations for a great war the Kaiser has been investing immense sums of money on the other side of the Atlantic. He is one of the largest landowners in the Western states—not in his own name, of course—and owns a considerable section of property in the west of Canada. So notorious is the fact, that it was at one time a standing joke at Vancouver that, although the Kaiser was a large owner of property in a certain district, he declined to join the local taxpayers' association, which would have been materially assisted in its propaganda by the use of his name.

According to financial experts, the Kaiser's numerous investments in America can only mean one thing. To quote the words of one of these experts: "They indicate very plainly that the Kaiser, at the time when he was preparing to stake the fortunes of his dynasty upon an attempt at the conquest of Eastern Europe, was also preparing for the possibility of failure by consolidating huge financial resources in the United States, and the neighbouring dominion, in case he had to escape to that port of the world." —Tid-Bits.

CURLING

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a curling club was held in the town hall last week, when the following officers were elected:

Hon.-President—Mr. R. Graham.
President—Mr. Thompson Braden.
Vice-Pres.—Dr. S. J. Gibson.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. W. W. Leopard.
Committee—Messrs. C. S. Tanner J. W. Ridpath, D. S. Morrison, S. J. Charlton and Theo. Crawford.

Arrangements were made to have a splendid season's sport, and the club will likely have a good membership. —Lakefield News.

Germany Is The Biggest Loser

Figures Show Allies Must Win in the Long Run

On the basis of arithmetic, "which is the only thing that never changes in the world," Col. Feyler, a military critic, endeavours to prove to the Journal de Geneve that Germany and her allies, because of the ever-decreasing number of men, can never hope to emerge victorious from the war.

"The longer the fronts," says Col. Feyler, "or the less the troops are massed in depths the more rapid is the disappearance of the elite. In the beginning of the war Germany lost her young men, then somewhat older ones, until death began to reap the grizzled heads, victory meanwhile, slipping from the grasp of her decimated battalions."

The allied Powers, while also suffering great losses of men, Col. Feyler argues, do not suffer nearly as heavily as Germany, whose army fighting on the longest front, suffers the most rapid diminution. He continues:

"For three Germans killed or put out of action per kilometer and per day on a front of 1,200 kilometers, the empire loses in one year, roughly 1,300,000 men out of a population of 70,000,000, or one-fifty-fourth of the total.

"On a front of 1,600 kilometers Russia, with a population of 160,000,000, loses only one-one-hundredth-and-sixtieth or three times less. On a front of 460 kilometres France, with 40,000,000 inhabitants, without counting her colonial population, loses 450,000 or one-three-hundred-and-ninetieth.

"Lastly, Great Britain, on a front of 120 kilometres, loses one-three-hundred-and-forty-sixth of the population of the United Kingdom, exclusive of the colonies."

On these figures as a basis, the military observer says Germany might be able to hold out another year; France, after Germany, would be hardest hit, being able to last only two years, while Russia and Great Britain would last much longer. Col. Feyler argues that England might considerably extend her front, and when France is worn out could take her place from the Swiss frontier to Dunkirk.

Sad Death At Roseneath

Son Dies Three Days After His Father Leaves for Active Service

ROSENEATH, Dec. 27. — A sad death took place at Roseneath on Saturday when little Harold Albert Brown, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Brown, passed away. On the Wednesday before his little son's death, Dr Brown, who had enlisted with the Army Medical Corps, was called away for service with the Empires' forces. When he left his little boy, who had been ill, seemed better and was not considered to be in any danger. The funeral took place to Merrill's cemetery.

Some Scenes From The Battlefront On The West
A Fight For a Wood

(From Philip Gibbs.)

BRITISH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS—At the invitation of the French Headquarters Staff, I have spent the last few days with their armies in Artois, and have been in the midst of those great battlefields round Arras and Souchez and Notre Dame de Lorette, where French soldiers have been fighting for a year or frightful, incessant struggle, and have seen again those soldiers of France, whose qualities of courage and self-sacrifice, of gaiety and patience in tragedy, stir me always like some great song of life. I was glad to get back among them for a while.

And yet—Heaven knows—there was no fun in this visit to the fighting lines of our Allies. If it were not that the continuation of this war has dulled all emotion at the sight of desolation and death, which are now ordinary familiar things, a man might have wept tears of blood in the midst of these battlefields where the relics of old actions—more than a year old—are heaped up with the wreckage of to-day and yesterday, where men bleeding from fresh wounds passed me in streets of ruin, destroyed twelve months ago, and where French towns, as charming once as little fairy-tale towns of Arcady, have been smashed and pounded and ground to dust alternately by French and German guns, and were being shelled again when I went into them.

All the ground here over which I passed, and over which my eyes wandered in sweeping views of spurs and valleys, and long flat fields fringed by giant stumps of shell-broken trees, is one great battle zone in which every name of a ridge, or a hamlet, or an isolated house, is famous in French bulletins, recording desperate fighting there month after month. Notre Dame de Lorette Ablain St. Nazaire Souchez, Carency, the farm of La Folia, the Labyrinth, Neuville St. Vaast, Mont St. Eloi, the Chateau Rouge, the Heights of Vincy—they are written on the hearts of the French people whose sons have poured out their blood there in waves, and who have gained victory at a fearful price.

Amidst Bursting Shells.

They are in French hands now, but they have not the silence of old battlefields from which the tide of war has ebbed away. Great shells were still bursting over them yesterday and the day before, as they are bursting to-day, and the air was filled with the rush and scream of shells as we went from one place to another expecting to find death there, and surprised because it came so close (within a few inches yesterday), but not quite close enough.

Fortunately, they were mostly French guns which made an informal tumult in the air when I went some days ago to Notre Dame de Lorette. The enemy was attempting an attack upon a section of trenches down below this high ridge, and the French gunners had been asked to fire a "tir de barrage," or a screen of shells, to protect their infantry. I had tramped through the Bois de Bouvingny, where the fallen leaves of autumn were being churned up with the soft mud into which one's feet plunged ankle-deep by French soldiers, whose blue uniforms and steel helmets—they look like Roundheads in those new casques—were covered with white clay as though they had been buried alive. Two German shells came hurtling through the trees a few yards away, arriving with that warning whistle which is the most awful note in the music of war, but did no damage. It was when we were climbing up from the valley to the crest of Notre Dame de Lorette that the tempest of war begun from the French batteries.

They were heavy guns—from the "centvingst" upwards—and they fired for half an hour with extraordinary rapidity, the shells following each other every second across the crest of the hill. They passed above our heads—not very far above, it seemed—and so close to the ridge that they seemed to be cutting the grass. The noise of each travelling shell was prodigious. It came with a long rushing drive, which deepened into a thrilling organ-note of tremendous volume as it passed the crest in an overwhelming wave of reverberation. "Beautiful!" said one of my friends. I thought it the most awful noise with deviliah terror in it, and it was to this music of death that we wandered over the battlefield of Notre Dame de Lorette. Pious pilgrims used to come to this place to worship at the shrine of Our Lady of Compassion. The chapel where they prayed is now a heap of stones, and all around there is a dreadful picture of war—of a year's incessant warfare.

Fight for a Wood.

In September of the first year of war the Germans were in Bouvingny Wood, where I saw their old trenches and dugouts. In October of last year the French chased them out of the wood, fighting from glade to glade, and forced them to take up a new line on the ridge of Notre Dame de Lorette. It was a formidable position, from which their guns dominated the valleys below. It was a position which the French determined to capture at all costs, and for months they made assault after assault, sustaining frightful casualties, so that the blood of the young manhood of France washed its slopes. But on May 9 of this year the French stormed their way on to the heights under the cover of a hurricane of shells, and then, by hand-to-hand fighting of a most bloody nature, flung the enemy off the crest, and drove him into the valley to the line of Ablain St. Nazaire and Souchez. In spite of furious counter-attacks they never gained that high ridge again, but left it, and its slopes, as a tumbled graveyard of their dead.

I have seen many battlefields in this war, from Dixmude to the Argonne, but never any one more awful in its grim suggestiveness of war at its worst. The very earth, with its white blotches of clay, with its German trenches flung about into holes and heaps of French shells, pock-marked with innumerable shell craters, had agonized in this year-long battle, and is now "dead ground" in very truth. Everywhere one's footsteps stumble over fragments of shell and broken weapon. One has to go warily to avoid live shells, stuck out of the earth like bottles in a rubbish heap. Worse things than that lie about—fragments of human bodies, half-buried corpses, the poor tragic relics of mutilated men. They lie in water-pools clutching the mud, and one turns coldly away from bundles of rags and bones protruding from broken sand-bags and crumbled parapets. A long row of German dug-outs had been burst out of the hillside by a concentrated storm of French explosives.

Loot-Furnished Shelter.

The German soldiers had lived with some comfort in those holes, and had furnished them with loot from French towns. Now the whole nest of shelter was a little of earth and beams and twisted iron, from which stuck out bits of velvet-covered chairs, charred pieces of lace, broken mirrors and bedsteads, and hanks of human bones. It was the work of 1,100 French guns, and of 200,000 French shells which were flung over this countryside before the great infantry attack in May, and of German guns which have battered Notre Dame de Lorette ever since those days of French victory and sacrifice.

Crouching low over the crest of that hill of death we looked over the panorama of battle, where great shells were bursting. Immediately below was Souchez, through which the French swept on September 25, while we were assaulting Loos, and we started into the shapeless ruins of that town, for whose possession the Allies paid a frightful price in blood, and fought with the recklessness of death. The results of last month's victory was clear. The Germans had been pushed back beyond Souchez, beyond Ablain St. Nazaire, Carency, La Targette, and Neuville St. Vaast—so that Lens is no longer defended on its western side by those series of fortified places which seemed an impregnable barrier. Looking eastward from my middle of earth on the summit of Notre Dame de Lorette, beneath the flight of shells I saw the high broken towers of Mont St. Eloi, blurred by the mist and rain over all the countryside, and then, eastward, the heights of Vimy, symbolics of German occupation. They had burrowed deep and built strongly down below. We went into the officers' "Casino," panelled with walnut-wood, fitted up with all the skill of carpentry. A piano—by Klein, of Paris—was at the end of the room, and I played a chord or two on notes once touched to German music by the plump hands of some young officer forgetting the horrors of war in old love-songs once heard in the gardens of Dresden on Dusseldorf. I wondered if one of those hands I saw in a dirty puddle of mud belonged to this musician.

There is a nest of dugouts in Ablain, which had been used by the German Kommandatur, with a telephone installation, and offices. Its roof is timbered and cemented so that it would stand a direct hit from any but the largest shell, and one good idea in it was a thin panel through which the officers could break away into a communication trench should the other exit be blocked by a landslide.

Beneath most of the ruins of Ablain there are wonderful dugouts upon which I kept a careful eye for immediate perusal the should their late owners send any aerial torpedoes or "minenwerfer" nearer than they were bursting at the time. Out in the streets of ruin one had a sense of utter desolation, haunted by imminent death. "Here," said one of the French officers, with a fine ironic smile, "is the Town Hall of Ablain St. Nazaire." I stood and looked at a square space scooped out by shell-craters. It was all that was left of the chief building in the town.

As we walked out of Ablain St. Nazaire, glad to go because the German rifles were sniping between the broken walls, the wreckage about us told the tale of those days when the French soldiers came above the heights of Notre Dame and forged their way through this burning village, which resounded to the roar of shells and the rattle of machine-gun fire, and the yells and screams of men. It was not difficult to see these things again in the mind's eye. If my imagination needed any help it was given by some men with bloody bandages, who came limping down the roadway, and by the stark figure of a French soldier wheeled on a stretcher from the trenches, and by the French troops in another town upon whose clothes and faces there was the clay of these battlefields and in whose eyes there glowed the fire of those men who fought and died to get this ground—the flame which burns in the soul of France.

WOMEN OF CANADA.

Fort Coulonge, Quebec.—"I am happy to tell you that your medicine did me wonderful good. I was troubled with weakness and I tried wines and other things but received very little benefit. I was young at the time and knew very little about medicines till a lady friend called to see me with a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I became strong and a year afterward had twins."—Mrs. J. Beaudy, Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

Thousands of women right here in Canada who are now pleased with robust health cannot understand why thousands of other women continue to worry and suffer when they can obtain for a trifling sum Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will surely and quickly banish all pain, distress and misery and restore the normal health.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG
Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Worth Remembering.

Eggs baked in tomato sauce make a nice luncheon dish.

A good way to bleach handkerchiefs when it is not convenient to hang them out of doors is to wash them and then let them soak over night in water in which a little cream of tartar has been dissolved.

In making salad dressing, if oil does not agree with the family, use cream and melted butter.

To effectively remove scorch marks from linen, rub with a fresh-cut onion, soaking the garment in cold water afterward.

When next scrambling eggs, add just a few slices of sweet green pepper, chopped fine, and cook in a little butter.

Olives and English walnuts ground together and moistened with mayonnaise make a tasty luncheon sandwich.

To cure a felon take equal quantities of castile soap and coarse salt; put the salt in a covered iron pan and heat until dry enough to pulverize in a mortar. Chip the soap. Mix with turpentine to make a salve.

Took The Instrument.—A story is told of a farmer who, exasperated by a continual downpour of rain, while his barometer index pointed steadily to "fair," took the instrument into the open air and exclaimed, "Noo, see the rain for yersel' if ye will not tak' my word for't."

WHY NOT?

Why not a telephone in your home for Christmas?

It will brighten not only Christmas Day, but all the long days to follow.

It will lift many a burden from the housewife's shoulders, make the life of the family brighter and happier, and protect them in any emergency that may arise.

And when members of the family leave home, how good it is, from your own fireside, to hear the voice of the absent one.

Had Seen Something Like It.—Miss Atkins was explaining to her class the difference between a common noun and an abstract noun. "An example of a common noun is 'cat,'" she said; "for you can see it, while you cannot see an abstract noun. Now, for example, had any of you ever seen 'abundance?'" This query was received in profound silence. Then a little fellow got up and said—"No ma'am I have never seen a ban dance, but I've seen a cake walk."

What'll They Think?—As showing the patriotic spirit of the young lads in the army, one connected with Crieff who has been billeted in the north of Scotland for nearly twelve months, and who is only 17 years of age, was bemoaning his poor prospects (owing to his age) of being sent to the front. "They'll be asking me," he said, "when the war's owre what I did for my country, and what'll they think when I tell them I was up in the Highlands a' the time?"

THE HOLY ARM OF THE LORD REVEALED

As Yet It Is Manifested to a Special Class,

The Jews Saw No Beauty in Jesus—Their Eyes Were Blinded—His Wonderful Report—The Humble Poor Believed—"Lowliness Indeed"—"Sit Down and Count the Cost"—The Gospel Appeals to the Lowly in Heart, the Heavy-Laden—More Truth Now Required—The Church Class Awaiting Deliverance.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Washington D. C., Dec. 26.—Pastor Russell delivered a characteristic discourse here today, from the text, "Who hath believed our report, and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed?" (Isaiah 53:1.) He said in part:

These words were used prophetically of our Lord Jesus Christ, as St. John points out. (John 12:37-40.) The Prophet goes on to say, "He shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him." All this was very true of our Saviour as respecting the Jewish view of Him and the Message which He gave was not generally believed. The Jews of His day were expecting a glorious and powerful King who would fulfil the promise made centuries before to their great ancestor Abraham. (Genesis 12:3.) Consequently they were greatly disappointed when our Lord came as "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." To them He seemed too tender a plant to prosper. While they acknowledged Him to be of the Davidic line, nevertheless they esteemed Him to be from a root which had lost its virility, and from which therefore they could never hope for a sprout of power and glory such as they had anticipated Messiah would possess.

We sympathize deeply with the Jews in their disappointment and their failure to recognize Jesus of Nazareth as their long-promised Messiah, the King of Glory. As the Lord had foretold through the Prophet, "He was despised and rejected of men," even by those of His own nation, that for more than sixteen hundred years had awaited His coming. They were ashamed of Him, hid their faces from Him. One would naturally expect, however, that the very ones who would receive the Message that Jesus was Messiah, that God had sent His Son into the world, would have been the Jewish high priest and other zealous religionists, the most prominent men of the Jewish nation.

The Pharisees were especially the "holiness people" of that day. Our natural thought would be that they would have been in the right attitude of mind, waiting for Messiah to manifest Himself; and that when He came and spoke to them about the goodness of God, and showed forth the power that Jehovah God was exercising through Him, to heal the sick and raise the dead, they would rejoice. But they were not in this right attitude. They were looking in another direction. They were looking for a great general who would deliver them from the power of the Romans. They desired no such leader as Jesus of Nazareth. He was too humble, too attentive to the poor and to sinners. He associated with the common people—something that neither the priests nor the Pharisees would do. Therefore they did not care to be known as His followers.

Blinded by Pride and Selfishness

So Messiah "came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power [privilege] to become sons of God." (John 1:11, 12.) These received His report and believed it. He reported that God is Love; that God was now ready to bless the Jewish people, and had sent His Son to give His life as a Ransom for all mankind; and that the Son was calling as many as were appreciative to become members of His Bride class, to be heirs of God, joint-heirs with Himself, to fulfil the Promise made to Abraham—"In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."—Galatians 3:8 16, 29.

But the majority of the nation would not believe His report. They said, "This is not the man to fulfil that Promise made to Father Abraham. When Messiah comes, He will soon deliver our nation from the Roman yoke." Thus they manifested that they were not in the right condition of heart. They had plenty of pride, selfishness, and self-conceit; but they lacked the qualities that God desires in His people—meekness, humility, teachableness, gentleness, brotherly kindness, love.

The Meek Received His Message

Those who received Jesus of Nazareth as Messiah had, however, to a large extent these qualities of character. Let us consider the personnel of the Apostles. St. Peter, St. James, and St. John never had experiences which would make them think that they were great men. They were poor fishermen, and were naturally humble. This was nothing to their credit, however; for they had nothing of which to be proud. They were men of strong character but were unlearned. They were of the common people. But they were meek. There is a blessing in being meek; and the true follower of our Lord Jesus Christ must cultivate that quality more and more.

Meekness and lowliness of heart were characteristics possessed by the Master. One might think that He had some excuse for being dignified and somewhat autocratic in manner. But not so. There was no pride whatever in His actions; and the Report, the Message, which He gave, was designed to reach the ears of the meek and lowly.

This fact we see illustrated in the case of St. Nathaniel. He was a true Israelite, looking for the light, for the Truth. When St. Philip came to him and said, "We have found the Messiah," Nathaniel at first was skeptical. But he did not treat his friend arrogantly; he was ready to be convinced. When St. Philip said, "Come and see," Nathaniel went, trusting in God for guidance. This was just the spirit that the Master was seeking.

Before St. Philip had called him, St. Nathaniel had been in prayer under a fig tree. He was desirous of being led by God. As he drew near to Jesus, our Lord said, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." Very properly Nathaniel asked, "Whence knowest Thou me?" Our Lord's reply, "Before Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee," convinced him. The power that could know him and could see him under the fig tree was of Divine origin. No one was present when he knelt under that tree. Here was proof positive that Jesus was the Messiah.—John 1: 43-51.

The Master was seeking disciples who had strong faith in God, and therefore He commended Nathaniel for the prayer. "Who hath believed our report"—our doctrines, our teachings? The Nathaniel class, those who promptly believe and act on proper evidence, have done so. See what a noble band the followers of Jesus were—not mighty, not great, except in the qualities of character which our Lord approved; namely, loyalty to God, confidence in His promises, and a meek looking to Him for guidance. In this sense they were peculiar, different from the remainder of the people.

Rigid Terms of Discipleship.

In seeking those who would be disciples of Christ, we are not to make the terms of discipleship too easy for them. Rather, we are to tell them of His arrangement—"If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up His cross and follow Me." To do this will mean the surrender of his own will. To those who are contemplating consecration, our Lord says, "Sit down and count the cost." Whoever thinks that the price is too great would better not give at all; for the Lord will not accept such a disciple.

No one should undertake to be a Christian until he understands what the step means and has carefully weighed the matter: It is a serious proposition; for the Christian is dealing with the Almighty God. To be the disciple of Christ means the surrender of everything that one has, even one's life. The new will must govern everything under his control. He is not to put his hand to the plow and then look back. (Luke 9:62.) This course of absolute self-abnegation was characteristic of our Lord and His disciples, as well as of all those who believed their report. This class have always been of humble mind. Not many great or noble or wise or learned or rich have heard the Message.—1 Corinthians 1:26-29.

Sometimes the little all that is given to God is meager and sometimes less mean; but with Him even the meanest is acceptable if the heart is honest and sincere. "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God," urges St. Paul, "that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service." (Romans 12:1.) They are holy because God counts the consecrated, spirit-begotten Christian complete in Christ. It is not that we are really holy in ourselves, but that Jesus' merit constitutes us holy in the sight of God. Our Lord Jesus Christ makes up for each one exactly what that one lacks.

This is the class to whom the Arm of the Lord is revealed. The arm has long been a symbol of power. The Arm of the Lord represents the Power of the Lord. God's Arm, or Power, was revealed in our Lord Jesus Christ. (John 12:37-41.) God purposes to bless the whole world of mankind, to lift them up out of degradation and sin back to Himself. To make the whole world know God will be Power indeed. This Jehovah God will do through Christ Jesus. But at present this Power is revealed only to the eye of faith.

Even back at our Lord's First Advent this power was revealed to the natural senses to some extent as the people saw Jesus heal the sick, cast out devils, and raise the dead. But it was only "the finger of God" then—only a small display of Power Divine. (Luke 11:20.) On one occasion our Lord Jesus told the Jews of the power which He would Himself manifest in the future—that one day He would bring them all from their graves. (John 5: 28, 29.) Through His miracles He "manifested forth His glory"—showed it beforehand. (John 2:11.) But one class really saw the power of the Lord—the meek, the teachable class. With minds blinded by prejudice the others said, "He casteth out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils." If the heart be wrong, even the power and glory of the Lord may be misinterpreted.

Greater Revealment Now Due.

We have now come down to the time when the blessing of the Lord is nearly due to be poured out upon all flesh. The true saints of God may now have a great deal of knowledge of the Divine Plan for human salvation. The Arm of the Lord is being revealed to His people more fully than ever before. It takes great faith to believe that God's Arm will eventually be revealed to all mankind. But we are getting the eyes of our understanding opened. Not everybody as yet has the eye to see—only the few. "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear," said the Master to His disciples. (Matthew 13: 16, 17.) Only the blessed ones now hear and see.

It requires something more than a natural mind to discern these things. We recall that on one occasion when St. Peter had declared his faith in Jesus as the Messiah, our Lord said to him, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but My Father which is in Heaven." (Matthew 16:17.) Why did the Father reveal this to St. Peter? Why was he able to understand the Message which Jesus gave? It was because he was honest at heart. He had the hearing ear, not merely the outward ear. He heard with his heart, as it were. So our Lord intimated that all those who received Him had the right kind of ears; and that Satan had blinded the minds of the others, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ should shine unto them.

In the world to-day there are approximately 1,600,000,000 people. Nearly all of these have been more or less blinded by Satan. Some are partly blind; others are completely so. Even the eyes of the Church of Christ are not altogether opened. But as our eyes open wider and wider to see the spiritual things, we understand more and more the Love of God, which passes human knowledge. Satan does not wish any to see how good our God is; for the more we see of the Love of God, the more it will transform us into the character-likeness of His dear Son.

Most people are skeptical on this subject. They do not see the Arm of the Lord. God does not wish any to see it now except those who are in the right condition of heart. None others are ready to receive the Message. If we are thus being blessed of Him, let us show forth His praises who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light. But as we do this, let us not marvel if those who do not see shall say all manner of evil against those who let their light shine.

The Deliverance of the Elijah Class.

We should not be surprised at this. If there was a class who could not see the light as it shone from our Lord, how could a similar class see our light? If we suffer persecution because of their inability to see, we have the Scriptural assurance that the glory of God is resting upon us. This means that we shall have added blessings.—1 Peter 4:14.

Let us look at the picture of Elijah. (2 Kings 2:1-11.) The Lord took him away into the heavens, not into Heaven. (John 3:13.) It was not then due time for the Church, and Elijah was not of the spiritual class. God wished to make of him a type of those who would go into the Heavenly condition at the close of the Gospel Age, when the resurrection of the Church is due. Therefore Elijah was taken up into the heavens and out of human sight. If we draw a parallel to Elijah's case we may suppose that many of the Lord's saints now living will go together—"to meet the Lord in the air." The air symbolizes spiritual power. Thus Satan is now "the prince of the power of the air," the one who exerts spiritual power as "the ruler of the darkness of this world." God's spiritual power is to be manifested to the world through Christ and the glorified Church.—1 Corinthians 15: 51, 52; 1 Thessalonians 4: 13-18; Ephesians 2:2; 6:12.

Elijah's experiences on the day when he was to be taken up seem to represent something soon to occur in the experience of the Church. On that day he was sent by the Lord to four different places in succession—to Gilgal, Bethel, Jericho, and Jordan; but he was not taken at any of these places. After he and Elisha had crossed the Jordan, they went on, talking as they walked. Then suddenly a chariot and horses of fire appeared and separated them; and a whirlwind caught Elijah away into the heavens.

The Lord's people of our day, waiting for the time of their deliverance, first had the date 1874 in mind as the probable date of the glorification of the last living members of the Church. That date was the due time for our Lord's Second Coming, as pointed out in Bible chronology. But the Church was not taken then. Next they watched for 1878, the time parallel to our Lord's resurrection. But the living saints were not taken then. Later, they saw that 1878 was the date for the awakening of the sleeping saints. Then they looked forward to 1881, a date corresponding to the opening of the Gospel door to the Gentiles, to Cornelius, the first Gentile to receive the anointing of the Spirit.

But the Church was not taken then. That date marked the close of the general Gospel Call of this Age, as they afterward saw. The only remaining date pointed out in Bible chronology was October 1, 1914, approximately. The time came; and the great war broke out which the Scriptures showed to be due about that time. But the Church was not glorified. We had merely drawn an inference. But we are still going on, rejoicing in the Lord; for we know that our deliverance draweth nigh. Let us therefore be faithful even unto death.

We have much encouragement from the Lord, as daily we talk about His Plan and become more like Christ, more ready for the Kingdom. No longer are we to look for a date, but for the "chariot," the chariot of fire. Let us keep on faithfully doing the Lord's business, trusting that when the chariot comes the Lord will take us. Let us be sure that we have richly those fruits of the Holy Spirit of which the Apostle Peter says; "If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. . . . For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour."—2 Peter 1:5-11.

JOHNNY POE'S GOOD-BYE

Johnny Poe, the famous Princeton rugby player of years ago, wrote his last message to his classmates in part as follows: "I have transferred from the heavy artillery to the infantry—the famous Black Watch, 'than whom there is none such,' who for over one hundred and fifty years have shoved the British flag into many quarters of the globe and kept it there, until now, as Kipling said:

Never a sea so distant, never an isle so lone
But over the sand and the palm trees
the British flag has flown.

"I am beginning to feel more at home in a kilt; and while they are cool, the legs get dirty for quite a way above the knees. Of course, we are going to win; but the 'Limburgers' are putting up a great fight. What business have the 'square heads' to start on the downward course the Empire which wethered the Spanish Armada, the Dutch under De Ruyter and Van Tromp, the 'Grand Monarch' and Napoleon? Aren't you sorry I am such a shark on history?

"The Black Watch carried a German trench on May 9 after several regiments had tried and failed. It was taken with the piper playing the 'Highland Laddie.' The heavy artillery does most of its firing from five to eight or nine thousand yards and one never sees the enemy. There is no use in writing why I transferred or I would only be misunderstood—or else suspected of 'bumming my chat' (praising myself).

"I trust that I shall be on hand at the next round-up to tell you 'how the play came up,' or in other words how me and K. of K. made the 'sauerkrauts' wish that war had never been invented. And now, in the stately language of the rancher and miner, 'looks toward you all, and also bows. I hope I catches your eye.'

"As ever while water runs and grass grows.

J. P. POE."

GRAND COMPLEXION IMPROVER BETTER THAN COSMETICS

When it's so easy to bring back the bloom of youth to faded cheeks, when skin disfigurements can be removed, isn't it foolish to plaster on cosmetics?

Go to the root of the trouble—remove the cause, correct the condition that keeps you from looking as you ought. Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills and very soon you'll have a complexion to be proud of. How much happier you'll feel — pimples gone, cheeks rosy again, eyes bright, spirits good, joyous health again returned. Never a failure with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; get a 25c box to-day.

Two telephone girls in different country exchanges were having a chat over the wires on the subject of dress. For four minutes, five minutes, 10 minutes the topic held their attention, and was still unexhausted when an impertinent, impatient, imperative masculine voice broke up the conversational meeting.

"Hello," the voice yelled. "Hello! Hello! Ah, at last! Who is that speaking?"

"What line d'you think you're on?" demanded one of the girls, indignant and annoyed.

"Really," came the weary reply, "I don't know, but from the direction that's going on I should think I'm on the clothes line."

WHY SOME DON'T ENLIST NOW PLAINLY STATED

A Letter Written by a Shirker Applies to Many Thousands of Young Men Here—The Yellow Streak

The following open letter to Lord Derby appeared in an English paper. It may be interesting to some Canadians.

Dear Lord Derby:—I owe you an apology. You do not know me although you know my name. You have seen it on posters and programmes, and you have heard me sing. I think you heard me sing "Let me like a soldier fall!" The other day one of your recruiting officers called on me and asked me why I did not enlist. I told him I could not afford to do so because of the people who were dependent upon me. I also said my income tax was more valuable to the country than my life. That was not true. I ought to have said, "Because I am a coward." Nobody is dependent on me. My wife is an artist who earns ample for all our needs, and for those of our two children. Besides, I know England wants men more than she wants money. I could leave my profession and join the army to-morrow without inconveniencing anybody. But I am a coward. Every time I see troops marching past I feel ashamed. I visualize the torture and the turmoil of battle, and my soul shrinks within me. I am not fit even to look at soldiers marching. I am one of millions.

Scared of Pain

I am afraid of pain of any kind. Passing a dentist's door makes me shudder. But it is not only the chance of physical suffering from which I shudder. It is the little inconveniences of camp life that make me afraid. An eiderdown quilt, a nice fire and nice dressing gown. Even doing without nice flavored tooth powder and a scented bath would seem hell to me. I want a nice easy chair and a taxicab. Even after marching five miles I am sure I should drop. I am not used to it. I am afraid of the monotony of drill. I could not kill a rabbit, much less a man.

Many Millions the Same

I am only writing this apology in order to explain why millions of men like me do not fall into the ranks. I want to explain that, under the stupid system by which we are educated and then allowed to muddle along, thousands like myself are unfitted for the man's part in life. Perhaps it is not altogether our fault. We are coddled and spoiled and made much of. I am used to the applause of audiences. I confess that I revel in it. Flattery has done as much for my incompetence as anything.

When this war is over will you use all the influence you have to change the system that unfits so many for the honor of being allowed to do their duty? Then there will be fewer men like me. You will see that I am such a coward that I am afraid to sign my name.

German Decoy Duck

In Antwerp, where the Boche reigns supreme, the inhabitants are supposed to read only two local papers approved by the "kommandantur." But the inhabitants read the forbidden journals all the same, and pass them on from one to another. One day a woman rose in a crowded street car, and exclaimed, "Someone has stolen my handbag!" A German officer and some soldiers who "happened" to be on the platform came to the lady's assistance and ordered the passengers to turn out their pockets. They did not find the bag, but they arrested two of Antwerp's citizens with prohibited newspapers in their possession. The lady was a German detective.

FROM THE MIDDLE AGES

A Silly Lot of Rules Which Work One Way Only.

Falsification of a child's age to the trolley car conductor, gossip and scandal, strong drink and card party prizes, untoward friendliness with men other than the husband and numerous other matters are barred entirely for married women in the "ten commandments" formulated by the Rev. Dr. Clayton Albert Smucker, pastor of the Stevens Memorial Methodist Church, Harrisburg.

Dr. Smucker, promulgated these "ten Commandments" in a sermon on "Perils and Rules of Conduct for Mothers," the first sermon of a series of "one-man debates."

The series of laws, modeled upon the decalogue, is as follows:

I.—Thou shalt have no man except thy husband.

II.—Thou shalt place no club, social circle, pleasure organization or missionary society before thy home.

III.—Thou shalt not waste thy husband's substance on gay raiment and vain show.

IV.—Thou shalt not let the petty vexations of the household disrupt the family harmony and harass thy tired husband.

V.—Thou shalt not feed thy family with idle gossip and neighbourhood scandal.

VI.—Thou shalt not fret thyself because thy neighbour's house is greater than thine, neither shalt thou repine when she smiles condescendingly from her limousine to thee in a trolley car.

VII.—Thou shalt not serve punch to thy guests nor put up prizes at thy whist parties, lest thy moral advice to thy sons and daughters become a mockery.

VIII.—Thou shalt not pronounce thyself delighted to see an unwelcome caller, neither shalt thou declare to the conductor that thy 18-year-old child is of half-fare age, lest thy heart become hollow and thy soul utterly false.

IX.—Thou shalt not wear showy dresses over shoddy underwear, nor shine with imitation jewellery, lest thy children be given to sham and false pretense.

X.—Thou shalt not allow thy Bible to gather dust, and thy attendance upon divine worship to be governed by caprice or the state of the weather, lest the altar fires of thy heart go out and thy children become godless.

The following parody, sung to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia," is contributed by a private of the 93rd Battalion.

We've been asked a question boys, by dear old Johnny Bull,
That's why we've donned the khaki just to answer it in full;
The tug of war has started and we're going to help him pull,
So that's why we've raised our own battalion.

Chorus—

We come, we come from Peterborough town,
We come, we come, so pass the word around.
We'll keep the old flag flying, and we'll never let it down,
Good luck to the 93rd Battalion.

With Peterborough to the fore, there's no cause for alarm
And when we get to "Somewhere" we've a duty to perform,
We'll blow the Kaiser and his crew to where it's mighty warm,
Depend on the 93rd Battalion.

Chorus—

We've booked a "non stop" to Berlin.
We mean to get there, too,
And pay our friend the "butcher" an account that's overdue,
We guess he won't ask any more when once our boys are through,
The boys of the 93rd Battalion.

Chorus—

When once we've done our little bit, and likewise made a name
We'll meet again in good old Peterborough once again;
The Maple Leaf Forever, we will sing with might and main,
And Long Live the 93rd Battalion.

Chorus—

"Do you love sister Clara, Mr. Simpson?" asked the little brother frankly of the caller. "Why, Willie, what a funny question," replied the astounded Mr. Simpson. "Why d'ye ask that?" "Because she said last night she'd give five shillings to know, and I need the money for a new football."

London's New Drinking Rules Called Silly and Irritating

LONDON, Dec. 4.—London has accepted its new drink regulations permitting the opening of bars only between the hours of noon and half-past two in the daytime and between six and half-past nine in the evening with philosophic calm. On the first day of the new order, east, west, north, south, it was taken very much as a matter of course. There was very little grumbling, except on the part of licensed victuallers, who are unquestionably hit hard by the order of the Board of Control. But even they tried, as one man phrased it, "to look pleasant and make the best of it."

Most of the licensed houses in the city proper, and a large number in outlying districts, displayed in their windows announcements that freshly made tea, meat essence and mineral waters were on sale "throughout the day." Some, too, increased their catering facilities, but they were not much of a success.

In the neighborhood of the Bank, stockbrokers, bankers and agents, of every description seemed highly amused at the new restriction. In one much frequented house a score of "cherry cocktails" were prepared a full half hour before the hour when they can lawfully be served. Ordinarily full, the buffet was empty ten minutes before noon. Then two men, a stock jobber and a friend, walked in. They asked for two glasses of beer each and were politely requested to wait till the clock struck the hour. "Hope deferred gives added pleasure to the draught," was the comment when at length they were permitted to quench their thirsts. Five minutes later the bar was besieged. There was a consensus freely expressed that the new regulations were abused, unnecessary and irritating, but the customers all the same laughed and joked at their own discomfiture.

Not Yet Understood.

"We have had the busiest time of our lives," said the manager of a house off Leadenhall street. "From noon till half-past two we have been serving out drinks as fast as we could. Many regular customers, too, seem now to prefer a 'snack' at the counter instead of a 'sitting down' luncheon. In this way they are able to take their accustomed allowance of alcholic beverage."

But the new regulations are not yet fully understood. Some men insist that they can be served with drink so long as they eat a meal of bread and cheese, or sandwiches. One city man emptied some whisky from a bottle he carried into soda water and was amazed when the publican declared that he could not consume the mixture on the premises.

As in the "dry" States of America the restrictive regulations have considerably augmented the revenue of druggists who sell "pick-me-ups." One druggist in the City, who makes a specialty of these, had "sold out" by ten o'clock in the morning—an unprecedented sale.

Strangely enough a section of the public appeared to hold the licensee responsible for the curtailment of the facilities to obtain refreshments. When it was explained that it was against their desire they were blamed for "putting up with it."

"Why don't you defy them?" was frequently asked; but the licensee was too busy during the brief business interval—for that is all it is now—to argue or give explanations to anybody. During the teetotal hours, however, it was a relief to have some one to talk to, and then the special greviances of the City were gone into—the huge number of feed daily and the impossibility of doing it in the restricted hours, the different conditions of the "square mile" to any other locality in the world, the teetotal Board of Control that had made the order, under pressure of Mr. Lloyd George; the unfairness of the designed blow at "the trade" during war time—all these and many more grievances were discussed over coffee, tea or mineral waters.

The Big Grumbles.

It was in the West End cafes during the afternoon that the most real grumbles were heard. These cafes, frequented by foreigners who like to sit and sip their absinthe all the afternoon or to dally with a drink for a couple of hours between lunch and dinner time, were noticeably empty and the waiters correspondingly depressed.

At the clubs men seemed to take the regulations more in a humorous spirit. To them the prospect of being unable to get a drink until half-past six in the evening appealed as the greatest hardship, for so many men look in at their clubs for the first drink of the day on their way home from business.

But the concession of an additional half hour both at luncheon and dinner time in which intoxicating liquor previously ordered can be consumed has been hailed with much satisfaction by restaurant and hotel proprietors in the West End. As far as luncheon is concerned the Londoner, with his customary, adaptability will no doubt soon accustom himself to a regulation that only requires that he shall drink his glass of wine or beer on a week day within the same time as on Sunday—by three o'clock. The concession of half an hour at night, of course, leaves matters as they have been for months past in regard to evening meals, as one can still enter a restaurant a few minutes before half-past nine and order alcoholic refreshment provided it accompanies a meal.

Though the increased restrictions can scarcely fail to have a serious effect on many West End establishments, Mr. G. Reeves-Smith, managing director of the Savoy, Claridge's and the Berkley hotels, said: "I do not think it is going to do us much harm, though it may to others. We shall know in a few days." Mr Reeves-Smith, who is also vice chairman of the Incorporated Association of Hotels and Restaurants, indicated one effect of the order in regard to credit which is little realized. No credit may now be given to customers at restaurants, as all liquor must be paid for when supplied or at the end of a meal.

Credit a Consideration.

In view of Mr. Reeves-Smith's statement that this practice had grown so rapidly in recent years that one company alone has about two thousand customers who have received credit for meals in restaurants and cafes, it will be seen that this is a serious consideration in the West Ends, where bills frequently run on for three months.

It is the working class who are taking the matter most jocularly and are most active in evading the order, and some humorous incidents are told by Mr. J. T. Terrett, secretary of the London Trade Union Protest Committee. "The new order," he said, "is regarded at Smithfield Market as a joke. The busy time in the market is over by nine o'clock in the morning, and a large number of people seem to have occupied the next three hours in devising ways of evading the order."

The licensed places were open all day for the sale of coffee and so forth. Four men walked into a public house, one of whom put a £1 ($5) note on the counter, and each man took a bottle of whisky and walked out.

Another instance was that in which a party of men went into a small beer house in prohibited hours. They held the landlord down on the counter while one drew pints of ale for the party. It was useless for the landlord to protest or to threaten to call the police. The men left the price of the ale on the counter and departed, laughing.

The regulations regarding the sale of spirits were being disobeyed in every direction, said Mr. Tirrett. Working men will not be tied down to buying not less than a quart bottle of spirits to be consumed off the premises. They bring flasks with them, and as they are able to order what they want at meals they transfer all they want to the flasks to carry home with them.

At the docks there is a distinct movement to "down tools" till the order is withdrawn as far as they are concerned. It is purely a rank and file movement and promises to alienate the men from the officials. It is asserted on all hands that their leaders will have "nobbled" and that the men will decide the question for themselves.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hossberger, 19 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous [illegible] developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

"FATHER JOFFRE."

Wythe Williams, in New York Times.

——"A man detaches himself from the line of trees behind the group and comes plowing his way across the mud. He is large and bulky. He plants his feet firmly at each step, splashing the mud out in all directions. He wears a short jacket of the 'horizon blue' and no overcoat. He wears the old red trousers of the beginning of the war. His hat, around which you can see the golden band of oak leaves signifying that he is a general, is pulled low over his eyes. Drops of rain are on his grizzled moustache. A leather belt is about his powerful body, but he wears no sword.

"Langle de Cary and his officers whirl about quickly at his approach. Every hand is raised in salute. The bulky man touches the visor of his cap in response, then plants both his large ungloved fists upon his hips. His feet are spread slightly apart. He speaks to de Cary in a low voice. As you have already guessed, this big man is Joffre. You were told at the beginning of the war that Joffre was a little fat man—like Napoleon. He is even a tall man, but does not give such an impression because of his bulk. Few men possess at his age such a powerful or so healthy a body. That is why he can cover so many miles of battle front in his racing auto every day. That is why he shows not the slightest sign of the wear and tear of war.

"As the men passed this general, without a sword, with no medals, no gold braid, no overcoat, and in old red trousers, the rain pelting upon him, the look on their faces was one of adoration. It mattered not to them that there were no cheering crowds, no crashing bands, no gala atmosphere. The one eye in France that they cared about was upon them. It was enough . . . . The private now to receive the medal was brought before the Commander-in-chief, who pinned it upon his breast. Then came the only sign of emotion he exhibited through the entire proceedings. He threw both his great arms, about the private's shoulders and kissed him on both cheeks. The long line of soldiers remained perfectly quiet. But in the eyes of many of them were tears.

To clean a gas oven place a little vinegar in one saucer and a handful of common salt in another. Dip a piece of flannel into the vinegar, then into the salt, and rub the sides of the oven. This should be done when the oven is warm, not hot, and it will clean it admirably.

Just Suits My Needs Building Up the System

This is the Way Thousands of Women Are Speaking of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy, and vigour — all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This season has seen the box pleat given unusual prominence. It has found its way into the frocks of children quite as much as into those of older women.

The long line is becoming to the childish figure and adds much to the general effect.

In the dress shown in the accompanying illustration we have a simple sacque frock with a narrow box pleat at each side of both front and back. The closing of the dress is in the centre of the back. The neck is high, finished with a flat collar of small size. This may be made detachable so that white collars may be worn, or it may be permanent. At the waistline there is a narrow belt, which passes through slashes under each box pleat and fastens either in front or back.

The sleeves are plain at the shoulder, but widen a little below the elbow, ending at the wrist in a turnback cuff.

As this frock is intended for very little people wash materials may be used for it regardless of the season. It will look very well in white linen or piqué and also in poplin, velveteen or plaid silk.

The dress pattern, No. 7,422, is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Medium size requires 2⅛ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A VICTORY FOR THE BRITISH FORCES IN MESOPOTAMIA

Turks Are Repulsed With Heavy Losses in Attack on the British Base it is Officially Announced---British Liner Sunk by a Mine off Russian Harbour---Bulgarian Campaign at an End According to Some Reports

SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Turkish forces were defeated with heavy losses and driven back in an attack on the British Mesopotamian base of Kutel Amara Saturday, according to official despatches received here to-day.

Gen. Townsend reported the Turkish losses totalled between six hundred and eight hundred. British lost less than 200 he said.

Special Cable:

LONDON, Dec. 27.—While German soldiers on one side, and French and British on the other, attended in thousands the Christmas services, held in half ruined cathedrals on either side of the battle lines, their artillery was thundering its dead missles, east and west, north and south, along the entire line, one one of the deadliest duels of the whole war.

This much is gathered from official statements to-day from Berlin and Paris. Although no ground was gained apparently, by either side, Berlin admits that the Allies' artillery did terrific damage among the steel and cement breastworks on their side of the line.

This artillery action continued all day Sunday, and is still in progress to-day. The Germans evidently are unable to repair their works, and fear an attack in force by the Allies at any time.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 27.—Several thousand rebellious Persian Gendarmes, led by Turkish and German officers, were defeated by Russian troops midway between Teheran and Hamadan, it was officially announced to-day. The Persians were well armed with field artillery and machine guns.

"On the Riga front we silenced German batteries," said the War Office. "South of Ikscal the Germans used gas in an attack. On the Dvinsk front the enemy attempted an offensive, but was driven back."

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The British steamer Hadley, 2,000 tons, was sunk by a submarine. The crew was rescued.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—King Peter, of Serbia, has arrived in Italy aboard the Italian warship. He plans to visit Rome and then go to the Royal Villa at Caserta.

The King had to be carried from the ship in an arm chair, according to a press despatch. He told the correspondents that he had turned the authority over to Crown Prince Alexander.

If his physicians permit, he will go to Salonika to confer with the Serbian Minister of War.

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 27.—"With our batteries of heavy artillery and men behind them, it is impossible to oust the Allied forces from Salonika," said General Castlenau, Chief of the French General Staff, in a statement to-day to the Associated Press. General Castleneu gave an interview after being received this morning by King Constantine and attending a luncheon at the French Legation.

"The situation at Salonika to-day is most excellent," the General continued. "I spent several days examining ground. I have rarely seen an emplacement which lends itself better to defence."

The General was asked whether the Allies contemplated an offensive from Salonika in the spring.

"Spring will tell," he replied.

Should it be decided upon, the offensive from Salonika would be made under peculiarly favourable conditions.

ATHENS, Dec. 27.—The Bulgarian Premier has assured the Agrarian party that the Bulgarian campaign in the Balkans has ended, according to Bulgarian newspapers received here to-day. Premier Radoslavoff declared that the Bulgars will hold their positions on the Serbo-Greek frontier.

MESSAGE OF BOUNDLESS LOVE AND UNSWERVING FAITH FROM THE MEN AT THE FRONT

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—General Sir Sam Hughes has received the following despatch from Sir Max Aitken, from the Canadians in the trenches to the loved ones at home:

"The message from the Flemish trenches to the homes of Canada at this season of traditional peace and goodwill is a matter of deeds rather than of words. Words are used, 'tis true—in private letters—words of encouragement, of love and of hope; but how inadequate are the fondest words of the Canadian soldiers to express such love and faith and sacrifice as their deeds disclose. Let Canada know that her soldiers here on the gassed and pitted frontier of war have unshaken faith in the ultimate victory of right over wrong, of life over death. By their cheerfulness in danger and discomfort, by their devotion to the perilous duties of grey days and desolate flare-illumined nights, their loved ones in their beloved country across the sea may read their high confidence in their cause, in their leaders, in their brothers-in-arms, and in the final success, from the front line trench where the fire of the German machine gun snaps along the grey and sodden parapet.

"Your men send you their message of good cheer, hearts undismayed by peril, pain and loneliness, yea, and by death bid you strengthen your hearts. From low dugouts in fields scarred by shell fire, from narrow saps behind bullet-torn hedges, from scattered farmsteads and uneasy rest camps goes out to you the message of boundless love and of unwavering faith.

"Christmas Day, 1915."

The following Christmas message was received by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught from the Canadian troops at the front: "Beg to offer heartiest Christmas greetings to Canada and our homes. (Signed) D.O.C., Canadian Corps."

The Governor-General's reply was: "Canada warmly reciprocates good wishes to her forces serving at the font. The Dominion is proud of her sons. (Signed) Arthur."

From Officers on Battlefield.

The following greetings have been received by General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, from officers commanding the Canadians in France and in England:

From Lieutenant-General Alderson, commandant of the Canadian corps: "Heartiest Christmas greetings to comrades in Canada from all ranks of the Canadians at the front."

From Brigadier-General E. W. B. Morrison, D.S.O., commanding the 2nd Divisional Artillery: "Officers and men of the 2nd Artillery Division send season's greetings. We are making good scores on the Salisbury Plain ranges."

From Brigadier-General Dave Watson, of the 5th Infantry Brigade, 2nd Division: "From the trenches to-day the same spirit, the same determination and the same good wishes to Sir Robert Borden and yourself."

From Sir Max Aitken: "At the wish of the Canadian forces in France I send you and yours our Christmas wishes and we earnestly hope you will join us in 1916."

Major-General Carson also sent good wishes on behalf of the troops in England.

LAY ON BATTLE-FIELD, WOUNDED, ALMOST A WEEK

Lance-Corp. Fred Long, Exchanged Prisoner, Writes to His Mother ---Has Right Leg Amputated Below the Knee

IS NOW IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Geo. Long, George street, has received a letter from her son, Lance-Corp. Fred Long, who was wounded and taken prisoner at St. Julien. Lance-Corp. Long was recently exchanged, and is now at Millbank Hospital, London. He writes as follows:

Dear Mother,—Am worried about you all, as I have only had your one postcard and package since I was wounded. How in the world are you all getting on. I hope you got my other letters.

My right leg had to be amputated. When it was hit, it broke in two places, and I laid on the field for six days with no bandage or anything, so I guess it got poisoned. But never mind, cheer up, we're winning. I had very good treatment in hospitals in Belgium and Germany. I came back to England on the latest exchange through Holland. Am now in hospital here and having a fine time. Have to have a slight operation on my left heel, as I was shot there also, and pieces of bullet are still in the heel. Was also shot in the stomach. When I am well enough I have to go to another hospital to have an artificial leg, which I understand are excellent. In the meantime it is automobile drives, tea parties, theatres and everything else every day here, so our time is well occupied. I hear I was reported killed in the papers. I suppose that worried you.

I see there is quite an army from Canada now. Good luck to them all. They are needed. One sees plenty of fellows in England with amputated arms and legs. Mine is off a little below the knee.

I can't think of anything more to tell you now. Wait till I get home. I don't suppose that will be for some time, but would be glad if it was soon. Hope you all have a happy Christmas. Write very soon as I am anxious at not hearing from any of you.

FRED.

CAPT. ARNOTT HOME AGAIN

Was Through Festubert and Had Five Months at the Front —Laid Up by an Operation and is Home For Duty

INSTRUCTION WORK IN WEST

The homecoming of Captain T. C. L. Arnott, of the Strathcona Horse, fortuitously synchronized with the Christmas season for his own and the pleasure of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arnott, 208 Rubidge St. He arrived in Peterborough on Friday evening, having been through Festubert and other minor actions at the front. He came out towards the end of September for an operation for appendicitis, and developed gastritis while he was recovering. As a result, his wound was reopened and his convalesence delayed. He has not completely recovered yet, having come directly from an hospital. However, Capt. Arnott leaves to-morrow for Winnipeg, where he will be indefinitely attached for instruction work in the West.

Capt. Arnott is one of the Collegiate boys who a few years before the war took the R.M.C. course, little realizing the opportunities the future was developing for them. With the Strathcona Horse he went into action in May, marching directly into the engagement at Festubert. It was pitch dark as they went into the trenches, and of course the great majority of the men had no idea where they were or where they were going. Capt. Arnott remarked that as he was proceeding he found the earth growing spongy underfoot, and the peculiar sensation resulted in an examination revealing the fact that they were walking on bodies barely hidden by a thin layer of earth.

The members of the Strathcona Horse went in as infantry, tramping and lugging packs, instead of having the expected mounts. Capt. Arnott spoke of having met "Doc" Greer, "Pete" Campbell, Art Ackerman and a few other Peterborough boys. The English Tommy is wonderful in the eyes of Capt. Arnott. He walks blithely in to the trenches singing and joking. He loses a pal and is in deep gloom for an hour or two; then his character reasserts itself and he is himself again, as if nothing had happened.

Capt. Arnott is the second of Peterborough's young officers to return home, Capt. Ackerman being the other. Whenever his present instructional work is completed he expects to return to the front.

SOLDIERS HAD A REAL CHRISTMAS DINNER ON SATURDAY

Turkey and Plum Padding the Big Features in a Holiday Bill-of-Fare---Christmas Greetings Received From Peterboro Men Overseas---Little Drill For Men of 93rd. To-Day---To-Day's Military News

Although the majority of the members of the 93rd Battalion enjoyed their Christmas dinner at their own homes, they did not fare much better than the remainder of the battalion who partook of the Yuletide bill of fare at the armouries. The government, by means of an additional grant of 25c. per man for extra rations on Christmas Day, had made it possible to provide a sumptuous repast.

Sergt. Cooke Wride and his staff, were at work in the kitchen from 5.30 a.m., but they got their reward for the long morning's work in the manner in which their efforts were received. Here was the Christmas dinner menu:

Roast turkey with dressing.
Cranberry sauce.
Boiled potatoes.
Boiled carrots.
English plum pudding with white sauce.
Bread and butter.
Tea.
Oranges.
Apples.

And there were vast quantities of everything. Each man's plate was heaped high with turkey vegetables, cranberry sauce, etc., and when he had got on the outside of that there was a small island of plum pudding surrounded by a lake of sauce waiting him. Grab it and run. There's lots more where this came from," one of the cooks would say when a private would hesitate in front of the plates of pudding. "I only hope the boys in the trenches are getting as good a meal to-day," remarked another as he ladled the savoury sauce over the pudding.

Owing to the absence of so many men, the khaki lads did not dine at their respective platoon tables, but all gathered together at two tables, while the few sergeants who were on hand forsook the sergeants' mess and had dinner with the men.

A smile ran around the tables when the orderly officer for the day, Lieut. Stevenson, made the usual inquiry in regard to complaints. The only complaint Saturday was a difficulty in finding stowage room for all the good things on the bill-of-fare.

When the piles of oranges and apples had disappeared the men shook the rafters with cheers for the cooks.

The canteen at the armouries has been moved from C company room to the former stores room of the 57th Regiment. Sergt. Mackin has splendid quarters now, a long counter having been installed, while shelves at the rear give him an opportunity to display to best advantage the many good things on sale in the canteen.

All the Peterborough members of the 50th Band, including Bandmaster Perver and Band Sergeant George Chambers, were home for Christmas.

The manner in which Peterborough boys have responded to the Empire's call has been shown in the past few days by the number of boys in khaki home on Christmas leave. From Ottawa, Montreal, Kingston, Brockville, Belleville, Cobourg, Toronto, Hamilton, London, from as far west as Winnipeg and Calgary, Peterborough's sons in the Canadian army are home. The numbers of many Canadian battalions could be seen on the streets yesterday.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Mr. Alderman Stratton is to be, and is, congratulated on having his title and office made continuous without a contest. He was elected by acclamation for No. 2 Ward, a strong tribute to the services he has given the ratepayers for two years past. During his last year he occupied a difficult and prominent position, one that invited criticism, but he has given every satisfaction as Chairman of the Finance Committee, a record that is due to his business ability, knowledge of financial matters, and attention to its duties. He has been affable and considerate in relation to his fellow members and one of the factors in harmonious council work. He has not only thus commended himself to their respect and good will, but has, by his work, won the confidence of his constituents in the most enlightened, advanced, and important ward of the city.

AN EXCITING CONTEST.

We are to have this year one of the most exciting and interesting mayoralty contests in the life of the city. Three candidates were nominated this morning, and the circumstances prevent making any reliable forecast of the outcome. When three well-known candidates—all good men—are in the contest the voting will be so complicated and divided that it would take a pretty shrewd judge to name the winner. Mr. Duffus comes to the contest with six years' municipal experience, and a good business capacity. Mr. Green has had three years in the Council, and during last year he has occupied the important portfolio of the chairman of the Board of Work, and has given much attention to the discharge of his duties. Mr. Hartley has had aldermanic experience also; and during the interval since he occupied a place in the Council board, he has kept in touch with civic affairs, through his close relations with one of the most important elements of the electorate and civic life. The problem is left with the ratepayers, who as a whole, will no doubt cast their votes with a good deal of uncertainty of feeling as to its value—every vote cast has two chances of being killed. However, come what personal result may come, the city will be certain of having a good mayor next year, and a possibility of having a better or the best man.

SOMETHING SURE TO VOTE FOR.

This morning three candidates for the mayoralty nominated, and a grist of oldermanic candidates, together with a big batch of trustees, put the average elector into a quandry as to how he will dispose of this abundance of candidates on election day. He may know little of many of the aspirants for office. There is no opportunity to make inquiry to help satisfy him as to how to cast his vote, so that to a large degree he may or may not make a mistake in voting at random for the candidates he is entitled to elect.

But there is one vote he can cast with full confidence, being perfectly sure he is doing the right and wise thing. On January 3rd, in addition to the aldermanic and other candidates, he will have the opportunity and privilege of voting for the by-law to raise $30,000 to purchase the present exhibition grounds. The elector can make no mistake in voting for this by-law; that is, if it is held to be desirable that we should have an exhibition in Peterborough.

The lease of the present grounds expires next year. The option to purchase also expires next year, and unless it is taken up and the grounds purchased, the Exhibition will have no home.

The option gives the society a chance to purchase the grounds at a 1,000 dollars an acre for the thirty acres. The Society cannot finance the purchase, and it would not be wise to do so if it could. It wants the grounds for only a week or, perhaps, two weeks in the year, and an expenditure of $30,000 for this purpose would be unwise.

An arrangement has been proposed by which the purchase of the grounds can be dealt with in the interests of the society, and very much in the interest of the city. The city is to raise $30,000 by by-law, and use the option to purchase the property—the city to own the property, and allow the Society the use of it for the time required for exhibition purposes, is the way the proposal practically works out.

This splendid piece of centrally situated property is well worth the purchase price, on the grounds of absolute land value only.

And it will be a good investment for the city in other ways.

Under the present tenure the society cannot go ahead and erect buildings suitable for a first-class exhibition. If the city became owner of the property and guarantees the use of it to the society, the latter can erect suitable buildings and improvements, and provides the possibility of a first class exhibition that will not only be a credit to the good name and enterprise of the city, but be worth thousands of dollars a year to Peterborough in the way of promoting business. The presence of thousands of visitors in the city for two, three or five or six days, must mean the leaving of a large amount of money in circulation to the advantage of every citizen.

As things are now, with the ramshackle, old buildings, we can only expect to have an inferior exhibition, and the city, to receive comparatively few visitors and little advantage.

Even with the present exhibition the City Council considers it worth making an annual grant of $600 per year.

If the city owned the grounds and the society having put up permanent buildings and improved the grounds and provided elegant inclosures, it would help us to have a first-class exhibition, for we are the centre of a splendid district. Peterborough, with proper grounds and buildings, could have the best and largest exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa. We could have one that would last five or six days, instead of two or three days. We could fill the city with visitors for days to the greatest business profit of our merchants and business men, and above all, for the good name of Peterborough for enterprise and public spirit. Peterborough would then, be praised instead of pitied for her annual exhibition.

Any one who takes the trouble to think can easily work out a striking statement of the money value to the city of thousands of visitors in the city for two or three days or a week.

If we think a practically one-day show worth $400 a year—the interest at 6 per cent. on $10,000—why not put a little more to that and buy the grounds outright, and secure an exhibition that would be worth to us many times $600 a year?

We would own a splendid thirty acre park that would be ours in fee simple—ours to use fifty-one or so weeks in the year, and allow the Society its use for one or two weeks. The money this improved exhibition would bring to the city would be excellent interest on the investment, while we should have the use of the grounds for a recreation park.

It would be a fine property for the purpose. The society would erect suitable buildings and surround the park with an elegant iron or steel grill and concrete fence with an elaborate main gate. A few trees planted and other improvements made would give a fine recreation park.

We have no free recreation park any where in the south part of the city, and we need more open space. We cannot continue to be a healthy city if we build up all our open spaces. There is a clamour for playgrounds for our children—here is a chance to provide for the service of a large and growing district in addition to suburbs to be soon added to the city.

We should then have a magnificent thirty acre park in the heart of the city that, once paid for, would be a source of revenue; for the Society would pay back to the city from $1000 to $1,500 a year, of its surplus, and the city would have the name, as well as the game—the business profits—of a first-class exhibition.

The electors are invited to think the matter over, and by voting for the by-law, give Peterborough the finest unoccupied property in the city in one block, and also give us promise of an exhibition that will be a credit and profit to the city.

and their self-sacrifice will, under God's guidance, lead to victory and an honourable peace. There are many of their comrades alas now in hospital, and to these brave men also I desire with the Queen to express our deepest gratitude and our earnest prayers for their recovery. Officers and men of the navy and of the army, another year is drawing to a close, as it began, in toil, bloodshed and suffering, but I rejoice to know that the goal to which you are striving draws nearer into sight. May God bless you and all your undertakings.

Keith G. Lech, Captain,
Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

A cable received from Lieut. F. W. Morris, of the 9th Battery, C.F.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morris, this city, intimated that he was spending Christmas in England on leave from the front.

Interest in recruiting for the 93rd Battalion is on the increase, as each week passes. The latest centre to catch the fever is the northern outpost, Apsley, which is undertaking to raise at least a half-platoon for the 93rd. Twelve recruits have passed the medical examination already, and at least that many more are expected in the next few days. On Wednesday of this week a big recruiting meeting under the auspices of the Reeve and Council, is being held. The recruits will be kept in Apsley for some time, and drilled there, and an officer from the 93rd will be sent out to take charge of the men who will be supplied with uniforms from here.

Eight recruits were equipped with uniforms at the armouries this morning—a very good start for the week.

With so many men on leave and on guard work there was little drill for the remainder of the 93rd to-day. A composite platoon carried on some drill this afternoon, while Sergt.-Major Calladine put the recruit class through their paces.

Sergt.-Major Oxley of the 139th Battalion, Cobourg and formerly of the 93rd, was home on Christmas leave.

Capt. V. Lancaster, of Peterborough, who is one of the officers of the 109th Lindsay Battalion, was home for Christmas.

Bandmaster Knipper of the 70th Battalion Band, London, and formerly of the 57th Retg. Band, spent Christmas in Peterborough.

Len Dobson, the former travelling secretary of the Peterborough Canadian League Club, and well known as a hockey player and referee, is one of the khaki clad Peterborough boys home for Christmas. He is a member of the Canadian Engineers, in training at Ottawa. Signaller Jack Cameron, another Peterborough boy with the same unit, also was home for Christmas.

The Examiner received an interesting Christmas remembrance on Friday in the shape of a bunch of holly and mistletoe sent to this paper by Lieut. W. H. Blanchard of Peterborough, who is with No. 1 Veterinary Hospital, B.E.F. in France.

The Ketcheson family of Hastings county are presenting colours to the 80th battalion. The colours are being made and will soon be presented to the battalion.

The band of the 80th battalion is now nearly 40 strong and still they are after more. The band gave a concert in Belleville last Sunday evening that made everybody sit up and listen.—Kingston Standard.

The following letter was received this week by Mrs. W. J. Webster of Lakefield, from her son, Pte. W. Webster of the 21st Battalion:

Somewhere in Belgium,
Dec. 2nd, 1915.

Dear Mother,—I received your welcome letter on Nov. 28th, and also a card and letter from Minnie, and was certainly glad to hear from you. We are all in good health here. I have not seen Dudley since we left billets but hope to see him when we get relieved. I was reading the letters in the paper from Dudley and Dick Hill where they mention about our narrow escapes. Well, that was nothing to what happened to me shortly after I was sniping one day with a periscope rifle when an explosive shell struck the stock of the rifle and splintered it to pieces. That was a close shave. But we all have narrow escapes from the German "whizz bangs." They are a shrapnel shell that gives you no warning until it bursts. Some of the German shrapnel shells are filled with old scrap iron broken up into pieces about the size of peanuts and give you a nasty wound.

I expect I will be with Laurel for Christmas if nothing happens before that time. We are now in the reserves doing a week's general fatigue. We are supposed to be sleeping this afternoon so that we can dig trenches to-night. If I receive all the parcels that are being sent to me I will have a swell Christmas. I must ring off now, with love to all.

Your loving son,
WILBERT.

From Peterborough's khaki-clad representatives, overseas, have come in the past few days, some appreciated Christmas souvenirs to the Examiner. Beautiful Christmas cards have been received among others from Major S. T. Medd, Lieut. Harry G. Rogers and Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, Branshott Camp Harts, Eng., and Major A. G. Carruthers and Capt. C. Ross Cameron, of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., West Sandling Camp, Kent, Eng.

Saturday marked a double celebration for Sergt. J. Mackin of the 93rd Battalion, as it, in addition to it being Christmas, the twenty-fifth (silver) anniversary of Sergt. Mackin's wedding was joyously celebrated. A large number of guests were present and the occasion was a very happy one.

Capt. K. G. Lech, O.C. B Company of the 93rd Battalion, is acting adjutant in the absence of Lieut. C. R. Widdifield.

Although little recruiting was looked for for a day or two following Christmas, the strength of the 93rd Battalion was increased by half a dozen men this morning, a number of recruits presenting themselves for examination to-day.

NAME PLATE AND KNOCKER

The First Has Vanished, the Latter Is Returning.

The name plate which every first family used to consider an absolute necessity on the front door, has become obsolete. Once in a while you see one on some very conservative door, where the house has been in the family longer than is usual in restless America. But as a rule they are gone, and it is no longer a familiar sight to see the housemaid giving them a polish the first thing in the morning.

The pull-out bell has vanished with the doorplate. Very seldom are these seen any longer. We cling to one for old association sake, but the younger generation of messenger boys and errand girls do not know how to use them. Always having "pressed the button," they attack these old fashioned bells the same way.

But while these articles the plate and the bell have gone out, the door knocker has come back, more as an ornament than for use. Who could imagine the postman giving three quick taps and a long one to announce his coming, as they do in England? But they look well on doors, and architects are advising them. A writer in the "American Architect" said recently:

"This utilitarian feature of every country house, and, in fact, at one time of most every type of building, has developed from one of necessity or convenience through various stages to a distinctive ornamental feature. It has been constructed of various metals or combinations of metals, and has received at the hands of artist craftsmen the highest artistic expression. In fact, at those periods where articles of everyday use—the andirons, the firetongs, shovel and bellows, to cite the most familiar examples—were being worth an iron in the most skillful and artistic manner, the door knocker also received its share of attention and became an important feature of the entrance to every house. The ironworker created the most beautiful of examples, and under the impact of intelligently directed hammer strokes there were evolved knockers that, when their usefulness had ceased found an honorable resting place, as unusual examples of design in craftsmanship in many museums.

Some of the houses of Greece and Rome had door knockers, but the customary way for rousing the inmates at night was to pound on the door with the knuckles or with some hard object. The old churches of England had door knockers, and as churches furnished a refuge for many kinds of men, these knockers were called "sanctuary knockers." The knockers came to be used on nearly all English homes, and it was introduced into the United States very early in period of colonial settlement.

The modern knocker and the imitation colonial knocker are now considered with such favor by home builders and house owners that knockers of many patterns are turned out in great numbers by hardware manufacturers.

Weighing Words.
An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."
Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FROM DREAM TO REALITY.

[Original.]

Once upon a time a family, consisting of a young man, his wife and two little children, lived in a cabin near a pottery in England. The wife did the cooking, took care of the home and the children, while the husband worked in the pottery. Edmond Spier was not a very good workman. He was rather inclined to study processes for saving labor or of producing new and useful articles.

His wife, who was a practical woman, had to bear her share of her husband's handicap. She often argued with him as to the futility of dreaming about new processes none of which he had the ability to invent and being thus drawn from hard work which might advance his wages and render the family more comfortable. But it is impossible to change people's dispositions, and Molly Spier at last gave up trying to change that of her husband.

Meanwhile there was no addition to the comforts of the home. The inside was no better, the furniture was getting more shabby, and the children were ragged. What with the cooking, the housework and the patching of clothes Molly Spier was having a hard time of it. But with all her practicability her amiable disposition could no more be changed than could her husband's proclivity to dream. But one day Edmond came home from the factory with a burning fever on him, and it was evident that he was in for a protracted illness.

There were no unions in those days to take care of a man when he was ill, and the Spier family suffered greatly. Molly Spier got odd jobs to do, which helped to keep them from starving. Edmond applied to his employer for help. The pottery owner was a cold, calculating business man and replied that if he began to pay wages to one of his men while ill he would end in having to pay all under similar circumstances. This killed all hope of obtaining anything from that direction.

One day Molly spent what money she had on hand for some fresh pork. Having bought more of it than she could use in a short time because it was cheap, she determined to cure a part of it. Putting some salt in a common cooking vessel such as was used in those days, an unglazed porous affair, she filled it with water and set it on the stove to heat. Then she went out to attend to another matter.

Edmond, who was now convalescent, was in the only other room in the cabin spending his time, as usual, day dreaming. He began by inventing in imagination a vessel hard glazed like glass, a substance that no water could penetrate and neither heat nor cold crack. Having invented this imaginary vessel, he proceeded to sell his invention for a fabulous sum, build a house, dress his wife in silks and satins and the children in equally fine apparel. He heard something sizzling in the kitchen, and it occurred to him that he should go in there and see what was wrong and correct it. But at that moment he was figuring up his fortune, and the matter passed out of his mind.

He was still dreaming when he heard Molly go into the kitchen and utter an exclamation of impatience. Then she came into where Edmond was lying, holding an empty saucepan, and for once since his illness lost her equanimity.

"All the salt I had is gone," she said. "I put it on a hot fire with water, which boiled over. Besides, just look at the saucepan. There's something on the outside that won't be rubbed off. The pan is spoiled for looks if not for use. I do think you might have gone into the kitchen and prevented the damage."

Edmond took the saucepan in his hand and examined it. Where the salt and water had boiled over the vessel was glazed. He scratched it with his nail without effect. He took out his pocketknife and tried to scrape it off, all to no purpose.

"Molly," he said, "you've made us rich."

She turned away with an expression of impatience. He got up and hid the saucepan under the bedclothes. Then, with a step so strong that his wife looked at him with amazement, he went out and bought on credit a bag of salt. Before he went to bed that night he had roughly glazed every cooking vessel in the cabin.

The next day he broke up one of the vessels and took a piece to the owner of the pottery. "How did you do it?" asked the potter. "That's my secret," Edmond replied. "What do you want for your secret?" "A third interest in your pottery."

Time passed, during which the potter submitted the glazing to scientists, offering a large sum to any one who would tell him how it had been effected. But none of them could tell. Only Edmond and Molly Spier knew, and Molly proved that a woman can keep a secret. Besides, Edmond convinced her of its value. Weeks passed, during which hunger still made its abode in their cabin. Edmond was offered a large sum for his secret. He declined. Then he was offered a quarter interest in the pottery. But he held firm, and Molly at last caught the infection of his confidence till his terms were complied with on condition that it prove practicable and not too expensive.

The dreamer's dream was realized. Only he had nothing to do with the invention. It was Molly's. From a cabin the Spier family removed to a commodious dwelling and afterward to a palace. Molly Spier was indeed dressed in silk and satins, and the children were brought up in luxury.

Belgian Relief Committee Sees that Every Donation to Belgians is Free From Seizure

"The needs of the people are so great," says the Washington (D.C.) Post, speaking of conditions in Belgium, "that intense suffering and death by exposure is certain to occur unless greater consignments of relief are forwarded. Children are barefooted, the aged are thinly clad, and women are carrying the double burden of maintaining homes and working for the food that is provided through the commission. Every person able to work is reqired to earn his living, but about 8,000,000 persons are dependent upon the commission for food and clothing."

These conditions, described in mild terms when the truth of the situation is known, picture a portion of the obligation that is Canada's in the present war. England has given generously towards the support of these millions of starving human being, but Canada is the big producing dominion of the Empire and upon the individual Canadian devolves the necessity of relieving the situation or at least of alleviating the suffering as far as possible.

In Montreal a score of the busiest financial and commercial men in Canada are giving hours of their time and expending their energy towards sending succour to the starving and thinly clad that the Washington Post describes. They are giving of their time and their money, and working without reward with but one thing in mind, that Canada has a debt to pay to Belgium for her part in the early days of the war. These men organized under the name of the Belgian Relief Committee, with offices at 59 St. Peter street, Montreal, are administering the aid that Canada must send, and they are guaranteeing to Canadians the safe delivery of relief to Belgians, and freedom from seizure by the German forces.

The three newspapers of this city, the Times, Review and Examiner, have been authorized to receive subscriptions to this fund, or they may be sent direct to, and cheques made payable to The Treasurer Belgian Relief Fund, 59 St. Peter St., Montreal.

"Look here," said Mr. Fatthedde angrily, "I am not going to stand this sort of thing any longer. That brother of yours called me a fool today, and in public, too." "That's just like Tom," replied his wife. "He's always blurting out family secrets."

Among the new lamps for automobiles is one which sheds its light downward directly upon the ground occupied by a front wheel of a car.

CRISCO
For Frying-For Shortening For Cake Making

"Purity is the watchword that guards the manufacture of Crisco."

It is a wonderful building—that in which Crisco is packed at Hamilton, Canada. From start to finish Crisco never is touched by hand, and never comes into contact with the least bit of dust or dirt.

The vast rooms are walled with glass and flooded by sunlight. All machinery is nickeled or enameled. Piping is of aluminum. The cans which are to be filled with Crisco come new and shining—yet are thoroughly cleaned with powerful vacuum cleaners.

Floors are of terrazzo, kept spotless. Every pillar is white and glistening. Storage boxes and tables are coated with heavy white enamel. Employees are dressed in immaculate white suits which are changed daily.

The very air that enters the factory is passed through hundreds of fine water sprays—so that all dust is washed down into a tank and carried off—while the sweetened, freshened, purified air passes on into the packing room.

TO-DAY----SAINT JOHN, APOSTLE AND EVANGELIST

The Saint to Whom the Parish Church (Anglican) of Peterborough is Dedicated, is Commemorated This Day

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

St. John the Evangelist, is the patron saint of the Parish Church of Peterborough, and on this day is commemorated "the disciple whom Jesus loved." A special interest and reverence is attached to this apostle, for he seems to have been admitted almost more than any other disciple to our Lord's intimacy.

St. John the Evangelist

is usually supposed to have been one of the two sons of Zebedee. In his own gospel, it is conjectured that he is meant by the unnamed companion of Andrew, who from being a follower of John the Baptist, joins the company of Jesus. He is known as the disciple "whom Jesus loved" and (with his brother James) takes a position of the greatest prominence among the disciples.

These two, together with St. Peter, alone were

Witnesses of the Transfiguration;

They were present at the raising of the daughter of Jairus from death; they were the only ones in close touch in the garden of Gethsemane. According to St. Luke, John and Peter were entrusted with the arrangements for the Last Supper. There are many other instances of the close association of our Lord with St. John, e.g., after the Resurrection and the Ascension. A careful study of the Four Gospels will reveal many instances of his close, personal association with our Blessed Lord. Originally St. John was

A Fisherman

Fishing with his father and brother on the Lake of Ganersareth, John being the younger son. History shows that they did not altogether forsake their business calling upon becoming disciples of the Lord. St. John

Escaped Actual Martyrdom,

Yet he was, for all that, made to endure great persecution. Before the Latin Gate, in Rome, he was cast into a cauldron of boiling oil. Not only does tradition tells us that he remained in it for a long time uninjured, but eventually came out of it renewed in health and vigour. This was by order of the Emperor Domitian, in whose presence, as well as the Senate, the sentence was carried out. Domitian however, still persecuted the apostle and banished him to Patmos. This is a lonely island, in the Archipelago, where the apostle was forced to work in the mines herded among criminals.

It was on this island that he experienced the heavenly vision contained in the Apocalypse, or the Revelation of St. John, being the last book in the New Testament.

His Release From Patmos

On the elevation of the Emperor Nerva, following the assassination of Domitian, the Evangelist was released from Patmos. He then returned to Ephesus, where he remained until his death.

There is a tradition extant that in his last days, being unable to walk to church, he was accustomed to be carried there. Then it was that he exhorted his flock in his own memorable words—

"Little children, love one another."

His Death.

Owing to a misapprehension of the Master's words, "this disciple shall never die," a belief came to be entertained by the other apostles that these words were meant literally. As it was St. John not only outlived all his co-workers in the christian apostolate, but died a natural death. It is said that, at the ripe age of ninety-four, he passed away, peacefully, at Ephesus, in the year of our Lord 100, in the reign of the Roman Emperor Trajan. St. John was the only one of the apostles who died a natural death.

St. John in Art.

Early Christian art usually represented St. John with an eagle. This bird is symbolical of the heights to which he rises in the first chapter of his Gospel. About the thirteenth century the Chalice was adopted as his symbol. This has been interpreted in two ways. Firstly, in reference to the Last Supper; and secondly, as connected with a legend, according to which St. John was handed a cup of poisoned wine; on his blessing this the poison rose and left the cup in the form of a serpent.

Partly in reference to the angelic and loving disposition of St. John, and possibly on account of his having been the youngest of the apostles, the evangelist is always represented as a very young man with beautiful features.

A Superstition

In connection with the poisoned wine gave rise to a custom on this day of procuring supplies of hallowed wine which was drunk as well as being mixed with dough in the manufacture of little loaves. It was reckoned that the persons who partook of these were immune against all danger of poison for the ensuing twelve months.

Speaking About The Reliability Of The New Silks

Not all Silks are reliable in weave, colour or dye---as many women have found out, to their loss, after wearing inferior weaves a short time. It is often actual economy to pay a trifle more a yard and get Silks that wear well than to save the difference and have only disappointment instead of service.

Our Silks are so carefully chosen for quality and the manufacturers who supply us must conform so strictly to our high standard that there is absolute safety in buying here.

All the weaves we show can be purchased with our assurance of their being in the height of style.

PETERBOROUGH OFFICERS IN ENGLAND ARE ALL WELL

Major N. H. Sutton, C.A.M.C., Tells of a Visit to East and West Sandling Camps, Where he Met Col. Clegg, Major Carruthers and the Rest

AN INTERESTING LETTER

The Examiner has received the following interesting letter from Major Sutton of Peterborough, who is in England with the C.A.M.C.:

Shorncliffe, Dec. 7th, 1915.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,— I suppose you are still printing letters from the front and near front, and if letters are in any small degree as welcome at home as they are here, it would be a shame not to send one occasionally. I greatly dislike writing letters, and made a chance remark to that effect to my batman just now, as he came in to collect my accountrements for the nightly refurbishing. He casually remarked that it was the same with him, and that he had just a couple of days ago written home, for the first time in months. And the reason for writing was that one of his former officers had met him and was surprised to see him alive, having seen his name in the casualties as killed. Therefore, in case that report was out and later corrected, and his wife and three kiddies unduly worried, he thought he had better write. There's a reason in his case, however; he was invalided from the front after a fall from his horse, when his head struck something hard. He can't concentrate on anything since, and was given "light duty at the base." He knows just when to light my fire, however, just where my chair and writing table best suit me, and how far my slippers should be from the fire to have the proper warmth when I want them, etc., etc.

I had a great day Sunday. Had the day off; so after breakfast took the bus to Hythe, and ascended the hill and hiked to Sandling camp. The morning was fine, for a wonder, and the view from the hill top over the quaint old town, out on the waters of the channel with its myriad craft of all sizes, was something to remember. Inland, and smiling countryside stretched back a few miles to the second terrace of hills, and in the immediate foreground stood a fairly good sample of the many old castles of England. A truly beautiful country this, a magnificent one— well worth fighting for, even if we weren't so well aware that our own beloved land is also in the balance.

Some fifteen minutes' walk brought me to East Sandling camp, where after some diligent rooting around in the mud, I presently found Col. Clegg, who gave me a warm welcome, and an invitation to lunch at the mess—said invitation most promptly accepted. Had quite a chat, learning, among other things, of the very recent arrival of Capt. McPherson's brand new boy at Bromley. We were interrupted by the skirl of the pipes leading homeward the Presbyterian squad which had just been down to kirk at Hythe. Gazing out of the window I beheld at the rear, the rubicund countenance of Veterinary Officer Rogers, wearing a most beatific expression. I was longing to ask him for a resume of the morning's discourse—it must have far excelled any of Pastor's Russels—but the mud was deep and I forbore. Instead I went to the officers' mess annex and put in the remainder of the forenoon, meeting among others, Lieut. Bradburn, formerly of Peterborough. There was also a Major there, who had been an organist in Edmonton I think, and whose complete mastery of the piano was a treat indeed. After a most satisfactory luncheon in their excellently run mess, I set out for West Sandling, reaching there sooner than I expected, by taking a short cut that I spelled out of the directions given me. I soon found the 38th lines and was shown to Major Carruther's room, where I received an astonished welcome, but none the less hearty for that. He is the same Carruthers, and like all the boys, has put on some flesh. Indeed he might be in danger of getting fat, if the cares of his position didn't worry him so. But he is determined to see that the boys are well looked after, or know the reason why; and as he explained to me in vigorous detail, reasons are far to seek in this country—and then sometimes you don't find them.

Practically all of the Peterborough men have gone to the front from the battalion, and the daily rain had by this time come on, so that the only one I saw during the afternoon was Sgt.-Maj. Dodds. He is looking decidedly fit and must have gained about two stone in weight. It was not until dinner that I met Ross Cameron and Billy Eastwood, the Hopinks cousins, of Lindsay, and some of the Belleville officers whom I met last summer Capt. Cameron is about to go to the trenches on a two weeks' "observation." They are sending officers in batches every two weeks, over to France to observe how the show is actually run, so that they will be familiar with the workings when their turn really comes—a really capital idea.

I was sorry to have to depart when train time came—the nights are too black here to attempt any other way of covering the distance—put the rain had stopped, and, for a wonder, I reached my billet, dry— outside I mean. Received a note next morning from Capt. McPherson, announcing the happy event and inviting me up to see him. I accepted by return for next Sunday, but 'twas not to be. That evening I was down in order to open a new medical board in Shorncliffe Military Hospital, with one of the medical officers here, who has the most insatiable appetite for work I ever saw, and as there are some two hundred odd, cases to be boarded, I see a long day's work ahead of us on Sunday. Hope for better luck, week later. Nothing more for the present.

Yours,

N. H. Sutton, Maj. C.A.M.C.

P.S.—May send paper to address as in heading, as promised. Haven't had a scratch from home yet and may not before Christmas. Gets damned lonesome at times here. Good thing there is lots of work. Ross Cameron just got Examiner of 12 and 13 November—day before I got there. Hadn't time to read them that day as didn't know I was on the way. N. H. S.

Judgment Reserved In The School Board Investigation

Judge Huycke Listened to Lawyers' Arguments Until Late Hour Friday Evening—Review of Arguments by the Lawyers

It was well into Christmas Eve when the Board of Education investigation was concluded. About 6:15 p.m. the audience stretched himself, put on his coat and quietly disappeared. The press threw up the sponge leaving Mr. R. R. Hall retouching the picture of Mr. W. H. Hill which Mr. O'Connell had painted with vivid colours and a full brush. Mr. O'Connedd commenced his argument at two o'closk and closed it at four; Mr. Hall had another two hours and a half. Judge Huycke held his ground against the sustined onslaught and in the latter minutes, even, was contending points with Mr. Hall. Mr. Peck brought up the reserves in favour of the members of the Board against whom, he said, nothing had been brought out in evidence.

Judge Huycke reserved judgment, and for a short time will await any communications from citizens respecting the investigation.

Continuing his argument at the Friday afternoon session of the investigation respecting the Board of Education, Mr. D. O'Connell, acting for Mr. G. N. Gordon, based his remarks upon a number of points brought out during the course of the enquiry. "The first point," said Mr. O'Connell, "relates to the appointment of Mr. G. N. Gordon to the Board of Education. It is unnecessary for me to deal with this as no evidence has been adduced to show any irregularities on the part of Mr. Gordon while a member of the Board. The second point deals with and acts which might complicate or conflict with Mr. Gordon's position on the Board. The fact is that Mr. Gordon is a member of the School Board as well as City Solicitor. The scope of the enquiry does not provide for any investigation as to Mr Gordon's conduct while a member of the School Board. With a due sense of appreciation for principle, Mr. Gordon had pblicly denied that he was seeking the position of solicitor for the School Board." At this stage of the argument, Mr. O'Connell browsed among a bale of legal fodder that littered up the table. The first one consulted had the following to say regarding thre equitable rule referring to public serviture, which says, "No man may place himself in a position where his interests will conflict with his duty."

Taking up another volume, Mr. O'Connell read: "It is not necessary eo be a lawyer to be an honest man." "I quite assent to that," added Mr. O'Connell. The latter cited a number of references to persons occupying positions of public trust.

The Trust of a Trustee.

"If there is one class of trustees of that large body of persons having regard to circumstances and consequences of divergence from the strict path of rectitude, that person is a school trustee," said Mr. O'Connell. Continuing, he said: "That is the position of Mr. Hill in this community. Having taken the oath of office and signified his willingness to deal impartially with matters relating to the Board, it became quite clear to Mr. Hill that he could not engage in any business relations with the Board that would result in profit,. In face of the general principles of fact let us see what happened. For over twenty-five years Mr. Hill has been a member of the School Board. It is a long time for a trustee to hold a position and shows the degree of confidence placed in him which is somewhat remarkable under the circumstances. For a nmber of years, Mr. Hill has had business relations with the Board and has derived certain advantages,"

Violated Equitable Principle.

Mr. O'Connell pointed out that Mr. Hill's action in remiting to the Company where the premium was due before the remittance was to hand constituted the assured a debtor to Mr. Hill,. This constituted a direct contract. "There is no doubt," said Mr. O'Connell, "that since Mr. Hill's term of office, there have been numerous cases of direct contract which constituted a violation of the oath of office taken by Mr. Hill. The law points out that it makes no difference whether the profit is large or small,. If constitutes a direct violation of the principle of equity. During the whole of that term, Mr. Hill has taken insurance on school buildings into his own companies. The first time he did this was a violation of his responsibility and interest which he had sworn to protect. It has been said that the Board got as good value with Mr. Hill as they could have obtained elsewhere. That is not the question. The rule is general in scope and makes no allowance for the nature or character of the bargain."

Amount Immaterial.

"The amount of money involved is immaterial. It is too bad that the small amount in this case was sufficient inducement to the trustee to result in a violation of his trusteeship."

Mr O'Connell said one could have understood how a poor and impecunious insurance agent yielding to a similar temptation in a moment of weakness. Such a fall would elicit our sympathy; but what was to be said of a man who has a prosperous busines, one of the most flourishing business in the city, being so grasping and so blind to the principles of honour, honest dealing, and integrity of character that nob in the fact of a great temptation he succombed and fell, but that a mere $23 or $24 a year should be sufficient to lead him away from those principles.

True, Board Had Not Lost.

It was true that the Board had not lost anything, but Mr,. O'Connell indicated how it would be held that Mr. Hill's profits on school buildings belong to the public, and if an action were brought against him he would be compelled to return them to the School Board. Mr. O'Connell emphasized the point that on the evidence Mr. Hill had not disclosed his transactions to the Board. For ten years not a single account had been rendered the Board in his own name.

In the last 28 years never once did it appear that the Board was doing business with Mr. Hill. In all the hundreds of cases when he rendered accounts to customers they were in the name of W. H. Hill. To the Water Commission and Nicholls Hospital Board of which he was a member, accounts were rendered in the same way as to the Board of Education.

"So in all cases where Mr. Hall was sitting as a trustee he adopted a petty mode of deceit and deception in which he represented to those bodies that they were not doing business with him, but only with the companies he represented.

Isn't that significant? What conclusion can anyone adopt? That in his own mind he was doing an act he himself considered reprehensible. What other motive could he have had?

If his associates on the Board knew he was an insurance agent, it was not by any evidence or information he gave the Board. He did all in his power to prevent them knowing it.

Judge Huycke—If they knew, they were partners in his guilt.

His Honour regretted that more evidence had not been produced on this point.

Canvass of Teachers.

If Mr. Hill wanted the insurance of teachers in the city he should not have ben a member of the Board; or if he wanted to be a member of the Board he should not have canvassed teachers either directly or indirectly.

Mr. O'Connell pictured Mr. Hill's men as the tentacles of an octopus spreading over the city and fixing upon teachers. One teacher said he had not left the school when a Sun Life agent approached him. Mr. Hill's was an insidious influence upon teachers approached for insurance, having in mind his position on the Board. The alleged typewriter episode was also dealt with.

Mr. Hall said they were dealing with practical affairs and not Utopian doctrines. There was no evidence that Mr. Hill ever canvassed a teacher in all his 27 years on the Board.

Judge Huycke—It is not allaged by Mr. O'Connell that he did.

Mr. Hall—There is not a single instance of a teacher ever making a complaint of how he or she was canvassed. There is no evidence to show that agents importuned teachers to such an extent that they created a nuisance. There is no evidence that any agent ever used Mr. Hill's name in canvassing teachers.

Mr. Hall went into all the phases of the case, endeavouring to refute Mr. O'Connell's statements, and preshould be vindicated.

senting his arguments why Mr. Hill

R. W. MARKS CO. AT THE GRAND

Greeted With Capacity Houses on Christmas Day—"The Scarlet Band" To-Night

The R. W. Marks Stock Company opened an eight days' engagement at the Grand Opera House on Christmas Day, playing to capacity houses both afternoon and evening. On Christmas night the caste presented "The Thief Girl," a play that was enthusiastically received by the immense audience. The specialties are of a high order and won well-merited applause. Miss May Bell, the leading lady of the production, made a deep impression on her audience, in her clever portrayal of the title role. Miss May Bell is a great favourite in Peterborough, and no doubt will be greeted by big crowds at each performance. To-night the company will give "The Scarlet Band," for the first time ever produced in Peterborough.

Men Of 7th Battalion Have Been Given D. C. O. Medals

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.— Major-General Sir Sam Hughes has received the following communique from the Canadian general representative in France:

General Headquarters of the Canadian Army Corps in France, Dec. 26. —During the period December 17th-22nd the general situation on the front of the Canadian corps has undergone no material change. The weather has been mild. Short spells of fine weather have varied the monotony of heavy rains.

Continual attention has been paid to the drainage of our trenches and repair work on our trenches and defence works. Satisfactory progress has been made in the construction of dug-outs and machine gun emplacements.

The work of our artillery has been confined principally to retaliatory measures and the engagement of targets afforded by the enemy working parties.

On the morning of December 19th the British trenches in the neighbourhood of Ypres were heavily bombarded and subsequently gassed. No infantry attack was delivered by the enemy. Owing to the direction of the wind, the gas fumes were soon perceptible over the area of our second division, and the enemy artillery became exceedingly active on our front. Our artillery retaliated until the enemy fire slackened.

Enemy snipers have displayed increasing activity. Our snipers have accounted for a number of the enemy.

In connection with the successful night operation of our 7th battalion on November 16-17, the following additional awards have been made: Distinguished Conduct Medals,- No. 16396, Corp. P. L. Babcock; No. 16679, Corp. H. Odlum; No. 29729, Corp. K. Weir; No. 77848, Lance-Corp. J. E Berry.

The health of our troops continue very good. The number of new cases of "trench feet" has decreased.

Duffus As Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes and sympathy and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for six years, during which time I have served on all standing committees, on many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as chairman of most of the committees, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the working of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present election, in shaping up the situation I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that with six years' experience the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for six years to fail to offer my services at this time.

The City's Finances.

In these days when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city's affairs.

The City is to be congratulated upon the manner in which its finances have been handled during 1915. We have maintained a very rapid rate of progress and yet have reserved for the demands of the near future in connection with our sewers, sewage disposal plan, schools and other public works that are either inevitable, or to which we are pledged. It is with some pride that I can say that your Board of Aldermen are not only free from serious reproach or scandal, but that among municipalities it may safely be said that we stand as representatives of the highest type of municipal financial integrity. The Tax rate of the city has been held down to a point which is an evidence of the most economical government, consistent with prudence and wisdom. As to the financial position at the close of this year, it is always difficult to tell definitely until the Auditor has completed his work for the year, how the current accounts will close. We have had a number of unexpected expenditures, especially with regard to military matters in making grants to assist the Overseas battalions, and these I believe every one will approve of. Even with these unexpected outlays we hope to close the year with a balance on the right side.

There is about $30,000.00 of taxes unpaid, and a balance of $14,467.77 which has been paid on hydro-electric account and to be refunded from capital account when the matter is straightened up. With these and other items of revenue we expect that the revenue and expenditure will at least balance.

Our Fire Department.

The excellence of our Fire Department is recognized not only by our own citizens, but also throughout the Province. The relations of the Chief of the fire brigade with his men and with the Council may be regarded as of the most harmonious. The lowering of the insurance rate, and the protection which the city enjoys has been favourably commented on by Fire Underwriters, and must be a source of gratification to the public.

Utilities Commission.

The members of the Utilities Commission and the Council are to be congratulated on the attention they have given to the installation of the new auxiliary pumping engines which so successfully provides for fire protection to the city in the future in the event of difficulties arising with our regular water pumping system.

New Bridge Over the Otonabee.

From a careful study of the local situation I am strongly of the opinion that a new bridge over the Otonabee river is one of those essential improvements which must come as soon as the financial conditions of the country have resumed their normal state. The present inadeqate accommodation is retarding the progress of a large portion of very desirable residential and business sections.

Sewage and Surface Drainage.

Much attention will have to be directed to our sewage disposal with the object of disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of by helping to pollute the waters of the Otonabee.

The successful completion of the outfall sewer, and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected, these will have my closest and most careful attention.

Completion of surface draining system for the whole city is another very important matter that should engage the attention of next year's Council, and I promise it will not be longer delayed than its urgency demands.

General Policy for 1916.

I am strongly opposed to any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions. Prudence and economy would seem to indicate that on streets where much wear is constantly going on, and which require extensive repairs, a roadbed of tar macadam or concrete, with concrete curb and gutters would amply serve the purpose. I have had occasion, as your representative to attend the Annual Roads Conventions held in the City of Toronto; and being specially interested in road building I have taken a live interest in this matter. Having regard to our local conditions and the nature of the valuable material available on the spot for this purpose, the City would be in a position to do its own work, employ its own labour, and disburse its paving expenditures among our own people.

I am in favour of the developing of the country by radial lines of railway. This matter has engaged the attention of the Mayor and Council during the year, and the indications seems to be for an early beginning of this work, and I propose to do everything in my power to advance this in our city interest.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city. I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of these interests, such as would be consiltent with good citizenship.

The City is to be congratulated upon the general character of the public servants. Their fidelity and intelligence have resulted in a prompt, efficient and satisfactory despatch of municipal business. I think the heads of departments should formally meet with the Mayor occasionally during the year that the discussions at these meetings might prove of great value in the work of the City's Government.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and private citizens, to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to letigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

I have frequently urged the necessity of water mains, fire protection, water and sewage accommodation, for the northern portion of East City, including Auburn.

I have taken a deep interest in the effective lighting of the city and have always maintained that more light and fewer policemen would serve the city more economically and to better advantage.

The securing of new industries, consistent with the best interests of our city, has always had, and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your own hands. During the past 15 years, faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards, and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be an assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated.

I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election will increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past, and the hope that the year 1916 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

Christmas At All Saints' Church

The festival of Christmas was observed at All Saints' by two services on Christmas Day, at 8:30 in the morning there were a good number of communicants. The service at 11 o'clock was of a joyful nature, all the old standard hymns being used, and the special anthem was, "Peace on Earth" (Simper). This service was followed by a second celebration of Holy Communion.

The Services.

On Sunday the services were of a Christmas nature, especially in the evening, when the children of the Sunday school occupied the front seats of the church. The service was largely one of singing, in which all could join, and the rector addressed the children, taking them on a tour of imaginary visitation to the little town of Bethlehem, and showing them the hild Christ and the Mother lying in the manger on their bed of straw. His discourse was enjoyed by young and old alike, helping all to realize the importance of the day. The choir rendered a short cantata, "The Angels' Message," and sang throughout all the service excellently. The solo of Master Harry Murduff was beautifully sung, and reflected great credit on those responsible.

People Of Charlotte Street Say Farewell To Old Church Home

Christmas Sermon Preached by the Pastor on Sunday Morning—Will Move to Trinity Church, Which Will Be Opened Next Sunday

A DAY OF MEMORIES

Yesterday was a day of valediction—a day of farewell—a day when the congregation of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church worshipped for the last time in their old Church home. To a few it was a day of sadness, a day full of cherished memories; to others a day of gladness, a day of the fondest hopes.

The expectations of a decade are now being realized, and next Sunday will see these people offering up songs of praise in their new home.

This Church has arrived at a turning point—an epoch in its history, an upward step in its great opportunities for the future.

The Church is the greatest uplifting and conserving agency in the world, and that is the only true Church organization when heads and hearts unite in working for the welfare of mankind. A Christian Church is a body of persons associated together, professing to believe what Christ enjoins, to imitate His example, cherish His spirit, and make known His gospel to others.

"For, when but two or three,
Whate'er the place, in faithful communion meet,
There, with Christ present, is a Church complete."

Christ Alone is the head of the Church—by His truth to instruct it; by His authority to govern it; by His grace to quicken it; by His providence to guide and protect it; by His Holy Spirit to sanctify and bless it; the source of its life, wisdom, unity, peace, power, and prosperity, dwelling with it here on earth, and preparing its faithful members to dwell forever with Him in heaven.

Such is the true conception of a church no matter how lowly its home or how grand its abode.

Charlotte Street has had a splendid record in the past, and with its magnificent new equipment it should accomplish a noble work for the Master in the future.

Next Sunday morning the new Church will be dedicated by Rev. Dr. Chown, the General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, and several children will be baptised at the same service.

Yesterday morning's sermon by the Pastor, the Rev. Mr. Wilson, breathed the Christmas spirit. The text was taken from the second chapter of Luke, verses 8 to 11, wherein the angel of the Lord announced to the shepherds "the good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Such was the peaceful message from heaven that fell on the ears of the astonished shepherds nineteen hundred years ago, that heralded the first Christmas day of joy and gladness. The same story has been told all through the ages since, the same song has gone on through the centuries until it echoes round the whole world.

The joy of Christmas is upon us, while, alas, over the world there reats a great shadow. Everywhere, on this continent at least, its spirit is felt, particularly in bringing gladness to the hearts of our children. One writer has said that if there were no other end to be served than making children happy it would be worth perpetuating, but it has a higher meaning. We have other memorable days, but none like Christmas. Christmas is the best of all, like the sheaves in Joseph's dream they all bow down to this sacred day.

From all parts of the world people come flocking home. Yet this Christmas tide some are not borne. Many homes have the vacant chair; but the loved ones are at home in their thoughts, no matter where they are whether in the trenches, in Egypt the Dardanelles, or Serbia; there our sons and brothers are thinking of home and loved ones.

There are fewer homes [illegible] than the world has seen in one hundred years. Fewer homes in Belgium in Northern France, in Poland, and in Serbia, whose children are hiding shivering in cellars, and cow stables suffering horrors which one man in his own ambition has brought to the world. To-day there is no name so hated as the Emperor of Germany.

Christmas is the time of home-gathering, the festival of gifts. No countries on earth have been so well able to give as Canada, and the United States. God has poured out upon them the horn of plenty, and we are sending gifts to the suffering ones across the sea.

Napoleon belonged to France, Wellington belonged to England, Garabaldi belonged to Italy, but Christ belongs to the world. No other name can compare with the name of Jesus. "Angels and men before Him fall." He holds a unique place.

Christmas is the day when good will is born into the world, ushering in goodness, gladness and kindness. "Hark! the herald-angels sing:

"Glory to the new-born King,
Peace on earth, and mercy mild;
God and sinner reconciled."

Before the advent of Christ the only song was a war song—to-day there is another song, a song of hope.

To-day no nation can go to war without an apology. Germany is trying to apologize before the world. We are engaged in a holy war. What has happened to Belgium in robbery and desecration would happen to the whole civilized world. Germany's objective points were Canada and South America. Thanks to Britain's great fleet our country has been saved. We have no apology to make. We are fighting for right and justice, for the good of our fellow-man.

The spirit of brother-hood was born on Christmas Day, that day on which everyone is thinking of someone else, the day on which we answer the question "Am I my brother's keeper?"

* * * * * * * * * *

To the people of Charlotte Street Church this Christmas season represents the advent of a new opportunity for serving their fellow-man.

"The day is done; the curtains drop,
Slow falling to the parting knell,
A moment yet the people stop,
And look around to say farewell."

—Paul Penman.

AUTO LICENSES TO BE MORE

Provincial Government Will Boost Revenue Over $300,000

Auto licenses, which during the past year under the advanced rates produced considerably more revenue than previously, will, it is reported, be so altered as to provide about $300,000 additional revenue. It is understood that recommendation has been made to the Provincial Government to so change the schedule that the amount will be raised from about $580,000 to something like half a million dollars. It is rumoured that the minimum fee for light cars will be advanced from $6 to $10 and that a corresponding rise will be made in the other grades.

In view of the change in fees last year the reported advance for 1916, if adopted, may be considered by motorists pretty stiff, but it has been understood in the past that there would be little if any objection by those who pay if the money were devoted to good roads. The change of control of the automobile branch from the Provincial Secretary's to the Public Works Department is taken to mean almost certainly that the revenue from motorists will be so earmarked.

Christmas At Quebec

Continuous Fall of Snow Prevented Outdoor Festivities

QUEBEC, P.Q., Dec. 26.—While a continuous fall of snow prevented out door sports in the old-fashioned and ancient Capitol of Quebec on Christmas Day, it did not interfere with the festivities in the home and the hotels. Owing to the great preparations that had been made at the famous Chateau Frontenac the hostelery was filled with visitors from the United States and all parts of Canada. The usual decorations and the Christmas dinner of turkey and plum pudding made everybody feel at home and one of the features was the treat given to the children of the employees, in the form of a Christmas tree, when 150 were present with their parents. The Lieutenant-Governor, R. L. Leblanc and Madame Leblanc and the leading folk in the hotel thoroughly enjoyed the function. Amongst those present were Mr. C. M. Bosworth, Vice-President of the C.P.R., and Mrs. Bosworth-Montreal, Lt.-Governor R. L. Lablanc and Madame Lablanc, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. THE PLATFORM OF MR. GREEN, THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR THE MAYORALTY OF THE CITY

A Presentation of His Practical Views Upon Municipal Needs and Problems

Ex-Alderman G. Walter Green, who was to-day nominated as a candidate for the Mayoralty of Peterborough, is well known to our citizens by virtue of twenty years' residence as a respected and progressive citizen and a successful business man. In his business he has shown those qualities of energy, industry and sound judgment, which applied to the government of the city in the capacity of mayor, will be for the good of all our civic interests. He is one of our heaviest ratepayers, and his large personal interests make it to his own advantage to conduct the city affairs in a prudent, economical and business-like way.

In 1913, feeling that he could serve the city to advantage, he entered the council, and has represented No. 3 ward up to the present time.

Mr. Green has taken his aldermanic duties seriously and has been exceptionally attentive to his work. He has been identified with every committee of the council, and been chairman of the most important—Fire Water and Light and Board of Works. In every capacity he has served he has shown good judgment and painstaking attention to the city's interests. With his experience and the knowledge gained by three years' service, of the needs of the city he has formed ideas of the best manner in which the city's interests can be promoted.

His Platform.

At to-day's nomination he laid down the planks of his platform as follows. It will be if he is elected—his object and duty as he sees it—

(1) To see that the working men of Peterborough are given the work the city needs done, at wages in keeping with the value of their services, and the purchasing power of their earnings.

2) To see that the City Engineer invites tenders for all important work to be done—with the proviso in every contract that the work required to be done shall be done by city workmen, so long as city workmen are available.

(3) To see that residential streets are narrowed so that money will not be wasted on building and maintaining roadways of needless width to serve all traffic purposes—proper surface drainage and curbs and gutters provided; that streets be properly macadamized or gravelled, and then oiled to give them life, to shed water and give residents the benefit of dustless streets.

(4) To see that a system of surface drainage or storm drains is begun for these reasons:—(a) to give work so that (b) the rain fall does not enter the sewers and have to be pumped by expensive and expensively operated machinery, adding to the inevitable expense of treating storm water as sewage. It is to be remembered that every 1,000 gallons lifted at the pumping station means so much additional expense that will be permanent as long as sewage has to be pumped.

The outfall sewer and the sewage disposal work are forced upon us by law and we can't avoid them; but the expense can be lessened by providing that instead of pumping, we can let storm water run off by gravity at no cost other than providing storm drains. The extent to which this work will be done will depend on circumstances. Less will be done if our factories employ all our labour. More will be done if employment is needed, for otherwise idle workmen.

(5) To see that, after paying fair wages, the city gets value for every dollar so spent, and that neither time nor material shall be thrown away.

(6) To see that the requests of the most humble citizen that approaches the council shall receive as prompt and courteous consideration as would be given to a large and wealthy delegation—that equal rights shall be given to every ratepayer.

(7) To see that many more streets are properly oiled (or watered), and that when this cannot or is not done that no resident of any street shall be called upon to pay for service or advantages he does not get — virtually placing street oiling or watering on a frontage tax basis.

(8) To see that an Advisory Board, composed of ex-Mayors and ex-Aldermen and experienced men of business, be created to confer with and advise the council upon all important public and civic questions and enterprises, so that the city government shall not lose the benefit of their experience.

(9) To see that the Hydro-Electric Commission, be urged to get and give to the city a report upon the cost of operating radial railways as proposed for this district; and an estimate of their business benefit to Peterborough; and that, before one dollar shall be spent by the city in respect of such proposed radial railways, the proposition shall be placed before the people for their judgment upon the scheme.

Mr. Green gave these as the main planks of his platform, and they cover our principal interests. The city is faced with large and expensive undertakings—in some respects forced upon us, and it is evident, that we shall need as the head of the council a man with the business ability and soundness of business judgment that will protect the interests of the ratepayers and secure adequate value for whatever expenditures may be involved.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In an editorial in your paper some time ago you spoke of a paving contract having been given after a deputation sent by the Council had reported against this class of work. Now, Mr. Editor, I, with other ratepayers, wishing to be in a position to vote intelligently, wish to have this made clear, who is responsible, if such is the case, and who were on this deputation in questions.—Yours, etc.,

Ratepayer.

COPPER PURCHASED BY BRITAIN

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—The Boston News Bureau says that about 900,000,000 pounds of copper was sold today, more than in any previous 24 hours in the world's history. Its gross value exceeds $40,000,000, as the price was 20 cents per pound or better. The British Government bought 184,400,000 pounds in one block of the Anaconda Company. This metal will be apportioned among producers, mainly clients of the American Smelting and Refining Company. The market has now been swept bare of spot copper.

In a French hospital a German soldier lay dying. He was a Protestant, and as the pall hung over him he asked for spiritual consolation according to his faith. The only Protestant clergyman at the hospital could not speak German, and the German soldier did not understand French. A Catholic priest, who was himself badly wounded, heard the request of the soldier and the conversation of the nurse and clergyman. He asked to be carried to the side of the soldier's cot, and there, although in severe pain himself, he translated to the dying soldier, until death released him, the words of consolation of the Protestant pastor.—The Christian Herald.

BIRDS EASILY MADE HAPPY DURING WINTER

Suet Put on Trees Outside Windows Will Attract Feathered Tribe.

A Christmas tree for the birds is proposed to the children of America by the National Association of Audubon societies, at 1974 Broadway, New York. T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary, who is back of the idea, says the society hopes the holiday spirit will result in a special effort to attract song birds about American homes and to keep the birds from starving. American children, he declares, have opportunity to save the lives of thousands of songbirds this winter.

"Birds forage bravery for themselves during the temperate seasons," says Mr. Pearson, "but in severe and icebound weather they fall in great numbers from weakness brought about by hunger. Another cause of great fatility among the birds is that a snow crust forms over them when they burrow to find a shelter from the biting wind, and they cannot break out again.

"The birds' Christmas tree need not be of the regular variety. Any kind of branch which can be attached outside a window and to which food can be fastened will serve to attract the feathered songsters who will continue the singing of Christmas carols throughout the winter in exchange for a few cents' worth of suet."

Suet, obtained at any meat shop, is said to be the best food to place on the tree, for while it provides the birds with the heat and energy they need they are still obliged to hunt constantly for insect food to secure their daily allowance of protein of muscle-forming material. In this quest they clear the hibernating insects and insects' eggs from trees and shrubs. Small pieces of suet should be wound on the limb or its twigs, the bird experts say, so that no one piece is within a foot or any other. If this direction is observed, they say, there will be little quarreling, several birds having often been seen feeding at once at the same window.

Mr. Pearson will tell any boy or girl who writes him how to attract winter birds about the home.—Exchange.

WHERE THE STYLES COME FROM

THE FIRST MARTYR—SAINT STEPHEN

The Proto-Martyr Was Commemorated Yesterday—A Witness in the Very Earliest Days of Christianity

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

St. Stephen, whose day of commemoration occurred yesterday (December 26th), and whose earlier life remains for us only in the dark, came suddenly into the lime-light almost immediately after the Day of Pentecost in the year 33 A.D.

Saint Stephen's Day.

To Saint Stephen, who is usually spoken of as the proto-martyr, or first martyr, has been accorded by the whole Catholic Church, be it Anglican or Roman, the honour of being placed on the ecclesiastical calendar immediately after Christmas Day. The day, under consideration, is one of recognition of his having been the first to seal, with his blood, his evidence of fidelity to his Lord and Master.

As narrated in the Acts of the Apostles, the pregnant and of the deacon Stephen falls into three sections: — (a) the prologue containing an account of Stephen's appointment as one of the seven Deacons, and his subsequent arrest: (b) his speech, which he delivered on that occasion; and (c) the epilogue of his heartless murder and its effects. By common consent this narrative is regarded as undeniably and historically true.

The Appointment of the Seven Deacons.

Space would not allow for a full account of how the seven deacons were appointed, or of their work. The interested reader is referred to the opening chapters of the Acts of the Apostles, to be found in the New Testament section of their Bibles. Suffice is to say, that dissatisfaction as to the method of distributing alms from the Christian community's fund having arisen in the Church, seven men were selected, and specially ordained by the Apostles, to take care of the temporal relief of the poorer members.

Of these seven, Stephen is the one first mentioned and the best known as being "a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," "full of grace and fortitude." Thus, there is no doubt but that he was a man pre-eminently fitted for his position by his work, his abilities, and his character.

The Charge Against Stephen.

Stephen's arrest was the result of a popular outcry, which restrained itself only sufficiently long to enable him to defend himself before a suspicious and exasperated audience, which numbered amongst others, several members of the Sanhederin, which was a representative body of the Jews.

Stephen's persistent teaching of Christ, as the Messiah, had created quite a new situation. The people were and the charge brought against this teacher was both grave and religious. The accusation was that of rank blasphemy against the Mosaic law and the cult of the Temple.

The rigid Pharisees, whose prejudices naturally ran hot and strong viewed, as a horrid act of impiety the suggestion that their ancestral privileges were neither final nor absolute. Apostles, the pregnant and Zealots, as a rule, are just as much angered by a refusal to echo their beliefs to the letter, as by deliberate opposition. The result was that these Pharisees—stern fanatics as they were—looked upon Stephen's doctrines as a danger. Like one of their number—Saul—who afterwards recanted and became known as Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles—they were shrewd enough to anticipate disastrous consequences to Judaism, if such ideas were allowed to prevail.

Stephen's Speech.

The accused did not seize the opportunity to preach repentance to the audience; nor did he even attempt to clear himself from the charges brought against him. It would appear as though he were sensible from the first, that everything was against him, and his case was hopeless. His statement was rather an elaborate summary of points which he no doubt had previously used in his preaching when encountered by objections urged by some of his hearers. His aim appeared to say all he had to say, and he managed this by giving a reading of history in the light of religious experience. The effect was intensely dramatic, the closing peroration being like a flash of lightning.

His Death.

Stephen's speech, having been a long recital of God's mercies towards the Israelites during their long history, and of the ungratefulness by which, throughout, Israel had repaid these mercies, naturally contained things unpleasant to Jewish ears. But it was the concluding paragraph—an indictment for having betrayed and murdered Him whose coming their own prophets had foretold—which provoked the rage of an audience, made up—not of judges but—of foes. When he, "looking up steadfully to heaven, saw the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of God," said, "Behold I see the heavens opened and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God," they became so enfuriated that they ran violently upon him, and cast him out of the city to stone him to death.

Custom as to Criminals.

According to their law, he was taken out of the city to be executed. It appears that custom required that the prisoner to be stoned be taken out of the city boundary to an elevated position, from whence, with his hands bound, he could be thrown down and stones heaved at him. It is probable that it was while such preparations were being carried out, that, "falling on his knees he cried out with a loud voice, saying: "Lord lay not this sin to their charge." In the meantime the witnesses, who, by law, must be the first to cast the stone at the person condemned by their testimony, were laying their garments at the feet of Saul, in order to be the more ready for the task devolving upon them. The praying martyr was thrown down, and while the witnesses were hurling on him "a stone," which, as the chroniclers says, was "as much as two men could carry," he was heard to utter his supreme prayer.

Could They But Have Foreseen!

Little did those present, heaving and hurling stones upon him, realize, that, in the shedding of Saint Stephen's blood, they were sowing the first seed of a harvest that was eventually to cover the world.

His Burial.

There was a special place, appointed by the Sanhederin, for the burial of the bodies of men stoned to death. It cannot be affirmed whether, in this particular case, the authorities insisted on this point, for we learn that "devout men"—we are not told whether they were Jew or Christian—"took order for Stephen's funeral, and made great mourning over him."

His Tomb.

The location of St. Stephen's tomb was, for centuries, lost sight of, until, in A.D. 415, so tradition relates, a certain priest had a revelation that the body was in a place some little distance north of Jerusalem. Exhumation of the relics then took place, and they were carried, first of all to the Church of Mount Sion, and later on, in A.D. 460 to a basilica, outside the Gate of Damascus, which had been erected, so here again tradition relates—on the spot where the stoning took place. About a quarter of a century ago the site of this basilica was identified, and the Dominican Fathers erected a new edifice on the old foundations.

A Curious Superstition

was formerly prevalent in the Old Country regarding this day, which was to the effect that horses should be first well galloped, then copiously oiled in order to ensure them against disease in any form during the next twelve months. It is difficult to account for the origin of this practice, although it appears to be very ancient. One authority says the Danes introduced the idea into England. Among other works in which it is mentioned are "Aubrey's Chronicles," in the latter part of the seventeenth century, as well as in Googes translation of the "Naogeorgus."

"Boxing Day."

This day is also known in England as "Boxing Day," from the fact that Christmas presents, termed "boxes," are solicited and collected. I treated on this custom in my chit-chat article on Christmas in this year's Christmas number of "The Examiner." As this was so recently issued, it would be unnecessary to reproduce it here.

Derivation of Stephen.

Stephen is the English form of the Greek Stefanos, signifying a crown. It is a curious coincidence, that the first crown of martyrdom should be won by a Stephen.

Moore, who was nominated a member of the Utilities Commission. He was unopposed, and he was declared elected by acclamation.

There were two new aspirants to the Board of Education, namely, W. S. Robinson and Dr. F. C. Neal. Mr. Joseph Wearing was to have been nominated, but his nominators failed to put in an appearance before the close of the nominations. The same thing happened to Mr. F. W. Doane.

NOMINATION SPEECHES.

Mr. G. W. Green, who was the first Mayoralty candidate nominated, remarked it was significant that his proposer, Mr. Adam Hall, was the first man whom he met upon coming to Peterborough over thirty years ago. Since that time the speaker has been in business competition with Mr. Hall, yet had never failed to maintain the respect that has always existed between him and Mr. Hall. For some years, Mr. Green has been identified with the City Council, and for the past year was chairman of the Board of Works, one of the largest and most important committees of the Council. The speaker said that, if elected, he would give his new duties the same consistent and painstaking attention that had characterized his efforts in the past. He was not prepared to say that he would give all his time, but would give such time as the work demanded. In conclusion, Mr. Green outlined his platform, which is identical with that enumerated in another column.

MR. J. J. HARTLEY.

Mr. J. J. Hartley was the second speaker. He advocated a policy of economy and freedom from "burdensome taxation." "By some I am regarded as out-of-date," said the speaker, with a sweep of his hand. Mr. Hartley then proceeded to criticise the manner in which the last year's Council had divided the paving contracts, which, according to his theory, necessitated the importation of two separate gangs of outside labour. He did not think that Mr. Duffus was justified in stating that he would favour a proposal to purchase a paving plant. This, he claimed, should have been done a couple of years ago. He had been informed that Mr. Duffus was in favour of more light and less policemen. He was pleased to learn that Mr. Duffus was seeking more light.

"Ald. Green built a bridge," declared Mr. Hartley. As to what happened after that Mr. Hartley did not say. "I don't want to criticise Mr. Duffus or Mr. Green," said the speaker, much to the amusement of the spectators in the gallery.

In conclusion, Mr. Hartley made a strong plea for the support of the ratepayers, and in return promised feedom "from this terrible taxation."

MR. J. J. DUFFUS.

"For six years I have represented the ratepayers in the City Council, began Mr. Duffus, by way of introduction. Continuing, he said, I am only doing now what any other man under similar circumstaces and possessing enough ambition, would do. I expect to be the subject of a certain amount of criticism, but no man who enters public life is immune from criticism. Mr. Duffus enumerated a number of advantages that have accrued to Peterborough in the way of permanent improvements during the past few years. These include the waterworks, schools, sewers, sidewalks, etc., all of which are a credit to the city. In 1910 an attempt was made to introduce some form of permanent paving, but this was abandoned when it was found that a large number of ratepayers were opposed to it. Had the work been commenced then the city would have saved a considerable sum of money. Mr. Duffus said he had no intention of supporting a proposal to purchase a paving plant. He was of the opinion that local conditions offered ample facilities for the prosecution of this work. The object in dividing the paving contract was to facilitate the sale of the debentures at par. This would not have been possible otherwise.

MR. W. H. MOORE, K.C.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., who was elected to the Board of Utilities Commission by acclamation, gave a resume of his stewardship extending over a long period of years. He acknowledged the honour in a few well-chosen words, and incidentally remarked that a leading citizen had said "that he would sooner be elected to the Utilities Commission than be Mayor of the City."

"The present candidates will hardly agree with that," observed Mr. Moore. The latter outlined the progress that has been made in connection with the work of the Commission, concluding with a reference to the steam auxiliary plant that was installed recently as a provision against anchor ice.

T. P. O'CONNER SUMS UP THE SITUATION AT THE DARDANELLES

Says the Retirement of the Allied Forces is a Splendid Escape From an Impossible Position—Mixed Feelings Predominate in England—Shift in the Recruiting Question

(Copyright, 1915, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor, M.P.)

LONDON, Dec. 25.—The evacuation of Gallipoli by the British forces has produced a deep impression in England. Mixed feelings, however, predominate. The fact that it is a splendid escape from an impossible position with little or no losses has created a feeling of satisfaction almost as great as if it were a big victory instead of a belated retreat. There is no doubt that the crash of the whole Dardanelles campaign was brought to a head by dissatisfaction over the way it was conducted. This feeling was augmented by soldier's stories and the delayed Ian Hamilton report. Fortunately for himself Winston Churchill is beyond the reach of criticism and the lightning will flash around Hamilton's head only.

Shift in Recruiting Question.

The Gallipoli evacuation also enters into the political struggle now being waged between the conscriptionist and anti-conscriptionist sections. The response to Lord Derby's appeal was magnificent, but the conscription controversy has now shifted into the narrow battleground of proportion between single and married recruits. Another cleavage of opinion is between those who insist on more millions in the field as the chief need of the hour, and others in commercial life who insist that with such a costly war, and with huge loans to her Allies, England must guard against depleting her industries and weakening her finances. All are, however, agreed that the struggle must be fought out with great vehemence.

Unfortunately the controversy is extending to the Cabinet with Lloyd George representing the conscriptionist section. The brilliant young Runciman is, however, strongly vindicating the business men's views. The Irish party is undivided and shows no hesitation in opposing conscription. Redmond is strong, and Dillion in passionate languege have both declared they would support the war by every means in their power, but will not agree to conscription. It is clear that the Irish pronouncement will probably prevent the proposal of conscription even though the offer is made to exclude Ireland. If Premier Asquith is finally overborne by the conscriptionists it may lead to serious ministerial developments, and end in a wholly conscriptionist or anti-conscriptionist cabinet.

The anxiety among the public regarding operation in the field is rapidly diminishing, and evidence is accumulating that Germany is approaching economic exhaustion. These facts together with the pressure exerted by the deadly fleet, leads to the belief that Germany must in the near future appeal for peace.

The Irish Brigade.

I saw, when the Queen reviewed the 16th Irish Division, the last page in a very interesting new chapter of Irish history. At the beginning of the war, Mr. Redmond suggested to the Ministry that he should create an Irish Nationalist Division. He gave to it the popular term Irish Brigade, which of course technically is not correct. In the early days of the war, red tape was still undisputed master of all its dealings, especially with Wales and with Ireland. The whole tradition of that department was against any definite separation of the Army into National divisions. Mr. Lloyd George had to fight a stern battle before he was able to get the consent of the War Office to the creation of a separate Welsh Brigade. The splendid response that Wales made was the best defence of the famous Welshman's contention. The Irish, however, had not the advantage of a powerful Cabinet Minister, and the difficulties for Mr. Redmond, therefore, were greater and more prolonged. Mr. Redmond, however, who is very tenacious, refused to be either discouraged or baffled, or to allow himself to be enmeshed in the red tape; and proceeded with his work. He was enormously assisted by Mr. Devlin, whose word is law among the Nationalists of Belfast, and who was able to add to the Division both wrom there and Derry City between 2,500 and 3,000 men. There was then considerable trouble over the appointment of the officers. Red tape insisted that they should be drawn as usual from the upper middle classes, with the curious result that while in the Ulster Division — that is to say the Division for the raising of which Sir Edward Carson was mainly responsible, a Catholic was not allowed to be even a private soldier, in the Irish National Division, while 95 per cent. of the privates were Catholic and Nationalists, some 70 per cent. of the officers were in the first instance Protestants and Unionists. Some of them were even Orangemen, and had been active agents in the Ulster Orange campaign. There was a further difficulty which seemed really like an attempt to break up the Division, when many of its men were sent to other Divisions. Again Mr. Redmond refused to be beaten, and insisted on the Division being kept intact,

When, with Mr. Dillon, I went down some wekes ago to pay a visit to the 16th Division, it was with a certain amount of fear and trembling. However, I found that extraordinary transformation which the comradeship of the barrack, and still more that of the battlefield, creates among men who in peace time are most widely opposed in religion and politics.

A Splendid Feeling.

The Colonels of the different regiments had been chosen with great judgment, and were well-trained, able and sympathetic men. Soldiers soon learn to s pot the right kind of leader, with the result that these officers soon got on terms of warm affection with their men. The men, on the other hand, with their willingness, their good conduct and their Irish geniality, became an object of equal affection to the officers. The officers could not say enough in their favour. Indeed one of the officers, who is an Englishman as well as a Protestant, became soon more Irish than the Irish themselves. Once when he was asked whether he had any trouble in bringing his men from Ireland to their camp in England, scornfully replied that he had as little trouble as if he had been bringing his children to the seaside.

Meantime, a number of Catholic and Nationalist officers had been introduced in the later stage when the War Office had begun to realise the situation and to liberate itself from the century-old traditions of the past. Further popularity was given to the corps when Mr. William Redmond, brother of John E. Redmond; and Mr. Stephen Gwynne—both men of fifty years of age — threw off their civilian employment, left the House of Commons, put on the khaki, and devoted themselves to learning the business of soldiering as vehemently and activity as if they were young orivates. The force when it got to England, exercised the same power of fassination over the English population around them as they had already done on their officers and became popular Irish idols. This was largely due to the fact that, true to the training and instincts of the race, they showed themselves especially respectful to women, and friendly to everybody.

Review of Brigade

A Review was arranged before their final departure. The censor for some reason or other, perhaps because of military operations rather veiled in mystery, did not announce the Review, not even after it had taken place. Bt Mr. Dillon and myself got a private message, and we went down to see this last scene before the men went to the front.

It was both a curious and a moving spectacle. Thousands of men marched past the little platform on which the Queen with her attendants stood; and it was almost incredible that men who had only been a few months in training should march with the machine-like regularity of troops trained for years. Not a single man stepped out of time. They all seemed the pink of young manhood, with rosy cheeks, erect bearing and fine stature. Three wolf-hounds which had been presented to Mr. Redmond by an Irishman resident in England—who is now one of the few breeders in the world of this rare species, and presented by Mr. Redmond in turn to the regiments as their mascots, were led in front of the regiments.

There was green everywhere. Whether with or without the consent of the War Office, many of the men had small green badges on the sleeves of their coats. When you entered the Army region, although it was in the centre of rural England, you might well have imagined yourself in Ireland. You heard around you the various Irish accents, from the rather harsh tones of Belfast to the softer sounds of Connaught, Leinster and Munster. Irish pipers and Irish fifes and drums were everywhere to be seen and heard; and there was the frequent and good daughter of the Irish temperament. It was also a very curious sign of the changed times that the bands played alternately "God Save the King," and a well-known Irish rebel song, "The Wearing of the Green," with now and again "The St. Patrick's Day" alternating with "The British Grenadiers." I remember the days not so very long ago when Irish soldiers were imprisoned for wearing the shamrock on St. Patrick's Day, but everybody from the Queen downwards took this playing of Irish tunes good-naturedly and indeed admiringly, as a symbol of the reconciliation of the two races. One was reminded of the battlefield by the noise of several aeroplanes which flew over the parade ground incessantly; with their loud noises and their dashing flight, and the general suggestion of being a protecting guardian angel over the troops, they almost made you see the peril, the tumult and the dangers of the battlefield.

The Brigade's Commanders.

Sir Lawrence Parsons, a fine old Irish soldier, was the General commanding the forces. He belongs to the famous scientific family of which Lord Rose is the head. It was a Lord Rose who first created the big telescope, and for long years made the town of Birr famous as the site of this first new instrument for reading the skies. Another Parsons—also Lawrence—was one of the patriot speakers in the old Irish Parliament, and joined Henry Grattan in resisting the Union. Another Parsons today is the inventor of the turbine, and Sir Lawrence himself has been in his time one of the scientific leaders and inventors in the British Army. Very much to his chagrin and regret he was considered too old to command the troops in the field, and this Review was his last official connection with the Army which he has seen develop from infancy to its present stalwart maturity. His place will be taken by a gallant Irish soldier, who is both a Catholic and a Nationalist, but many will always remember the splendid old soldier who presided over the early and difficult steps of the movement.

Steps are already being taken to see that this splendid Irish force will not want the little luxuries which are necessary at the front, and ther will not be wanting cigarettes or chocolates or warm clothing, or any of the other little accessories to life on the battle front. Everybody feels confident that they will add a new chapter to the already brilliant volume of Irish valour in the present war.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—For the first time since munition plots attracted Governmental attention a fire to-day threatened the destruction of a large supply of ammunition destined for Germany. The origin of the blaze in a warehouse is unknown. German agents were unable to make shipping arrangements and the ammunition was stored here.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Official confirmation of the submarining of the Japanese liner Yasaka Maru, which has been awaited by the State Department before framing a protest of the jeopardizing of one American passenger, was received to-day. It came from American Consul Brislow at Port Said, Egypt.

The vessel was attacked without warning, the report said, the periscope of the sub. not being sen until after the vessel was struck. It sank in forty-nine minutes. The nationality of the submarine is unknown.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—The British lined Arlanza was sunk off the Russian port of Archangel probably by a floating mine, on Dec. 10, according to authoritative information reaching shipping circles here to-day.

Excepting the Lusitania and the Arabic, the Arlanza is the largest steamer sunk by mines or submarines since the beginning of the war. She displaced 15,044 tons, being only slightly smaller than the Arabic, and was 570 feet in length with a 65-foot beam.

50 YEARS AS A PHYSICIAN

Dr. Halliday Congratulated by His Fellow Physicians

Dr. J. T. S. Halliday received a unique Christmas remembrance last week, in the shape of an address from the members of the Peterborough Medical Association, congratulating him upon his completion of fifty years as a physician. Dr. Halliday entered upon his profession in 1865, and has practiced for fifty years, thirty-three years of which were spent in Peterborough.

Sun And Mirror Started Blaze

The sun's rays reflected from a mirror in McDermid and Jury's window at noon on Sunday burned a hole in the woodwork near one of the shelves and had started a miniature blaze. It was noticed by a policeman, and citizens who intercepted the sun, and called up Mr. McDermid. There was no damage occasioned, and the attention of the Fire Department was unnecessary.

PUBLIC MEETING

A Meeting of the Citizens will be held in Victoria Hall on Wednesday Night, Dec. 29th, at 8 o'clock. Mayoralty and Aldermanic Candidate's will Address the Meeting. 2d-149

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward:—

Having been nominated for alderman in the North Ward, I ask you for your vote and influence. I am a sanitary engineer of long experience, and the great problem Peterborough is up against just now makes me a very valuable man to have as your representative. This past six years I have made special studies of sewage disposal work. I have prepared and read several papers on this subject before the Sanitary Engineers of Ontario, and to show their appreciation of my ability they made me chairman for all of Ontario. In that problem alone it is enough to place me in a position where I can exercise my ability. In regard to public work, I believe that Peterborough should own its own stone paving plant and do their own work.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,

Robt. G. Sturgeon

THE WORLD OF SPORT

LINDSAY INTERMEDIATES OPEN SEASON HERE ON THURSDAY NIGHT

The first O.H.A. game of the season will be played here on Thursday night, when the Lindsay intermediates will do battle with the Electrics. A game with Lindsay is always an interesting one, no matter what series it is in, and Thursday's game will be no exception to the rule. It is stated that the Lindsay team have a few surprises to offer. They have been keeping their intermediates more or less in the background, but they are not to be overlooked, according to the wise one when the district honours are being considered.

The Electrics made a good impression in their game against T. R. and A. A., and the fans are waiting anxiously for the opening of the O. H. A. season on Thursday night.

HOCKEY

The Campbellford junior team has dropped out of the junior group, leaving Belleville, Lindsay and the Electric youngsters to fight for the honours. Campbellford, just breaking into the O.H.A. this season, has concluded that the town will hardly stand the expense of two teams, and the advent of Lindsay into the intermediate group added to the difficulties. The junior schedule will be played through as arranged, merely dropping the Campbellford dates. The Campbellford team want the local juniors to play an exhibition game on Saturday, New Year's Day, and it is likely that that will be arranged.

A GAME OF NATIONS

A Soccer Football Match That is Worth While—Britain's Victory

Britain—Kitchener, goal; French and Chetwode, backs; Smith-Dorrien, Haig, and Macready, half-backs; Grenfell, Daniels, the Prince of Wales, and O'Leary, forwards.

Germany—William the Kaiser, goal; the Crown Prince and Count Zeppelin, backs; Von Hindenburg, Bernhardi, and Clausewitz, half-backs; Joachim, Adalbert, Von Kluk, D'Amade, and Von Emmich, forwards.

Referee—Uncle Sam (neutral).

This match was the attraction of the century, since the two teams had not met for time immemorial. Britain brought with them to France over a million supporters of the game, and were, without doubt, a team to be proud of. Their second eleven was engaged with Turkey. There was considerable delay at the outset, the Crown Prince having been busily engaged in looting the dressing room. Von Kluk kicked off, and for a time Germany rather unexpectedly held her own, scoring a doubtful goal after great efforts to wear down the opposition (Mons). Britain rallied, and some fine work by the forward line brought about the equaliser. (Marne). Germany blundered badly when within shooting range (Calais), and Kitchener was responsible for saving many a dangerous situation. After a time, Britain easily demonstrated her superiority, and Grenfell, Daniels, and O'Leary each scored. The interval arrived with the score: Britain, 4; Germany, 1.

Play became very rough on the resumption, and many defenceless women and children on the touchline were crushed to death during the wild scrimmage of the opposition to get the ball. Zeppelin, at left-back, kicked wildly, and considerably damaged many churches and cathedrals. At length, after a desperate hand-to-hand struggle, Britain succeeded in capturing another goal (Neuve Chapelle). From this time onwards they completely overwhelmed their opponents, Germany being utterly staggered. "We shall 'Looe,' papa, I fear!" snivelled the Crown Prince. And he was right! Goals came in astonishing number and variety, thanks to the whole-hearted support of the allies and the whistle went with Germany thoroughly crushed and subdued. Final score: Britain, 12; Germany, 1 (Off-side.) A great feature of the struggle was the splendid all-round play of the visitors, who received a tremendous ovation. Unfortunately the German custodian disappeared with the gate money shortly before the conclusion of the match.

WHERE GERMANY WINS

In Their Own Theatres Where Prisoners Help as Supers

According to the Copenhagen "Aftenblad," music hall artists who have returned there from Berlin relate that hundreds of French, Russian and Belgian prisoners of war are acting nightly as "supers" in a great war pantomime at the Circus Schumann.

The pantomime so-called is really a great spectacular play, and it was staged a few nights ago only after the greatest difficulties, as over 400 "supers" were wanted, and only a few could be found among the native population of Berlin.

In this dilemma Herr Schumann appealed to the military authorities, who gladly permitted prisoners to act as "the enemy" at a salary of 25 cents per night, an opportunity which naturally offered a great attraction to many men with little or no means.

The play contains a number of battle scenes supposed to represent incidents from the present war, and all of course, ending in the glory of Germany and the utter discomfiture of the borrowed prisoners, whose own war-stained uniforms are presumably regarded as adding a sensational touch of reality to this typically German show."

ARMENIAN WOMEN HAVE SUFFERED MUCH

Have Borne Heavy Fate for Generations

"Armenian women and girls, who are much less known in this country than are their husbands and brothers, have borne a heavier fate than the women of any other Christian people. Through many generations, as far back as their tradition runs, they have passed their lives, brought up their children, and labored steadily toward the upbuilding of their family fortunes, under the continual threats of pillage and massacre. What kind of women such a long history of suffering and insecurity has evolved, is told in a study just prepared for the National Geographic Society by Hester Donaldson Jenkins, who, as a teacher in the Near East and as a lover of Armenia, has had the opportunity to look behind the veil of the Armenian woman's apathy. She writes:

"Armenian women are full of sentiment and emotion, and unless they have been repressed by harsh experience they are unrestrained in expression. As students they differ among themselves, ranging all the way from dense stupidity to brilliance, but averaging high in their studies. When the home school was founded, its first students were Armenians eager to get an education, and for many years the Armenians were the most numerous of the nationalities present. Scutari, where the college was situated until it moved across the Bosphorous last year, was an Armenian quarter, so that long after Greeks and Bulgarians came in larger numbers into the boarding colleges the day scholars were predominantly Armenian.

Beneath expressionless masks which the average Armenian woman wears to all of the world that is strange to her, Miss Jenkins found that there lurked a spirit of such intense, violent, and consuming sort than usual among the women of those lands where familiar life runs in better guarded and more peaceful paths. Illustrating the emotional nature of the Armenian women Miss Jenkins tells:

"When the news of the death of a schoolmate reached one of our dormitories, the girls wept and even screamed with such abandon that one of them became ill and had to go home. Yet under torture and persecution these women have shown marvelous patience and endurance."

"The Armenians have dramativ ability. I will remember one strongly featured Armenian girl who acted the double role of priest and king in a Sanscript play. I recall in that same year a pretty Armenian girl who played the part of Toinette in Le Malade Imaginaire' with more charm and piquancy that I have ever seen in any American production of that classic.

A strain of unconscious egotism is one of the effects of persecution sturdily borne:

"Where there is so vigorous a national pride, some personal conceit would naturally follow. That is not always the case; some of the most modest and humble of women are among my Armenian friends; but the characteristic expression of complacency that one often hears is: "He is a fine man; he likes me."

Miss Jenkins, as commentary upon the effects which the tragedy of the Armenian race has had upon its women, describes the following types of Armenian girl students, who are numerous among her pupils.

"Filore was a sparkling girl, with jet black hair and shining eyes and teeth. She was delightfully responsive in class, although her quick appreciation was rather shallow. She was always happy and care-free. Her father was high in Turkish favor and she had apparently no consciousness of her people's sufferings.

"Zabelle was another happy girl, but of quite a different type. She was small and plump, and maintained a position at the head of her class only by constant hard work. One would never associate her with tragedy in the remotest way. But, when in 1908, people's tongues were loosed, the press freed, and people seemed to wish to express their long pent-up emotions, Zabelle wrote a composition. She began in her clear round hand. "I have always wanted to tell you about my cousin Mesrob, but did not dare: now I can speak." and there followed a horrible tale of persecution, torture, and death inflicted on an innocent young man.

"Heigoohee was touching in her expression of the joy that it gave her after the revolution of 1908 to be able to say 'My country,' for she had always felt so lonely when among girls who had countries of their own, such as the English and the Turkish girls.

"One of the sweetest souls I ever knew was Annitza. She was a Protestant from one of the mission schools in Cilicia. She was older than most of the girls, a woman in character and suffering. She was very delicate and unconsciously appealing and absurdly grateful for any little thing that was done for her. Her appreciation of beauty was very great. Once I took her to see the wondrous mosque Santa Sophia, in Constantinople, with a class of girls. She wandered off by herself, and when I found her she was sitting quietly wiping the tears from her eyes, because it was 'so beautiful.' Annitza was one of three girls who came from the district of Adana, where the massacres took place in the spring of 1909. For several weeks we gave these girls a separate place to eat and sit while waiting for news of their loved ones. One day I met Annitza in the corridor and uttered a light word. Her face stopped me, and I said quickly, 'Bad news Annitza?' She made a pitiful effort at self-control, then said, 'Oh, teacher, 11 of them, and despite the respect that keeps an Oriental girl from familiarities with a teacher, threw her arms around my neck and wept. And that was not the whole tale. The next week added four more to the list of victims in her family. Patient Annitza, with her soft, pathetic eyes, always seemed to me a type of the Armenian victim.

"Hrypsime was not a type at all; she was a strangely individualized girl, but the product of suffering and revolution. One would not have thought it to see her in school, eager to learn, docile, appreciative of all little gaities, patient in her poverty, and humiliation. She was scarcely over 15 years old, a preparatory student, but her composition revealed an embittered disillusioned heart. She also began to express herself after 1908 and poured out tales of persecution and revolution with bitter vindictiveness and hate. On the day of battle, April, 1909. Hrypsime ran off to join the Red Cross. When I asked her whether her mother knew she shrugged and said: 'My father gave his life for revolution; why should I try to save mine?'"

FRENCH OFFICER RECITES ATROCITIES

Germans Hoisted Him on a Pole in Their Trenches, Mallet Asserts, Among Other Charges.

Lieutenant T. Mallet of the French Army, who is a son of Ernest Mallet, one of the French members of the Anglo-French commission, which successfully negotiated the $500,000,000 loan, has written to a friend in this country a long letter in which he recites stories of German atrocities committed in Northern France, which he says came to his attention as an officer of the French Army. The letter which was written "somewhere on the front," is dated Oct. 31, last.

"Personally," writes Lieutenant Mallet, "we see and hear so many ghastly things that one atrocity more or less does not seem to be worth remembering. The men who fight know that atrocities have been committed, and we are here to kill the men who have done such things.

"Soldiers have not the same ideas as civilians in the rear. We have too many things to think about to bother about what is the opinion of neutrals. That is why the soldiers who have witnessed the most appalling things never thought of making an inquest, of finding out names, etc., so as to be able later on to prove the truth to doubting neutrals.

"I have fought through all the war from August to November, 1914, from January to March, 1915, and from June, 1915, to now. The only periods I have passed away from the front were spent in hospitals where I lay wounded. Although I am absolutely certain that several atrocities were committed in places through which my battalion passed during the fighting, and although I have seen bodies of civilians—men, women, and children — which, had I had the time, would have proved, after inquest, what the Germans have been and are still doing, I shall refer only to those instances concerning the facts of which I can vouch for under oath.

"At the end of August, being in Lorraine, in front of Luneville, my men found outside the village of Anthlupt, in an orchard on the right-hand side of the main road, going from Nancy, to Luneville, the body of a child, a little girl who could not have been more than eleven or twelve years of age. The body was cold and had been dead at least a day. It was then about 4 p.m. and the Germans had just abandoned the village after a few minutes' fight. There was in the street one dead woman, shot in the chest, and a fifteen-year-old boy, dead, shot in the neck. These two may have been struck by stray bullets, and so I pass them. The bullets may have been German, or they may have been French—I do not know.

'But the body of the little girl was cold. She had died hours before we attacked Anthlupt. There was not a mark on her body—I mean a wound due to shell or bullet. My men brought the corpse to where I was. It was naked, except for a small chemise, torn and covered with earth. I examined the child. It is impossible for me to tell you in English what had happened, but you understand. Furthermore the little girl had been strangled. One could see the marks of fingers about her neck, and her eyes were half out of the sockets.

"My company was on the move, and we did not even have time to bury the body of the little child. My battalion never passed through Anthlupt again. The village was destroyed a few days later by German shells. I cannot say who the child was, but I can swear the truth of what I have just written.

"On the 13th of October, at midday my battalion stormed the village of Hannescamp, in the Somme Valley. At 8 a.m. the next day we were counter-attacked and had to give way leaving our dead and wounded. At 4 p.m. the same day we stormed the village a second time, took it, and kept it. Two of our wounded had been shot by the Germans. I saw their bodies. They had been wounded in the legs. They were strapped to a ladder and the ladder placed upright against a wall and their brains blown out. I saw the bodies. They were still strapped to the ladders. I forgot the name of one of the victims; the other was called Pierre Durand.

"In July, 1915, in Alsace, at the Barrenkopf, a battalion, somewhere on our left, charged and was repulsed leaving one or two men in the enemy's trench. A few hours later, in front of our trench, about 400 yards distant, we saw above the barbed-wire entanglements in the German trench a high pole. We watched for some time, wondering if it was a flag-staff, and waited to see the flag, intending to shoot it down, if possible. Then, instead of a flag, we saw a live body suddenly hoisted above the parapet, dangle, kick and then die. With out glasses through the loopholes we were able to make out the uniform. It was that of a Chasseur Alpin, probably one of the men who fell into the enemy's hands a few hours before. When the body was hoisted we could hear the Germans howl, cheer, and 'boch.'

"I do not mention the cases of villages like Gerbeviller, near Luneville, which I have seen burned to the ground. We found not only the traces but the evidence, in the shape of incendiary packets, of the willful firing of the place.

"Though I have not much time to think of America and can not very fell realize that there are still people who have time and leisure to talk and argue, I must say, as a soldier, that the thought that some neutrals still doubt the truth of our accusations against the Germans seems to me to be incredible. We here do not see how any one can doubt. If there are still people in New York who insist on defending the Germans' method of carrying on the war, such people are mad, or more likely they are Germans in the bottom of their hearts. In that event, of course, there is nothing to be done.

"I don't know what the Americans—I mean the real ones—think about the end of the war. The only thing that I can say is that every man in the French Army believes that Germany will be smashed. It will take another year—perhaps more—but we must win. I have just been through the Champagne fighting. We have lasted fifteen months, and we are ready to last double that length of time if necessary.

"I am willing to have this letter read by any one and my name used, for I have given you my word of honour that everything noted therein is true. I hope you will excuse my writing for I have not written in English in a long time."

In another part of his letter Lieutenant Mallet mentioned a Dr. MacIntyre of the British Army, who told him that after the battle of Neuve Chapelle three British soldiers—two Canadians and one Englishman—had been crucified by the Germans, into whose hands they fell. Under one of the bodies Dr. MacIntyre said a fire had been built, the victim's shoes having been removed to make the torture still more dreadful. All three men were dead when the British found them.

"I have no doubt whatsoever that the story is true," adds Lieutenant Mallet.

WIVES OF GERMAN FIGHTERS

20,000,000 Women and Children Are Now Dependent.

Probably 20,000,000 German women and children are dependent on that state for their rations.

The figures are arrived at in this way. Four million German men are at present under arms on the two fronts. About 750,000 more are being trained in Germany. There have been 2,000,000 casualties. Half a million are employed on the railways which have been expressly organized for the war. Three-quarters of a million more are engaged at Krupp's and other arsenals, and the number at work in clothing and equipment factories is 2,000,000. This gives a grand total of 10,000,000.

The average number of dependents is officially estimated at two—two for each of the 10,000,000 men in the army and engaged on war work, so that we arrive at the total of 20,000,000 dependents on the state for rations. How many men Britain has engaged in the great fight is a secret.

Separation allowance paid by the German Government to the wives and children of her men at the rate of twelve marks monthly for the wives, and six marks monthly for the children is, in English money, roughly equal to a shilling. A German wife with two children, therefore receives 1 pound, four shillings a month from the state. But this allowance is supplemented by a grant, varying in amount according to the place, from the local authority.

Generally speaking, an Englishwoman with two children would receive an allowance of four guineas a month from the government, unless she lived in London, where the pay is 8 shillings, 6d a week extra.—"Pearsons."

WEDDING BELLS

LAKE—HENRY.

A pretty wedding took place at the George Street Methodist parsonage on Christmas Day, when Miss Alice Henry, daughter of W. W. Henry, 187 Bethune Street, and Milton H. Lake, son of Amos K. Lake of Kingston, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride was prettily attired in a dark navy blue suit with picture hat to match. The gifts to the bride were numerous and costly, the groom's gift to the bride being a beautiful brooch, set with pearls, while that to the bridesmaid was a Cameo ring, and to the groomsman, a beautiful stick pin. The bride was supported by Miss Ethel Fowler, and the groom, by the brides' brother, George W. Henry.

The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

GUEST—HANSON.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hanson, Braidwood avenue, on Dec. 24th, when their second daughter, Doris, was united in marriage to Mr. Herbert Guest, both of this city, and formerly of Halifax, Eng. The bride, who was given away by her father, was daintily attired in white voile, with trimmings of faltese lace. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Charlotte Hanson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. A. E. Hanson, Jr., as best man. After the ceremony a dainty repast was partaken of at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Arnott, (kindly lent for the occasion).

Mr. and Mrs. Guest will reside in Peterborough.

PERFECT EYESIGHT AGAIN

What it means to struggle along for years handicapped by failing eyesight, when the eyes refuse to see as they once did, things lose their clear outline to you, letters run together in a jumbled mass when reading, and perhaps you hardly understand the reason, or hate to admit a weakness of vision, and then to have that eyesight made perfect as it was in your youth, can only be understood in its fullest sense by those who wear Fowler's Pebio Glasses. The relief is a source of endless delight.

PUMPKIN PIE.

The old fashioned pumpkin pie had more milk and more eggs than the pumpkin pie we know to-day. It had a custard like skin on top instead of the rather rough surface on our present day pies. The following recipe makes an excellent squash pie, but pumpkins may be used:

Put two cups of squash or pumpkin through a sieve, add a pinch of cinnamon, ginger, salt, a grating or two of nutmeg, and from half a cup to a cup of sugar, according to taste, and mix. Scald a pint of milk, and if no cream is to be used in the pie add to the hot milk a table spoon or even two of butter. Add the milk to the other mixture, and when the whole is cool add two well beaten eggs. Pour this filling into a deep pie tin lined with crust. A light puff pastry crust is best for this type of pie. Do not fill a crust so full that it will "slop" when putting it into the oven, but add the last of the filling after the pie is in the oven. Bake at least 45 minutes in a rather hot oven but do not allow filling to boil.

GRIP DOUBLES DEATH RATE

Philadelphia Said to Have 15,000 Cases

Public Warned to Shun Crowded Places.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28. — The death-rate from the epidemic of grippe now sweeping the State has been so high that Samuel G. Dixon, the State Health Commissioner, issues a statement at Harrisburg directing attention to the seriousness of the situation and cautions the public that if the disease is to be avoided here, where there is believed to be 15,000 cases, "sacrifices must be made."

"Keep out of crowded places," Dr. Dixon says, "as one person having the grip may give it to a carload of passengers."

In this city the Bureau of Vital Statistics issued 650 burial permits during the first three days of this week, the majority of the deaths being due directly or indirectly to grippe. This is more than double the ordinary death-rate.

Conscription Issue Before The Cabinet To-day

Current Rumour That Several Ministers Would Resign Before The Day Was Over

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 28.—The British Cabinet faced the gravest internal crisis of the war when it met shortly before noon to-day, with the conscription issue to be decided.

It was current rumour that several ministers would resign, possibly before the day was over, unless the Government agreed on some form of compulsory service. David Lloyd George, according to one report, threatened to quit last night.

On the other hand, it was reported in many quarters that Premier Asquith and possibly Sir Edward Grey would leave the Cabinet if the conscription advocates won to-day's battle. In that case it appeared certain that Lloyd George would be elevated to the premiership of a new ministry.

The issue, it was generally believed, will be decided to-day. Parliament meets to-night and unless a definite announcement is forthcoming from the Cabiet Council the most bitter words heard in the Commons in many months is certain to take place.

Opponents of Asquith are primed for their heaviest attack. They will insist that the Government admit the failure of the voluntary recruiting system or produce figures to show the Derby campaign has been a success.

Roar of Cannon Answers "Peace on Earth" Wafted From Chapel Behind Front

Folk Songs, Christmas Parcels and Holiday Messages From Home Fill Christmas Eve in Trenches, While Overhead Star Bombs Burst and Shells Shriek.

ARRAS, (on the French front), Dec. 28.—Hundreds of big shells tore the air over Arras all Friday afternoon. The echoes of these were the last compliments of the season, and they no sooner had died away than the life of Arras began to show itself through reopened cellar doors and windows in preparation for the usual Christmas Eve festivities.

The people of the Artois region rise above their afflictions due to the war and the spirit of Arras survives among the heaps of ruins.

"It really would be a shame if we hadn't got used to it during all these months," said a woman selling postcards and stationery by candle light on the floor of a building three parts open to the sky. "What we've got to do," the woman continued, "is hold out for final victory and lasting peace."

After the usual systematic shelling died down rifle shots and the occasional rattle of machine guns were all that broke the stillness of death that settled over the city. The Cathedral where midnight mass was said last year under the thunder of cannon, stood out against the twilight in ragged ruins like a spectre, with crumbling walls of demolished buildings all around giving to the scene the aspect of a gigantic cemetery with recaying headstones.

The rattle of machine guns struck up again and a few rifle shots rang through the clear air. Toward eight o'clock the soft strains of an organ were heard from an invisible source. Going through heaps of stone and glass to a chapel entrance one could see candle light flickering through the darkness a short distance away. Staff officers, waiting for dinner, led the correspondent for the Associated Press to an adjoining room, which resembled the crater of a miniature extinct volcano.

Dining Under Shell Fire.

"If it continues much longer you are likely to have your dining room also opened to the weather," said the correspondent to the officers.

"That is quite possible," replied a captain, "but the destination of a shell is something over which we haven't found any control yet, have we, lieutenant?" But the lieutenant was absorbed in an illustrated newspaper which had just arrived, and made no comment.

Santa Claus and the Christmas spirit, in spite of the war, were in evidence everywhere along the Artois battle front, where I passed Christmas Eve. They were in the trenches and shelters with the simple soldiers; in the temporary barracks, where the traditional Christmas Eve theatre was replaced by an improvised concert and vaudeville that rivalled the best Paris could do in time of peace; in the quarters, where the officers celebrated with no less simplicity and dignity, and in the first little church still defying shell fire, that one find behind the battle front midnight mass was celebrated. From the road running almost parallel to the trenches rockets shooting up into the air from both lines recalled the Fourth of July fireworks in America. An officer explained that this was partly due to habit.

"Fuses are set off every night," the officer explained, "even when the moon shines brightly, as to-night and besides the Germans may, as last year, have an idea that we are going at them before morning."

The fuses multiplied at the approach of midnight and on the stroke of twelve the line as far as the horison was illuminated as by a long line of brilliant stars. Flashes of different colours could be seen far away to the north, although no reports were heard.

"Sending Presents to Papa."

"They are firing away up there around Souches," a lieutenant explained.

Several miles up the deep, wide ditch with twelve inches of chalky mud at its bottom, just far enough from the German line to permit tranquil sleep, soldiers entertained each other with simple folk songs of their home regions and examined parcels from home and talked of victory. One soldier read a little note from home which said: "This year it is I who play father. This year I broke open my savings bank and am sending presents to papa at the front.' The soldier didn't explain who the writer was, but his thick, coarse beard failed to hide a touching smile with which he accompanied the reverend of Christmas rules.

"They're singing over there," said a soldier just back from the first line trench. "They've got an orchestra and they're shooting to beat all, but it doesn't sound very gay.

Meanwhile the impromptu concert in the trenches went on in tones that were light, gay and confident. The same phrase was heard in all the toasts given here. It was "Peace through victory."

A little further from the trenches in a bombarded barn covered by an improvised roof the midnight watch was preceded by a concert in which the soldiers who joked the military on the stage in peace times reversed the order of things and with the greatest zest caricatured the civilian behind the zone occupied by the armies.

All along the roads in this region two lines passed in different directions. Some, with pick, shovel and rifle, were going to take their turn in the trenches, while others were going back to the old village church to swell the congregation. Officers, including general, colonels, captains and lieutenants, with a sprinkling of civilians and many women, were in attendance. As in the quarters of the soldiers near the trenches, everything in the attitude of the service brought out the same note, "Peace through victory."

A chaplain with the red ribbon of the Legion of Honour on his surplice, who had lost several brothers and has four more in the army, all of whom have been cited in orders of the day, and he himself twice cited for heroic conduct, preached on "Peace Through Victory."

A stretcher bearer with a military medal and a grenadier with a war cross on his breast sang a Christmas anthem to the accompaniment of the modest old organ, played by a simple soldier with such a master hand that the strains were quite as inspiring as the best cathedral music. The last notes, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," died away as the congregation was filling out of the little church, while in the distance the booming of cannon recalled "No truce for Christmas."

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

MONEY TALKS!

Times are a trifle hard in the Cotton Belt just now and money is a little scarce. Evidently Uncle Ephraim thinks so, for he came up to his supply merchant the other day, and said:

"Morse John, times is tighter than I is ever seed 'em before. Do you know Marse John, I can't get no money at all? No sir, I can't get nuthin'! I can't even get hold of a nickel! Do you know, Marse John, it's actually looks like I'll have to go to preachin' in order to make a livin'. I done it once and I ain't too good to do it again!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Help to Make Her Dream Come True

The agony of blood and tears which swept over Belgium has left nearly two millions of its people absolutely without food or money. Because they scorned to sell their national honor—because they dared to fight for the right, against odds that were overwhelming—because by their sacrifice they saved the day for us and our Allies—they are face to face with grim starvation.

The wives, mothers and children of King Albert's gallant soldiers, dream not of pleasures and luxuries, but of BREAD! They are helpless to provide it themselves—and the Belgian Relief Commission, efficient though it is, can only procure it for them with cash supplied by the voluntary contributions of people like ourselves. The is provided almost entirely by the British Empire and the United States, and administered by a neutral "Commission for Relief in Belgium", co-operating with the "Belgian Public Food Supply Society".

This Commission has for months been the sole means of providing food for the Belgian people—for the Germans positively refuse to feed their victims. Some 5,000,000 are still able to pay for the food, while nearly 2,000,000, absolutely destitute, must be fed free.

For money to buy food for these Belgians, the Commission appeals to us all. If we do not furnish it—if we sit back in plenty and let our heroic Allies seal their sacrifice with their lives—we shall be eternally disgraced!

FAKE GUNS AND SOLDIERS DECEIVE GERMAN AVIATORS.—To deceive German aviators, the French have placed very clever fake guns around the real mortars. Fully uniformed figures are placed about which are moved by strings. The gun emits smoke also, thus deceiving enemy aviators.

AIR RAID COMING!

Thomas R. Macmechen Thinks It Will Be Biggest Hun Exploit Yet.

"I believe there will be another Zeppelin attack on London within sixty days. When the raid does come it will be bigger than anything that has gone before and will be repeated night after night. The Germans will probably send at least ten Zeppelins. They are now gathering a fleet so large that they can afford to risk the loss of four or five in a raid.

"It was because they had no airships to spare that they stopped these visitations this fall. Now they are nearly ready again to strike repeated blows—to cross the channel in force, as they must do to create the amount of terror that they desire.

"But England is awake. She knows the game now. She has learned that airship must be fought with airship. She is preparing in the light of what the war has taught her to meet the menace in the right way. She is building rigid dirigibles. When the raiders come she will not be helpless."

The foregoing predictions were made by Thomas R. Macmechen, aeronautical engineer and president of the Aeronautical Society of America. He recently returned from England, where a small dirigible which he in part designed and which is described as a "torpedo boat destroyer of the air" is being completed by a syndicate under official British eyes.

Mr. Macmechen predicted last spring that the ships of Count Zeppelin would stun London and that the aeroplanes and high angle guns of the British would prove futile against them. Other experts at the time disagreed with him. But on May 31 bombs were dropped on the capital, and then, as in subsequent raids, the marauders got safely away. Mr. Macmechen now says:

"At the beginning of the war the Allies thought that aeroplanes and anti-air craft guns would be sufficient. But what the Zeppelins have done is known to the world, and it is also known that Arthur Balfour said recently in the House of Commons that England was building rigid dirigibles to meet the situation imposed by the Zeppelin raids.

"The ascent of aeroplanes at night to search for and attack Zeppelins has proved most dangerous. Numbers of aviators have been killed in England, France, and Russia in making night landings. Moreover when the aeroplanes appear the Zeppelins rise to a great height and compel the planes to exhaust their fuel in climbing after them. The Zeppelin jumps to 10,000 or 12,000 feet, subjects the aeroplane to machine gun fire, then speeds away.

"These raids have convinced the Allies that the aeroplane as a weapon of defence is a failure and that [illegible] which could be mounted in the anti-air craft guns. It is a mere pot-shot if a Zeppelin is hit. The chances in the gunner's favor are about as great as if he were playing roulette. Besides, the shrapnel fired from these guns has killed people when it fell back to earth, as I predicted it would.

"The Zeppelins are not yet firing torpedoes, but they will be doing so if the war lasts another year. Something similar to the Whitehead torpedo is being developed in the Krupp works. It takes thirteen seconds for a bomb dropped from an altitude of 2,500 feet to reach the earth.

"Everything considered, the Zeppelins have hit their targets a remarkable number of times. But a bomb that misses its mark means a great waste of weight brought all the way across the channel. The bomb will be replaced by the precise and deadly torpedo, shot from the Zeppelin at an initial velocity of 650 feet a second."

New Zealand's Medal.

New Zealand has its own Victoria Cross—one of the rarest medals ever awarded "For Valor." This Cross is very similar to the one so much coveted by the officers and men of the army and navy. The centre, however, bears the wording "New Zealand," instead of "For Valor," and has no lion. This medal was instituted in 1869 by the Governor of New Zealand, Sir G. F. Bowen. He exceeded his authority in doing so, but Queen Victoria signed the necessary order for the medals, adding a note, however, that it was not to be taken as a precedent. Altogether only nineteen of these crosses were awarded.

To Employ Returned Soldiers.

The ex-Prime Minister of Australia, J. C. Watson, has been appointed by the War Committee to organize a scheme for the employment of returned Australian soldiers. His duties will be to visit the different states and secure the co-operation of the State Governments to a scheme of land settlement drawn up by the Federal Government; and also to enlist the sympathy and support of private citizens and landholders. Mr. Watson thinks that there will be enough land available to make grants to British soldiers, who desire to settle down as farmers, as well as to native Australians.

Cross of War for Prince.

The conferring of the Cross of War upon the Prince of Wales by the French President has created the liveliest satisfaction in this country. This is the first purely war distinction that his Royal Highness has received and, as far as can be gathered, the Prince is the first British officer to possess the Cross. A number of officers, from generals downwards, have been given different grades of the Legion of Honor, while a few non-coms. have won the French Military Medal.

Britain's Wealth.

At a rough estimate the capital wealth of the British empire is $120,000,000,000 and its yearly income $20,000,000,000. This statement was made by Reginald McKenna, chancellor of the exchequer, in reply to an inquirer in the House of Commons.

Running a Novel.

"The thing to do," said a literary man, "is to call your novel after the name of the leading character—to call it 'John Smith,' or something of that sort."

"Why is that the thing to do?" asked the young novelist.

"Because the best and the most successful novels always have such names," the other replied. "Take as a standard the great novelists, and you will find that the greatest book of each gets its simple and plain title from the leading character's name."

"Give some instances."

"Instances are easy to give. What is the best novel of Dickens? It is 'David Copperfield.' What is the best novel of Thackeray? It is 'Henry Esmond.' What is the best novel of Scott? It is 'Ivanhoe.' What is the best novel of Thomas Hardy? 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles.' Of George Meredith? 'The Ordeal of Richard Feverel.' Of Rider Haggard? 'Allan Quatermain.' Of Tolstoy? 'Anna Karenina.'

"These things," the speaker concluded, "show a man that it is a lucky and well-omened thing for him to name his book after the leading character in it."

Has Had Few Accidents.

All his life King George has been singularly free from ill-health and accidents. He is such a splendid horseman, and his mounts are so thoroughly broken-in and carefully selected, that an accident such as occurred in France is the last misfortune in the world that his attendants would have anticipated. In fact, this is the first physical accident of any consequence that the King has ever experienced. He has had, of course, one or two narrow escapes. When he was motoring on the Yorkshire moors in 1913 a car coming rapidly in the opposite direction only avoided a collision by the chauffeur's promptitude in overturning it into a ditch.

Gold Saved South Africa.

The gold mining operations of the Union of South Africa were its salvation during the recent critical period of its history, according to a recently issued report. By arrangement between the Imperial and Union Governments the continued production of gold was ensured after the outbreak of war even at times when the export of the product could not be carried on with safety. During the year gold of the value of $177,000,000 was produced in South Africa, but the actual exports were only about $100,000,000. Some $75,000,000 worth of gold was retained within the Union on behalf of the Bank of England.

Blacks Enlisting.

A colored regiment is being raised in South Africa. So great was the rush when the doors were opened that barricades had to be erected, and a squad of police had to be requisitioned to keep the entrances passable. This aptly indicates the enthusiasm with which the recruiting opened at Cape Town. Within two hours 200 recruits were enrolled, a large percentage of whom had already served in the German South-West Africa campaign. The non-commissioned officers will be drawn from the ranks. The training of the contingent will be carried out at Simonstown. Enlistment is confined to single men without dependents.

BURNABY'S MANUSCRIPT.

Nobody Could Read Explorer's Handwriting.

Sir H. W. Lucy, in the Cornhill Magazine, tells an amazing story of one of the worst writers on record. Here is what he says:

"It was stated at the time of Colonel Burnaby's death that he had left behind him the manuscript of a novel, for which there was considerable competition among the publishers.

"This is quite true. The manuscript, a bulky parcel, was handed to me with discretionary power either to publish it myself or to use it in connection with the proposed biography.

"Here a singular and, as it finally proved, a fatal obstacle presented itself. Familiar for many years with Burnaby's handwriting, I could not after diligent endeavor make out more than a sentence here and there on the crowded page of manuscript.

"Burnaby's writing was, possibly with the exception of Dean Stanley's, the worst I ever saw. It looked as if before sitting down to write a letter he had pulled a twig out of the hedge, mixed a little blacking, and then gone ahead.

"He wrote the whole of his 'Ride to Khiva' and his 'Ride on Horseback Through Asia Minor' with his own hand. But before they reached the printer they were fairly written out by a copyist.

"The hapless man used to make out as much as he could, then leave blanks, for filling up which he had to seek the assistance of the author. Sometimes there were more blanks in a page than words.

"Despairing of making anything of the manuscript of the novel, it was submitted to a publisher, who turned upon it his most skilful decipherist. Neither head nor tail could be made of the manuscript, and the intention of publishing the novel was consequently abandoned."

East-End Tattooist's Confessions.

There is a boom in tattooing in the East-End of London, according to Mr. Edward Lovett, of the Folk Lore Society. The boom is not among soldiers and sailors, but among girls of the East-end, it being a rapidly-growing fashion, when a local belle walks out with a young man, to have his name tattooed on her arm. Mr. Lovett gives the following amusing description of a scene which he recently witnessed in the shop of a friend in the East-end, who, among other avocations, is a tattooing artist.

Two girls entered the shop. One of them took off her jacket, turned up her sleeve, at the same time sitting down near a table on which was a small electric apparatus. The artist then made some design on the arm with an electric needle. When the operation was finished, Mr. Lovett asked if he might see what the design was. He was allowed to inspect the arm, upon which near the elbow were the words, "I love Joe Smith." "Of course, it wasn't 'Joe Smith,'" says Mr. Lovett, "but that is a detail."

Naturally Mr. Lovett wanted to know what happened should the girl wish to get rid of this somewhat plain statement. "That is quite easy," replied the tattooist. "Should the girl change her mind, and find that she loves Bill Scroggins instead of Joe Smith, I touch up the old name and convert it into a new design, usually a bunch of flowers. It is a bit difficult at times, especially with a long name, though I generally manage it somehow."

England's Campaign for Economy.

The campaign for economy in living as a vital necessity for financing the war which is costing Great Britain nearly $25,000,000 a day continues to be pressed. Imports are exceeding exports by nearly $5,000,000 a day and consequently depreciating foreign exchange so that England really pays about five per cent. more than the nominal prices for commodities bought in America. Restriction of imports is urged as one of the most obvious practical methods of economy.

That Government expenses must be decreased and the gap between exports and imports narrowed, is agreed upon by all. Various and often conflicting remedies are proposed. A revival of the party of protection is a noticeable symptom. Some protectionist papers demand a high tariff on imports and one so framed that the colonies will have preference, diverting business from the United States to them. Thus the British empire might live on its own resources so far as foodstuffs are concerned, and spend its money with its own people, as Germany is doing.

Sobering Up England.

Lloyd George's liquor suppressing bureau in connection with his munitions department has been so effective that it has controlled the traffic in drink far outside the zone of munitions. Drunkenness is on the decrease all through the kingdom. Although it was aimed at munition centres it has affected all localities. Only confirmed inebriates have escaped its sway. Prosecutions for intoxication have fallen off 40 per cent. Labor conditions have greatly improved as the result of the work of Lloyd George's bureau which was organized only last May to limit hours of sale of intoxicants, to forbid treating, restrict the amount of "parted" liquid and make other restrictions.

To Keep Peerages Alive.

Means are to be adopted to prevent British peerages from becoming extinct in cases where the only male heir has given his life to his country. In the ordinary course succession to a peerage is limited to direct male descendants of the last or of a former holder of the title. But by "special remainder," as the provision is called, the nearest of other male relatives will now be given the title. There are now at least 200 heirs to peerages in the army and navy, and a large number of these have already fallen.

The first president born in the United States of America after the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the establishment of national unity was Martin Van Buren, who was born in the State of New York in 1782.

Mrs. G.—"Oh, Tommy, you funny boy; why not?" Tommy—"'Cos my pa told my ma that if he were your husband he'd make you sit up!"

A Dry Hint.—A stingy angler was fishing on a Scottish loch on a drenching day. He had been consoling himself from his flask and forgetting his gillie. Presently he asked the man if there was a dry place on the boat on which to strike a match. "You might try my throat," said the gillie, "It's dry enough."

Comin' To The Worst.—"Some men have no hearts," said a tramp to a fellow-sufferer. "I've been a tellin' that feller I am so dead broke that I have to sleep outdoors." "Didn't that fetch him?" "Naw. He tol' me he was a-doin' the same thing, and had to pay the doctor for tellin' him to do it."

Donald Was Fidgety.—A wet Sunday is a trying time for small boys and girls, and still more so for their parents. On one such day little Donald was very figety. First he asked his mother if he could play with his bricks. "Oh, no!" was the shocked reply. "You don't play with bricks on a Sunday!" In turn his trumpet, his drum and ball were also banned. The little chap was silent for a short time, then he asked for his horse. "No, no, sonny," admonished his mother. "Horses don't work on the Sunday." "But, mother," argued Donald, "mine's a milkman's horse!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE CHIEF VESTAL

By NORA E. RECTOR.

In the middle of the fourth century A. D. the struggle between paganism and Christianity at Rome was drawing to a close. The Emperor Constantine still maintained the worship of the immortal gods, but his wife, the empress, secretly practiced the rites of the new religion. Nevertheless, since paganism was as yet the established worship of the state, those who openly avowed Christianity were still amenable to the terrible punishments inflicted by the earlier emperors.

Even the virgins appointed to keep up the sacred fire in the temple of Vesta, located in the center of the Roman forum, were becoming disaffected toward the religion under which for a thousand years their order had enjoyed inestimable privileges. So great was the honor attached to the position of vestal that every Roman girl aspired to the appointment. There were but six of them, dwelling in a marble house near the temple, served by numerous attendants and slaves. They were free to go anywhere unattended, and in the Coliseum a special box opposite that of the emperor was provided for them. If, then, the religion of Jesus was beginning to affect these most honored of Roman women, if it had already won over the empress, would it not soon carry with it the emperor, the senate and the Roman people?

One morning Claudia, the chief vestal, riding in her carriage for an airing, saw the sun glistening on the breastplates and helmets of a knot of soldiers. When they came near they halted and reverently made way for her to pass. A prisoner whom they were conducting alone stood erect in the presence of the sacred personage. He was Julius Flavius, a young Christian, who had openly refused to bow his head at the sacrifices to Jupiter and was being taken to the Mamertine prison to be strangled.

The vestal sat looking at the man, whose glance, rebellious at the reverence paid her pagan office, was lighted by a fire far more sacred than that over which she presided—love. In the two the conflicting religions met, and Claudia, touched also by the only immortal pagan god, spiritually yielded mastery to this servant of a new deity.

"Take off his chains," said the vestal to the officer in command.

"An order from the emperor?" asked the officer hesitatingly.

"No—by the privilege vested in me as one of the six virgins appointed to keep up the sacred fire. Whence came you that you do not know that any prisoner meeting one of our number goes free? Let fall his chains."

"Pardon," said the officer, bowing the knee humbly before her. "For years I have served in Gaul, and many of our home customs are unknown to me. Your sacred word is enough."

Approaching the prisoner, he took off his chains, and Julius Flavius stood before his liberator a free man.

"You have deprived me of the blessings of martyrdom," he said to her, "but you have prolonged my life that I may spread the faith of Jesus the Christ. May he win you, too, into the true church."

Claudia made no reply.

She ordered her charioteer to drive on. Flavius stood looking after her, hoping that she would turn her head, but she did not. When he came back to his surroundings he stood alone.

Above the house of the vestals towered a wing of the imperial palace. That night Claudia, climbing the height, entered the chamber of the empress and, tearing the filet from her brow, threw herself into her imperial mistress' arms and poured into her ear a renunciation of paganism, a confession of the new religion.

Aided by the new ally, Flavius approached the emperor and besought him to declare as the religion of the state that faith which he had already adopted in his heart. The appeal was successful. When the morning came an edict went forth banishing the heathen gods.

The edict was all that saved Claudia from a terrible death. But paganism, though it had received its deathblow, was not dead, and Claudia, before free and honored among women, now dared not show her face on the streets of Rome. But Julius Flavius, whom she had saved from martyrdom, was taken up by the emperor and advanced as a concession to the Christian faction. In the imperial palace he again met the woman who had saved his life and whose immortal soul he had turned in the way of salvation. How different the meeting from that when Claudia was Vestala Maxima and Julius, loaded with chains, was on his way to the prison where Jugartha and the Catiline conspirators had perished. She whom he could not revere as a pagan he worshiped as his Christian love.

In the ruins of the house of vestals at Rome there are a number of pedestals on which are the remains of statues of the last of the virgins who lived there. On one is an inscription in Latin praising the Vestala Maxima for her many virtues and her proficiency in the tenets of the pagan religion. One word of the inscription has been chiseled from the marble—the name of her whose praises are sounded. But the first and last letter remain, the first and last of the word Claudia. It is known that at the time of this story a Vestala Maxima went over to the new religion. Was the Claudia who saved Julius Flavius the Claudia whose name was erased from the pedestal and the Vestala Maxima one and the same person?

The "Lord Sahib."

The late Sir George White was wonderful in the way of taking exercise, and when Commander-in-Chief in India used to run his staff off their legs when going for exercise round the various roads in the neighborhood of Simla. There is a tunnel by which the main road goes through the hillside at one spot, but it is so narrow that a policeman is stationed at each end to keep the traffic going alternately one way or the other.

On the occasion of a large garden-party, according to Sir Robert Baden-Powell, in his book, "Indian Memories (Jenkins), when all the rank and fashion of Simla in their rickshaws were about to pass through the tunnel, the policeman stopped them and held up the traffic, for the news had spread that the Lord Sahib was coming through. The "Lord Sahib" is the title given by the natives both to the Viceroy and to the Commander-in-Chief.

Everybody waited expectantly to see one or the other of these magnates riding through with all his glittering staff, instead of which there came from the tunnel a single, solitary figure—a tall, thin man in a singlet and flannels, running in more senses than one, and not a little startled to find himself in the presence of Simla's society, collected as if to receive him. It was Sir George White.

A Kitchener Tale.

Lord Kitchener's reticence about the military secrets of the war is proverbial. A civilian friend, however, was bent on extracting from the silent War Minister a confidential opinion about the recent developments of the campaign. Accordingly, he invited "K. of K." to dine with him informally one evening. But throughout the meal he could not make up his mind to tackle his guest directly on the point, and all indirect suggestions failed. After dinner mine host escorted Lord Kitchener back to the War Office. There, mustering his courage, he decided to take the bull by the horns, and, turning to the War Minister, boldly inquired:

"Well, what's the latest about the war?"

"We'll get an evening paper," said "K. of K."

Alberta's First Woman Lawyer.

A most interesting ceremony to the women of the west took place in the Supreme Court of Alberta recently when Miss Lillian Ruby Clements, B. A., was called to the bar of that Province. She is the first woman to be admitted to practice law in Alberta. The ceremony was performed before Mr. Justice Ives. Miss L. R. Clements is the youngest daughter of William Clements and Lucy Chisholm Clements, formerly of Paisley, Bruce County, Ont., now of Vegreville, Alberta. In 1912 Miss Clements received the degree of B. A. from McMaster University, Toronto.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save $1. Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WIFE FOR TWENTY SHILLINGS.

A Newfoundland Dog Was Thrown in to Make a Bargain.

It was long a popular belief among the ignorant in England that if a man sold his wife at public auction such a sale had all the legality of a regular divorce. The latest case of the kind on record occurred in 1832.

John Thompson, a farmer, had been married for three years and he and his wife agreed to separate. Thompson brought his wife into the town of Carlisle and by the bellman announced he was about to sell her.

At midday Thompson placed his wife on a large oak chair with a rope or halter of straw about her neck. He then made this announcement: "Gentlemen, I have to offer to your notice my wife, Mary Anne Thompson, otherwise Williams, whom I mean to sell to the highest and fairest bidder. It is her wish as well as mine to part forever.

"She has been to me only a born serpent. I took her for my comfort, the good of my home; but she became my tormentor, a domestic curse, a night invasion and a daily devil.

"I speak truth from my heart when I say; May God deliver us from troublesome wives and frolicsome women! Avoid them as you would a mad dog, a roaring lion, a loaded pistol, cholera morbus, Mount Etna, or any other pestilential thing in Nature.

"Now I have shown you of her dark faults and failings, I will introduce the bright and sunny side of her, and explain her qualifications and goodness. She can read novels and milk cows, she can laugh and weep with the same ease that you could take a glass of ale when thirsty. Indeed, gentlemen, she reminds me of what the poet says of women in general:

Heaven gave to women the peculiar grace
To laugh, to weep, to cheat the human race.

"She can make butter and scold the maid, she can sing Moore's melodies and plait her folds and caps; she cannot make rum, gin, or whisky, but she is a good judge of the quality of each from long experience in tasting them. I therefore offer her, with all her perfections and imperfections, for the sum of fifty shillings."

The woman was finally sold to one Henry Mears for the sum of twenty shillings and a Newfoundland dog. Man and wife parted in perfect good temper, Mears and the woman going one way, Thompson and the dog another.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

"GET UP, WILLIAM."

[The following verses are by Mr. Francis Gribble, and were written at Ruhleben, where he was a prisoner of war. Mr. Gribble wrote them after reading the news of the landing of Lord Kitchener's new Army. "Aufstehen!" means "get up!" It is the shout with which the Ruhleben soldiers roused the prisoners in the morning.]

Aufstehen, William, you must hurry up to-day!
Kitchener is knocking at the door!
He knows he isn't wanted, but he will not go away,
He keeps on knocking at the door.
He hasn't come alone, but he's brought the families,
A swarm of little cousins who have sailed across the sea.
Now they mean to have a hot time in the City on the Spree
And they're all there, knocking at the door.

Aufstehen, William, the hour is getting late—
There's a fearful noise of knocking at the door!
Aufstehen, William, the Gaul is at the gate,
And it's Kitchener who's knocking at the door!
Aufstehen, William, you've had your little fling,
But quite forgot, while having it, that time was on the wing;
So we've got the Hohenzollerns in a row upon a string,
Now that Kitchener is knocking at the door!

Rat-tat-tat! Rat-tat-tat! A noise to wake the dead!
Kitchener a-knocking at the door!
The front door, the back door, and up above your head,
Kitchener a-hammering the floor!
So tumble up and tumble out and tumble down the stairs,
You and Mrs. W., and all your sons and heirs,
Saying: "Aren't you rather early, sir? It took us unawares
To find your Lordship knocking at the door."

Aufstehen! Aufstehen! Show his lordship up!
Can't you hear him knocking at the door?
His Lordship's come to breakfast, and he means to stay to sup,
So you mustn't keep him waiting at the door.
It's work you're unaccustomed to, but put away your pride,
And bow your head politely, saying: "Please to step inside!"
For Kitchener's the sort of guest that will not be denied,
And it's Kitchener who's knocking at the door.

HEROES DISPROVE "TOO OLD AT FORTY"

The Ancient Saying is Quickly Tabooed by Our Military Men Who Are All Above That Age

The question has often arisen as to whether Britain is a senile race. Has it lost the snap it had a generation or two ago? The cry that stirred us years ago "Too old at forty" seems to have produced a reaction in favor of greybeards. "Too young at forty would more nearly represent the present trend.

As for marriage, our great-grandfathers had sons fighting for their country at the age when the modern bachelor regretfully forgoes his so-called freedom and takes unto himself a world-weary wife. The inevitable consequence to which, indeed, there are other contributory causes—is small families and a declining birth rate.

In military matters, age appears to have more and more weight. General Grant was strongly opposed to any man commanding in the field after fifty. Servius Tullius, who encircled Rome and her seven hills with a wall, superannuated his warriors, according to Montaigne, at forty-seven. Britain does not appoint them to supreme command until they are approaching sixty.

Exceptions there are to every rule, and England is doubtless happy in her present fighting chiefs, but they are well on in years. Sir John French is sixty-three. Sir Ian Hamilton, just home from the Dardanelles, will be sixty-three in January. His successor, Sir Charles Monro, is fifty-five. Admiral Jellicoe is fifty-six. Sir Percy Scott is sixty-two. Lord Kitchener himself is sixty-five.

Starting Early in Life

All entered on their careers when young—Jellicoe and Scott at thirteen; French at fourteen, in the navy, two-and-twenty in the Hussars; Hamilton at twenty; Kitchener at twenty-one; Monro at nineteen.

This is in keeping with the best tradition, for Rodney and Hood entered the navy at thirteen and seventeen respectively, while Nelson joined his ship at twelve; and was lieutenant at nineteen. Wellington entered the army at eighteen; Napoleon, his great antagonist, born in the same year, was already an officer of artillery two years earlier.

But all these men had distinguished themselves in arms, so that their fame was universal, by the time they were forty. Rodney, for example, was made Governor of Newfoundland at twenty-nine, and was a Rear-Admiral eleven years later. Nelson was but thirty-nine when he defeated the Spaniards at Cape St. Vincent, forty when he won Aboukir Bay, and forty-seven when he so gloriously died.

Famous While Still Young

Both Wellington and Napoleon were youthful giants. The latter had raised himself to Emperor at five-and-thirty. As for the victor of Waterloo, who was then but forty-six, he had done the lion's share in the overthrow of Tippoo Sahib when thirty, and won his major-generalship when thirty-three. Sir Francis Drake was only forty-eight when he and the favoring winds of God put the Armada to flight.

Turning to civil life the same phenomenon confronts us. Pope Innocent III. was no more than thirty-seven when he became supreme ruler in Christendom. Ignatius Loyola and John Wesley worked with young brains. The former was but thirty when he wrote his famous "Spiritual Exercises." Blaise Pascal, at sixteen, gave the world his treatise on conic sections, that dated a new departure in their treatment.

Brazil has employed an expert from the United States to conduct experiments by which that country hopes to increase its cotton crop.

Concentrated Economy

The beef of a whole bullock is required to make a dozen bottles of Bovril. You can safely reduce butchers' bills if you use Bovril in soups and stews. But—it must be Bovril, in the Bovril bottle. No substitute will do. The strength and nourishment of Bovril cannot be compressed into cheap cubes.

E.N.B.

BRIAND

This is not the first time that M. Aristide Briand has been the French Minister. As long ago as 1909 he formed his first ministry, though he had only been in politics a few years.

He began his political career as a fiery socialist. The son of an inn keeper, he took up law, but later on became a journalist and entered Parliament to become the Lloyd George of France.

He is like Mr. Lloyd George in many ways. Both were born of poor parents; both were trained in the law; both became early attracted to politics, and both by their ability and by powerful speaking raised themselves to high positions in their Governments. Mr. Briand is a remarkable looking man. His tall, thin figure is surmounted by a head that seems all angles. His face is much grimmer and more determined in real life than his photographs show, for in them his drooping black moustache hides the strong lines of his mouth.

He showed his strength when the great railway strike broke out in France, for he did what no one had ever dared to do before. He called the railway men to the colors, and then ordered them, as soldiers, to take over the railways and work the trains. In a few days the strike was over, and M. Briand was recognised as the most powerful man in France, and one who had the courage of his convictions.

There is no chance of an inconclusive peace with Germany as far as France is concerned, as long as Aristide Briand has anything to say.

Saved by the Bible

There have been several instances of soldiers' lives being saved by Bibles. The following instance was told by Bishop Taylor Smith. A captain in the Coldstream Guards was wounded, and the men who examined him found in his hip pocket a Bible given him by his father, who had written on the fly-leaf from the 91st Psalm: "Thou, Lord, art my refuge. There shall no evil happen unto thee." The shell had struck the Bible, cut through the leather cover, had gone through the pages as far as the 91st Psalm, and had then cut off at a tangent. The doctor said that but for the Bible the man would have been killed.

PENS OF THE PAST.

The Old Time Quill and the Art of Putting a Point on It.

Quill pens are no longer used except in rare old fashioned instances, but people still use "penknives"—you can see the name any day in the cutlery store windows—but they do not use them to make or mend pens. In fact, where is there a man or woman who knows how to put a point on a quill? It was once an art which every man had to master, though women were generally bad at it, as they are now at sharpening pencils.

In the old days the first question asked of a schoolmaster was the one whether he was skilful in pointing quills, for he had to sharpen the pens of his whole school and incidentally instruct his pupils in the art. Alas! There is no modern pen of steel or gold that is so smooth, so swift, so alluring as a good quill pen. The writer is very sure of that, for his father used to tell him so.

The art of handwriting has certainly declined since the quill pen went out of use. The old fellows could really write. We still pay them an unconscious tribute by calling a writer a "quill driver" and picturing the pen, whenever we have to make an abstract representation of it, as a quill.

A Diplomatic Official.

During the reign of Emperor Napoleon III. he and the empress visited Normandy and had arranged to spend a couple of days at Evreux. M. Janvier de la Motte, who was the prefect, learned that the revolutionaries intended to bias the sovereigns as they passed, and so he summoned the leaders of the movement and told them that he knew of their plot. "If you carry out your plan," said he to them, "you will get six months in prison. If you do not your friends will accuse you of cowardice and treason. As a way out of the difficulty I propose to lock you up at once until the emperor has gone." The conspirators accepted the terms offered them, and so the emperor was greeted only by cheers, as the revolutionaries, frightened at the arrest of their chiefs, had not dared to utter a sound.

The Tail of a Fish.

A fish's tail is its wings. Owing to the machinery of muscle set along its spine and to its cleaving form a trout or salmon can dart through the water at a tremendous pace, though its rapid flights, unlike the bird's, are not long ones. It is soon tired. The water is not so friendly to flight as the air. The stroke of the fish's tail is one of great power, and by means of it and the writhing, snakelike flexion of the body a high speed is reached. The strength behind this speed is shown in the way a fish or sea mammal out of the water will raise its tail and strike the ground or boat.

WHEN KAISER FALLS

French Hope English Will Capture Arch-Murderer—Too Gentle

Declaring that France cannot be beaten Gouverneur Morris, the novelist, now in France, says: "The history of this war will show that no amount of method, weight of men, guns and preparation really stood a glint of a show against a thousand years of military genius and tradition and a thousand years of naval genius. In one year, under stress of battle, these genii, working hand in hand, have done what it took the slow German forty years to do. They have prepared. The French war machine has been built under fire. And it is well that the French are neither an ambitious nor a vengeful nation.

"What will you do with the Kaiser when you catch him?" you ask.

"I hope the English catch him. We are too tender hearted."

"Wouldn't you even put him in a cage in front of Rheims Cathedral and charge an admission fee?"

"We might. But some fellow would be sure to stick the muzzle of a gun through the bars and put him out of his pain."

"But he'd get his deserts at the hands of the English?"

"Nothing sensational. They are very cool. They might do with him as they did with Napoleon. It would all be very judicial and unalterable and stolid and excruciatingly unpleasant for him."

"He'll never let himself be taken." And every one is agreed on that.

The Warder Collapsed.—An elderly Scotsman having been sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment the warder handed him a bucket of water in his cell next morning, with the remark: "That's to clean your cell." What was his astonishment later on to find Sandy, who had divested himself of his clothing, having a bath. "Good gracious!" exclaimed the warder, "whatever are you doing?" "Why," innocently asked Sandy, "didn't you say it was to clean masel'?" The warder collapsed.

WAR FLASHES

It is notified that in future one gas helmet per officer and other ranks will be issued, instead of respirators.

The war so far has cost Canada $90,000,000. The expenditure is estimated by the Finance Minister at $300,000 a day.

The War Office telegram or letter of permission now takes the place of a passport for relatives who visit sick and wounded officers and men in France.

The orders placed in Canada by the British Government in reference to war supplies which have been executed or are under execution total $230,000,000.

A badge consisting of the letter "O" and an outspread wing has been approved for wear by officers who are on the list of qualified observers of the Royal Flying Corps.

The French war loaf is to have less wheat in its composition—and this deficiency is to be made up with maize, barley, or manioc, that is tapioca. The name of the new loaf will be "National," and it will be made precisely the same all over France.

Most of the armored motor cars used in the present war for outpost and scouting duty are encased in a light frame of tough steel, ranging in thickness from three-sixteenths of an inch to a quarter of an inch, and are impervious to rifle and machine gun fire.

A Military Sherlock Holmes

The thoroughness of German espionage is strikingly illustrated by a Paris story of a beggar who had stood for seven years with a tray of nuts suspended round his neck. Gossip said he was an English officer who had been ruined by a famous actress. As people watched him, suddenly there came a typical Paris gamin evidently drunk. He cannoned against the seller of nuts, whose wares were flung broadcast by the contact. Instead of apologising he thrust a hand through his hair. The seller of nuts looked wizened with rage. The gamin wheeled round and spat in his face—and like a flash, the seller of nuts became a soldier—an officer—a gentleman—a spy! The soldiers closed round him—that volley of horrible cursings was in pure high German. The gamin was a famous French detective and the seller of nuts a Prussian nobleman.

There is no use trying to argue with any feller who is strong-minded enough to wear a derby.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. Today we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S YOKE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The many of the new dress materials are of soft and almost filmsy texture that the styles which show fulness have retained all the popularity which they enjoyed during the summer.

In the model shown in the accompanying illustration we have one of the more serviceable modes. It is made with a deep yoke, shaped to the figure and fitted by side seams and, if need be, at the front closing. Below this the skirt has three gores which are somewhat circular in cut. These are gathered at the top and joined to the lower edge of the yoke and have a front closing, like the yoke.

The slender woman will welcome this model and can make it of one or of two materials. If made of two the yoke is generally plain, while the lower part is striped or plaided or else the yoke is of silk, while the flounce is of broadcloth velveteen or other woollen goods of light weight.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,421, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CHOPSTICKS IN JAPAN.

How They Are Used and How They Are Served in Public Places.

The use of chopsticks is general in Japan, except among the richer classes, who have adopted European knives and forks, and, to some extent, the European cuisine. Small bowls of china or lacquered wood are the usual table equipment. After the various solid portions of the food have been lifted to the mouth with chopsticks the liquid remaining is sipped from the bowl.

In the case of rice, which would be tedious to pick up grain by grain, the bowl is often raised to the mouth and the rice shoveled or pushed in with the chopsticks. It is also customary to pour a little tea into the rice bowl after it has been nearly emptied, and in this way the few remaining grains of rice are washed down as the tea is drunk.

At public places the chopsticks at each meal must be new. This is indicated by the fact that the chopsticks are made from one piece of wood and are left joined together, as were matches at one time in the United States. These new chopsticks are incased in a thin paper envelope, sealed at the end, and bearing Japanese characters advertising either the hotel or some firm that has furnished them free to the proprietor for the sake of the publicity thus gained. Toothpicks, which are freely used by all Japanese at meals, are also inclosed in envelopes that frequently bear advertising matter.

EXPLOSIVES OF WARFARE.

To a Great Extent They Are a Development of Fireworks.

War is a wholesale fireworks celebration. A giant firecracker is really a dangerous bomb, and rifle grenades are but small rockets, carrying high explosives and fired from rifles. Great fort destroying projectiles look simply like gigantic rockets.

The first magazine gun was a Roman candle. The first projectile propelled by an explosive was a rocket. The first shrapnel was a bomb discharging luminous stars instead of bullets.

Modern warfare is, so to speak, a development of Fourth of July ideas.

However, gunpowder—the first explosive—was itself mere play stuff for at least a thousand years before anybody thought of using it for war purposes. It was commonly employed in China for fireworks and crackers during the earliest centuries of the Christian era. The bombs nowadays dropped by military aviators are children's torpedoes magnified to make them deadly.

Really an incendiary bomb was the famous "Greek fire" of the crusaders.

It has been said that shrapnel is a modified fireworks bomb. It has the form of a cylinder, which, at a distance from the gun mumble suitably timed by a fuse, blows its own head off, throwing out 250 or more lead bullets that travel on their own account with a velocity of 400 feet a second.

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip.

Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wail for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and decorate the graves of their relatives and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then when this pious duty is performed they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living. Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors.

Crowns by Wholesale.

It is told of one of the ancient kings of Egypt that his coronation procession occupied a whole day in passing through the city of Alexandria and that 3,200 crowns of gold were carried by the servants. One crown was three feet in height and twenty-four feet in circumference. There were also carried in the procession sixty-four suits of golden armor, two boots of gold, four and a half feet in length; twelve golden basins, ten large vases of perfumes for the baths, twelve ewers, fifty dishes and a large number of tables—all of gold. Twenty-three of the 3,200 crowns were valued at £334,400, and it is not surprising that the procession was guarded by 20,000 soldiers. —St. James' Gazette.

An Ancient Astronomer.

About 500 B. C. Anaxagoras of Ionia was born. When he "grew up in wisdom" he was the first to teach the course and cause of both solar and lunar eclipses and to give his followers rules whereby they could distinguish planets from fixed stars. He was punished for declaring that the sun was not a god.

TO TRIFLE WITH CATARRH IS TO RISK CONSUMPTION

Usually it comes with a cold. Being slight it is neglected—but the seed is sown for a dangerous harvest, perhaps consumption. To cure at once, inhale Catarrhozone. It destroys the germs of catarrh, clears away mucous, cleanses the passage of the nose and throat. The hacking cough and sneezing cold soon disappear, and health is yours again. Nothing known for colds, catarrh and throat trouble, that is so curative as Catarrhozone. It cures by a new method, that never yet failed. The one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

TRICKING SUBMARINES.

Ruses by Which Vessels May Escape Their Torpedo Attacks.

It is the surprise attack which in nearly every case enables a submarine to torpedo a hostile ship. There are several manoeuvers by means of which a ship can trick a submarine. Several vessels have diverted torpedoes by swinging round their stern until it points in the direction of the undersea craft. In this way the wash of the propellers has deflected the torpedo from its course—but it has sped harmlessly past its mark. Another successful ruse is to stoke up the furnaces of a ship chased by a submarine, and thick, black smoke belches from its funnels and envelops the vessel in a protective shroud. In this way the submarine gunners are confused and cannot perceive the correct direction in which to send their torpedo.

A speedy ship which follows an erratic, zigzag course presents a poor mark to a submarine. When a torpedo is dispatched against a fast traveling vessel it is directed to a point just ahead of its mark, and the craft literally runs into the death dealing device. This obviously cannot happen, however, if a ship is swinging rapidly from side to side and alternately pointing the narrow expanse of its bows or stern to the undersea marksmen.

A submarine seldom attacks a vessel if it is not alone, for it can only attack one at a time, and while it is launching a torpedo at its first mark the second vessel has an excellent opportunity of ramming the submarine, which can be located by its telltale periscope.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE ENTRANCE HALL.

Make It Suit Not Visitors, but the Occupants of the Home.

Is anything new to be said about the entrance hall? The smallest room in most houses, it is usually given in the plans an amount of attention that might seem out of all proportion to the rest of the house. And yet the ordinary entrance, whether it be a mere vestibule, a spacious hall of the colonial style or, as in our present day fashions, a part of the living room set off by an archway, is quite unsatisfactory. It is unsatisfactory for this reason—that the entrance way is designed and decorated from the standpoint of the impression it makes on visitors, whereas the impression we should seek is not that made upon guests, but upon ourselves, the occupants of the house.

Too often we give the entrance a severe treatment that impresses the student of beauty or that amazes the less discriminating visitor by the other extreme of lavish display. But how does either of these two types of entrance affect those who come into the house many times every day, the good man and his good wife and their children? Is it a room that by its suggestion of rest and repose tempts one after a hard day's work at the office to drop into the first easy chair that comes along, or does it irritate the nerves and keep one going, restless and uneasy, wandering from the entrance to the living room and from the living room to the study and thence to the attic by way of the basement?—Good Health.

Suppressing Swearing.

Profane as well as legal oaths have been the subject of many parliamentary measures in England. No fewer than five separate bills having the prevention of swearing for their object were presented during the reign of James I., but it was not until 1623 that an enactment was finally carried defining and controlling the offense. In 1695 a public department was established to collect the fines enforced by this law. The officials of this department, of whom one was appointed in every parish, were allowed 2s. 6d. in the pound on the money thus collected, and the balance was paid over to the bishop for the benefit of the deserving poor. These penalties ceased to be enforced after the restoration, but were revived by a statute of William and Mary and still further increased under George II.

Stereoscopic Surveying.

There is in use a stereoscopic method of photographic surveying. Photographs are taken at two points with a surveying camera, the plates being exposed in the vertical plane passing through both stations. The developed plates, or positives from them, being then placed in a stereoscopic measuring machine that combines the pictures, a brief calculation gives the exact position of any desired point. The effective range of the instrument is put at about five miles, and the method is said to be of particular advantage in mapping large areas of mountainous country.

Doing Her Duty.

[Copyright, ... by American Press Association.]

I know a great deal is said about talebearers. I am proud of being one of those women who tell people if they are being treated badly. If I hear one person talking behind another person's back I don't scruple to tell the person talked about that he or she is being maligned. I think they ought to know it.

Last autumn I took my daughter abroad and left her at school at Geneva. Then I started for Berlin. I got into an empty compartment and waited till the train started. Presently an oldish gentleman got in with a youngish lady. They was very affectionate—at least the oldish gentleman appeared to dote on his young wife, who seemed to be watching for some one. Then a youngish man with black whiskers got in, took a seat directly opposite the wife, and she breathed easier. The door was shut by the guard, and the train steamed away.

It didn't take me long to find out that that young feller and that young wife were fooling the oldish husband. The old one never turned his head that they didn't look into each other's eyes lovingly. By and by he got up from his seat, came to the window where I was and sat down directly opposite me, at the same time taking a newspaper out of his pocket. I never saw such a fool in my life. If these old men will marry young wives, why on earth do they leave them in temptation, I'd like to know? The poor old husband never took his eyes off his paper, and the couple at the other side of the compartment never stopped flirting.

I sat straight up and tried to frown 'em down. They didn't seem to care much for me, but once the young hussy, when her lover put his hand on hers, drew hers away, cast a glance at me and whispered something to the young man. After that they both leaned back for awhile and stopped their foolin'. But it wasn't long before they was at it again, both leanin' forward, one of his knees covered by her skirts, and she didn't know that I knew that they was holdin' hands under it too.

I couldn't stand it any longer. The husband was a benevolent looking man, and I sympathized with him from the bottom of my heart. By and by he put down his paper and looked out the winder. I began by makin' some remarks about the weather and the beauty of the country. He seemed inclined to talk with me because he hadn't any one else to talk with. I purposely directed his gaze to the view to be seen from the other window so that he'd see what was goin' on, but the miserable things heard me and leaned back against the cushions.

There was nothin' for me to do but tell him. By this I'd be doin' him a service and her, too, for I guessed there hadn't been anything real criminal between 'em, and if the affair was nipped in the bud there wouldn't be. Just as I was makin' up my mind how to put him on to the thing without offense the train whizzed into a tunnel. The compartment was black as ink for awhile; then we shot out into bright daylight. The old fool of a husband was settin' with his head thrown back and his eyes shet. The lovers was settin' back from each other, and a flush was on the young woman's cheeks. But what was that on the black whiskers of the young man? Powder—powder from off her face. I saw it and knew that the whippersnapper had been takin' a kiss.

At that moment the husband opened his eyes. Would you believe it? He looked at the couple unconcernedly and then resumed his paper.

"What's that," I whispered to him, "on that young man's beard?"

He looked at me kind o' surprised, then at the young man, then back at me. "I don't see anything," he said.

"Don't you see the powder on his beard?"

"Powder? No."

"Well, I declare! Where's your eyes? That young man's got powder on his beard and his coat collar, and it could have only come from your wife's face."

The old man looked again at the powder, then at me, then back at the couple. Then, looking at the young man, he said fiercely:

"You kissed her, sir!"

"What business is that of yours?" retorted the other in a harsh voice. "She is no longer yours. She is mine."

"Yours, sir!"

"Yes, mine."

"Since when?"

"At high noon today."

"By what authority?"

"A certificate of marriage."

I thought they were going to kill each other, when the young woman, blushing red all the time, burst into a laugh. "Oh, father," she said, "you are always so droll! What are you up to now?"

Oh, my goodness gracious! He was her father! What a blunder!

"This lady," continued the old man, "has pointed out the evidence of your guilt. Look at your coat collar. There's face powder on it."

The young woman laughed and dusted the powder off with the tips of her gloved fingers.

"Madam," said the old man to me, "I am very grateful to you. That young man married my daughter at noon today, robbing me of my pet. He has had the insolence to show me that I have lost her by kissing her in the first tunnel on the road."

There was a burst of laughter from the young couple, in which the old man joined.

Anyway I done my duty.

EVELYN ... WORTH

Men who consider themselves to be of very great importance frequently treat their wives and children as if they were of no importance.

Mystery of Stonehenge.

Stonehenge, on Salisbury Plain, which has lately been sold by auction, was at one time counted among the four wonders of England.

As long ago as the twelfth century Henry of Huntingdon classed it thus, and even in these days of marvels it still ranks as one of our greatest "show places," and one of the unsolved riddles of the world.

Why and how it was erected has always been a matter of dispute and puzzle among historians and archaeologists. No one knows when it came into being or what people built it.

It has been attributed to the Phoenicians, the Druids, the Saxons, and the Danes, by various authorities, while the object of it is equally uncertain. It has been "recognized" as a temple of the sun, a temple of serpent worship, a shrine of Buddha, a gallows, and a calendar in stone for the measurement of the solar year. The general belief nowadays is that it was a place of burial during the bronze age.

How these huge masses of stone—the largest stands about 23ft. out of the ground—were in primitive times placed in position or brought the many miles which are between Salisbury Plain and the nearest seashore has never been satisfactorily explained. The labor involved must have been stupendous.

One-armed Wonder.

It may be some consolation for soldiers who have lost an arm to know that Mr. B. Eastwood, who lately sailed for British East Africa to take up his new position as general manager of the Uganda Railway, finds that he can get along with one arm almost as well as with two.

Mr. Eastwood lost his right arm in an encounter with a rhinoceros, but he has not allowed the loss to handicap him. He still drives a motor-car, rides a horse, shoots big game, shaves with an ordinary razor—not condescending to use a safety—and can work a typewriter with ease at sixty or seventy words a minute.

He can light a cigar as quickly as any man. He just grips the matchbox between his knees, and has the cigar burning before you realise what is happening. At first he kept a little vice on his desk, in which he could fix things which he would have held in his right hand, but he rarely finds it necessary to make use of it now.

Curing a Fever.

"During my first year in India," says Sir Robert Baden-Powell, in his book, "Indian Memories," it seemed to me that I was being plugged full of medicine almost every day, sometimes for the liver, sometimes for fever, and sometimes for my inside. When I had a fever I would proceed to treat it in a way that will make many smile. My way was at dinner to eat very little, drink some good champagne, and before going to bed to have for twenty minutes a boiling-hot bath with a cold stream on one's head, then a dose of castor-oil, and then to bed in flannel clothes. Next day I would lie down and take quinine, and then the fever went. But my old liver hurt sometimes, especially after jogging about on duty or in the riding-school, and I became so wretchedly thin that I had to have my pantaloons taken in, while I could put three fingers between my legs and my top-boots, which ones were quite tight."

Saved the Situation.

Some time ago a local corps in England was reviewed by Sir Ian Hamilton, and there is a story told that one of the officers was mounted on a horse that had previously distinguished itself in a bakery business.

A wag in the crowd is supposed to have recognized the horse, for he shouted out, "Baker!" The horse promptly stopped dead, and nothing could urge it on. The situation was getting painful, when the officer was struck with a brilliant idea, and remarked, within hearing of his steed: "Not to-day, thank you."

The procession then moved on without further delay.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged, and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

225,000 CANADIANS TRANSPORTED WITH ONLY ONE FATALITY RECORDED

No Truth in the Rumour That a Troopship Carrying Canadian Soldiers was Sunk With Heavy Loss, on the Ocean 121,993 Soldiers Have Been Transported Without a Single Accident---Russians Destroy German Posts

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 28.—The British munitions ship Pathau, which sailed from New York, Dec. 22, for Hull, has been forced to turn back toward Halifax.

While the ship was being loaded at Hoboken Pier, a close guard was kept day and night. The cause is said to be engine trouble.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 28.—The British steamer Van Stirum was sunk by a submarine. The crew has been rescued.

PARIS, Dec. 28. — An unusually large percentage of German officers have been captured by the French in severe fighting on Hartmannsweilerkopf.

There were many jaegers, irregular mountaineers, among the prisoners. The French officers asserted that on the whole the Germans recently captured in Alsace have been poorly trained, indicating that Germany is now using many men formerly deemed unfit.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Prince Egon Hohenlohe Schillingfurst, son of the former German Chancellor, is dead, says an Amsterdam despatch.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—An official statement says: French troops attacked this morning near Hirzstein, but details of the action is still lacking.

German artillery shells stopped train movements at Soissons Station.

On the Eastern front Russian reconnoitering detachments were repulsed on Beresina and north-west of Czartorysk, and near Berestiany.

Enemy warships shelled the German forts on the Belgian coast. Four civilians were killed.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—In transporting Canadian troops, both by land and water, a most gratifying record has been achieved. There have so far been transported by rail 225,000 men, and out of this only one fatal accident. On the ocean there were transported 121,993 men and not a single accident.

This disposes of certain vague rumours that a troopship of Canadian soldiers was torpedoed and sunk with heavy loss.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Violent artillery fighting along the Vosges front is reported in this afternoon's official communique, but no other developments of importance on the Western front. French gunners forced the advancing enemy troops to return to the trenches on the south-western slopes of Harilerkopf.

BUSINESS AS USUAL WITH 93rd BATTALION CHRISTMAS LEAVE OVER

After Four Days' Disorganization Peterboro Battalion is at Normal Strength Again To-day---Very Few of The Men Who Were Given Furlough Overstayed Their Leave ---To-day's Military News.

It was a case of business as usual at the Armouries this morning. The four days' Christmas leave for the men of the 93rd expired on Monday night, and to-day the Battalion is back to normal proportions with drill going on as usual. It speaks well for the good conduct of the men of the 93rd that practically every man was back at the time marked for the expiration of his pass. New Year's leave for the men who did not get away at Christmas will commence on Thursday night, which means that there will be little drill from that date until a week from to-day.

Among the Peterborough soldiers who had to travel the farthest to spend Christmas at home is Sergt. Joe Mackness of the 85th Nova Scotia Highlanders, who is home from Halifax on a few days' furlough, visiting his family. Sergt. Mackness was a member of the 57th Regiment a score of years ago, being attached to No 5 Company at that time in command of Col. Miller. For many years he was a member of the Royal Canadian Regiment ,and served with them during their recent stay in Bermuda, transferring at his own request to the Nova Scotia Highlanders. Sergt. Mackness served in South Africa with the R. C. R. and first met Sergt.-Major T. Miller of the 93rd out there.

Writing to a member of the Examiner staff Driver Eddie Collins of Peterborough, with the C.A.S.C. Headquarters Supply Column for the 1st Canadian Cavalry Brigade, says that he is in a draft which expected to leave at any time for an unexpected destination. Driver Collins says that Harold Meldrum of Peterborough, is in the same draft. The writer says: "Harold Meldrum has got tired of waiting for his commission in the Royal Flying Corps, that he is coming with us." "I have met Orme Cavanah, Harry Carr, Art Graham, Alan Wade, Percy Lell and several other boys from the old turg," says Driver Collins.

Sergt. Art. Graham of the headquarters staff, Reserve Brigade, C. F. A., Ross Park Barracks, Shornoliffe, says: "I sure meet many Peterborough boys here returning from the front. The latest was "Barney" Quinn, who was with George Minorgan, "Scoop" Taylor, Billy Gibson and Heber Rogers when they were hit. I meet with many of the wounded on account of my being in headquarters. They all have to report at our office."

Through the kindness of the 57th Chapter Daughters of the Empire, the men of the 93rd Battalion enjoyed a feast of apples on Christmas Day, the Chapter having provided a barrel of fine Snows for that purpose. It is understood the men who are on duty at New Years will receive a similar gift.

The new instruments for the Band of the 93rd Battalion are expected some time this week. It is thought that they may have been brought over on the Metagama which docked several days ago.

The post office department is placing a mail box in the Armouries for the benefit of the men of the 93rd Battalion.

Major R. P. Watt and Captain J. E. R. Munro of the 93rd will visit Apsley to-morrow for the purpose of attesting the Apsley quota of the 93rd. It is likely that Major Cameron A.M.C., will accompany them.

A member of the Examiner staff has ceived the following letter from Gunner W. E. Graham of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., formerly of the 57th Regiment Band and a former employee of the Examiner office:

Belgium, Dec. 2nd, 1915.

A few lines to let you know I have not forgotten you. I am still at it out here, but certainly wish the war was over. I met Ross Kendry of Peterborough to-day. He was telling me that there are only eleven of the original one hundred and thirty that first left the town. Ross is still at it, but he is looking a lot older than when I saw him last in the old town. Have been in this country now since last February and have had no pass yet, but am expecting it any time now. The other night I saw Lieut. Harold Smith. He is with the 11th Canadian Battery. I guess I will have to close

DESPERATE FIGHT IN MESOPOTAMIA

General Townsend's Anglo-Indian Army Wins An Important two Days' Struggle From The Turks Who Tried to Capture Kut-el-Amara.

ENEMY RETIRED

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The British forces in Mesopotamia, which have been entrenched in a strong position at Kut-el-Amara since the retreat from Ctesiphon, won an important two-day battle over the Turks Christmas morning.

Gen. Townsend, who is in command of the Mesopotamian army, reported to-day that a fierce battle raged on Friday and Christmas Day, with apparently 25,000 Turks engaged. A breach was made by the Turks in the fort defences, and a body of them managed to enter. Later, however they were driven out, leaving 200 dead behind.

Later severe fighting for possession of the fort occurred, and the Turks managed to capture the northern bastion. Christmas morning they were forced to retire from this bastion, however, and having suffered losses did not return to the attack.

Gen. Townsend's report is as follows:

"On the 24th Gen. Townsend reported that the enemy had fired heavily throughout the previous night but had not attacked. Later he sent a further report as follows:

"From 10 a.m. until past mid-day the position was heavily shelled. The enemy, having breached the fort, effected an entrance, but were driven out. Two hundred dead were left inside the fort.

"The fort is a work on the right flank of his landward position on the north side of the Kut Peninsula.

"On the 25th Gen. Townsend sent a further report, in which he says that at midnight on the 24th and on the 25th fierce fighting for the possession of the fort took place. The enemy effected a lodgment in the northern bastion, and were ejected but came on again and occupied the bastion. The garrison of Oxford Light Infantry and the 103rd Mahrattas held on to the entrenchment and were reinforced by the Norfolk Regiment and the 104th Pioneers. The enemy vacated the bastion early Christmas morning, and retired into trenches 400 to 900 yards in the rear, although the attack had been made from trenches only about 100 yards from the breach.

The rest of Christmas Day passed quietly. The fort and garrison, in excellent spirits, reoccupied the bastion. The enemy's casualties are estimated at about 700; our own at 190 killed and wounded.

"A whole division appears to have been engaged in the attack. Presumably the 200 enemy read mentioned in the telegram of the 24th are not included in the above.

CITY GROANING UNDER EPIDEMIC OF "THE GRIP"

Colds and La Grippe Have Spread Rapidly During The Past Week and Possibly the Heavy Eating of Christmas is Not Altogether Blameless

HARVEST FOR DRUGGISTS

The city's bones are sore with La Grippe, and the city's innards are discussing asperin, bromo-quinine and the active chloride, while the victims are wishing they were down at Jacksonville or Miami. There may be a few exceptions, but their number is insignificant. Up and down the business street the ranks have been thinned or incapacitated by colds and 'the grip"; it has been all through the Customs House; a west end factory employing many girls is reported to be rather seriously incommoded by the same epidemic which is anything but pleasant, while it is at work. Sneezing and head tones accompany these colds, not to mention trips to the doctor or druggist. That this epidemic could spread to such genera, proportions appears as an indictment of our present lack of complete precautions for the public health. It is related of one woman who caught La Grippe somewhere that she refused to receive her friends until she had recovered. She doubtless appreciated the fact that this disease is readily infectious. However, the epidemic is a favorable wind for the druggists who have handed out all kinds of "cold breakers".

WILL DISPOSE OF SUBMARINE QUESTION

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Dec. 28.—The entire question of submarine warfare, as affecting the United States may be cleared up within a few days. Austria's reply to the second Ancona note will be handed to Ambassador Penfield this week. Assurances come from reliable quarters that it is "satisfactory and final."

There is a strong party in the dual monarchy that has insisted that friendly relations with America be maintained. This party apparently has the upper hand.

Government circles here profess to have little or no knowledge of the probable contents of the Austrian reply and it is declared that Austria acted entirely independently, without seeking Germany's advice in framing the reply.

TUESDAY, DEC. 28, 1915

IN SELF-DEFENCE.

If we had our municipal councils composed of patriotic fair-minded representatives, who would do the fair thing by different sections of the city, we should have no need for local Ratepayers' Associations. But so long as we have in operation the vicious ward system of electing representatives, so long shall we have sectional discrimination, and ground for sectional complaint of denial of the rights of localities. If a ward or section has representatives lacking in force of character and ability to impress themselves by way of influence on the City Council as a body, the section is left at the mercy of the sense of fair play that is not always in evidence in our civic bodies. The ratepayers of the East Ward feel that they are not always—or even appear getting a "square deal" in the administration of civic affairs.

It is therefore proposed to organize a ratepayers' association for East City, and a meeting for that purpose is announced to be held in St. Luke's Men's Hall, Hunter street, east, on Thursday evening, Dec. 30th.

TRUST THE PEOPLE, TOO.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has been breaking out in speech. This is something that he can do with credit and advantage. He has made some very effective speeches—one of them in Peterborough—to promote recruiting. But these are subjects upon which his eloquence loses its charm—or if not its charm—its "punch." Sir George Foster was not a particularly brilliant success as a Finance Minister, and when he made eloquent speeches even on that subject, they all had defects, or, to be more literally correct, deficits. Now Sir George has been again making financial speeches. In a recent utterance he showed a return of the old, breezy, jocund days, when Sir George predicted surpluses and—achieved deficits. Optimism is a fine quality, but it is not elastic enough, or perhaps too elastic, to be successfully applied to a subject where there is a prejudice in favour of achieving balances—making ends meet. Sir George was carried away with the success of the recent Canadian domestic loan, when fifty millions was asked and a hundred millions given, and hints that perhaps a loan of three hundred millions will be asked. Now the oratorical confidence reposed in Canada and her resources is very flattering to our self esteem, and appeals to our spirit of patriotic pride. But even in the matter of patriotism we must not be dangerously carried away. The Canadian people will subscribe for war loans, for necessarily emergent expenditures, but their forbearance must not be too much strained. Money in millions to a people of our limited population means a good deal. It is not an unworthy suspicion, but very worthy prudence that demands that the people should have some details of the expenditures of vast sums provided, and satisfactory proof given that value has been got or is being got for the millions we have voted and loaned so liberally. We hear rumours that very large sums of money have been wasted in charging unduly high prices and exacting unduly high profits in the execution of war contracts. We don't vote money or subscribe to loans for that.

LLOYD GEORGE.

One of the most remarkable incidents in English political history, says the Ottawa Free Press, is the complete reversion of opinion since the war began regarding Lloyd George. Two or three years ago he was scoffed at as the little Welsh upstart whose ideas of national government and social legislation were altogether impractical. By the majority of the British newspapers he was held to be a serious menace to the nation. To be jeered at as a dreamer was the best reception he could hope for in presenting any of his proposals.

To-day, the same arm-chair critics and the same newspapers hail him as the one wise and capable man of the government. He is all at once the saviour of the nation. Too small and too impractical for the minor affairs of peace, he is the "only" man with ability to handle the tremendous problems presented by the war.

Undoubtedly, Lloyd George has shown himself to be possessed of tremendous capability. He is the one man for his place in England to-day. It is doubtful if any other British statesman could have done what he has in the way of getting munitions for the army. No other man knows the British labouring classes as well. No other has displayed such ability for organization. Muntions were the great need of Britain and her allies, and, while he has not yet completed his task, he has got munitions in quantities that were never before dreamed of. He has done it by bringing about a union without which there could not have been success—a union of the government, the capitalist and the worker. It was impossible that all discord among these elements should have been obliterated, but who could have removed it to the degree Lloyd George has?

Britain owes much to the little Welshman, and will owe more when the war is over. One of the lessons of the change in the attitude of the critics towards him, too, is that there is danger in placing too much reliability in the newspaper opinion of the old country. With Lloyd George a big man now, he could not have been the dangerous demagogue he was called three years ago. The arm-chair critics of England have a habit of speaking first and thinking afterwards. Because of this, public opinion in the old country when great issues are present is generally in a state of turmoil. This should be borne in mind when considering some of the prevailing newspaper opinion.

If "inertia" has been the besetting sin of the British government in the conduct of the war, Lloyd George is veritably a black knight to enter the lists against it. Action, unceasing action is his particular trait.

A SPEECH EXPLAINED.

The Montreal Herald in reference to a recent speech delivered by Sir George Foster in the following comment, shows that oratorical platitudes and surface truthes are pretty well metamorphoned in meaning and application by a little critical analysis. The Herald says:

> Sir George Foster remarked in his speech that "there must be a cessation of all forms of waste and a husbanding of the resources of the country in preparation for the vital expenditure Canada will have to face in the very near future." What he meant by this is not quite plain, but it would seem to indicate that the Government are considering the imposition of heavy new taxation, especially as he added: "We have done nothing specially to tax ourselves." Nobody will deny that waste must be avoided, but the reminder would come better from a member of the Government if that Government had themselves set the example, which they certainly have not done up to the present.
> As to the imposition of new taxation, the general rise in retail prices as a result of the Government's so-called "war" taxation has made that portion of our population which is not wealthy fell that quite a good deal has already been done in taxes. The present taxes do not look like "nothing special" to people of small incomes. In fact, in view of what they are paying, and of the scandals which have revealed how some of these hard-earned taxes are disbursed, they feel that the slogan, "Millions for war, but not a cent for graft" is the proper response to Cabinet Ministers who lecture the public on extravagance, and tell them they are paying "nothing special" in the way of taxes.

WHY UNITED STATES BADLY NEED MILITARY STIFFENING AND PULLING TOGETHER

In view of the approaching debates on preparedness at Washington, the following article, by Henry Reuterdale, the American artist, in the Metropolitan magazine, is of interest:

"Our patriotism is waning and drifting away on the ebb tide of indifference, and as a nation our manhood is on the decline; national conscience we have not. No longer can an American hold up his head abroad. Our place in the world is that of a money bag. In Germany we are laughed at, despised as spineless weaklings; our money alone is feared. England thinks we are cowards, and American life a commodity which can be paid for in cash. The French shrug their shoulders."

The Mexicans ridicule us, he says, and regard us as a race of cowards.

"In Naco, Ariz," he says, "the right arm of the government guards not the lives of the inhabitants. Barricades of hay bales before the windows keep Mexican bullets from killing them in their sleep; in the daytime they duck low and trust to luck."

Invasion Easy.

Invasion by a European power he regards as ridiculously easy.

"Right before our very eyes," he says, "our navy and army have deteriorated. So far, no one cares. It has been demonstrated and proved beyond argument that the American navy is not strong enough to maintain the command of the sea and uphold the Monroe doctrine With the American fleet swept off the sea, the enemy's invasion on our soil becomes but a matter of steamer schedule Twice this has been done in the war games of our own fleet.

"The army cannot defend all its forts," he continues. "It has no automobiles to transport all its baggage; its shoes are for the parade ground and will wear out under two months' marching; it has nineteen motor ambulances for its wounded. Its supply system cannot stand the strain of war but will break down as it did during the Spanish war. It is without ammunition trains, armored automobiles, armored railroad trains, heavy mortars for field work, has ammunition but for a couple of days' battle and with less than one hour's supply for coast defence guns, and has not sufficient field artillery. The mobile army in the continental United States is but a little larger than twice the New York police force, and its reserve counts some sixteen men. It masters ten aeroplanes, all of which cannot fly.

Coast Guns Useless.

"Practically all the great rifles for coast defence are from the design of the Ordnance Department, and their disappearing carriages are the invention of the present bureau chief Many are obsolete, and the carriages of the heavy guns have to be remodeled. They permit only a limited degree of elevation and through faulty design good guns are rendered inferior in range to those of the enemy's ships. For want of foresight the bureau placed this handicap on every large-calibred, direct-firing gun of our coast defence from Maine to California. The pieces are now useless against the latest super-dreadnoughts until this handicap is removed.

"The inefficiency settled upon the army by Congress and the army's unpreparedness for war is visualized by the hopeless and pathetic state of its Aviation Corps. America is the land of the aeroplane. Here it was born, but the army has now but ten machines—one fell recently in the sea and killed its aviator. That these machines cannot fly cannot be the fault of Congress. Our loss in aviators has proportionately been almost as heavy as in the flying corps of the great armies now engaged in war.

Travel on a Pillow.

"The American army is trained to travel on a pillow. Soldiers must go to manoeuvres in a tourist sleeper officers in Pullmans. At least that is our peace method. To the Texas manoeuvres a regiment was ordered from Indianapolis. It could have pulled out in six hours, reaching its destination in thirty, traveling in box cars as in France and Germany. But this regiment had to wait three days for tourist sleepers. The orders to move came in February; not until four months later did the force reach its maximum strength, but without regiment of light artillery, ambulances, field hospitals, engineers, and signal force. No ammunition nor adequate supply trains nor transports existed, and three regiments never reached proper war strength.

"'What are you going to do about it?' To which I answer, Trust the army, chuck politics sky high, again put the ear of God in Congress, kill the graft of the useless army posts do away with the bureau system and let the fighting army run its own show, according to the lines laid down by the General Staff. They are trained for it; Congress is not. Establish a Council of National Defence so that the army may be represented on the floor of Congress and the demands and opinions of the efficient soldier may be heard throughout the land. Give it a budget system as exists in every country where defence means something.

"Military training must be general. It is no hardship to the youth of Switzerland or Australia. Why should it be to ours? On the other hand it will make a better man of him, teach obedience, strengthen his undisciplined character, and there will be less use for slums and less need for reformatories. The day of the small highly trained army is past. A small army is a useless expense—it will not prevent attack, and when attacks come, it cannot resist. War demands every unit of a nation—even down to the humblest baker. The fighting line is but the edge of the knife; the steel behind it is represented by the resources of the nation expended with fullest unity."

COLOGNE NEWSPAPERS DIFFER ON NOTE

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 28.—In commenting on the second American note to Austria-Hungary concerning the Ancona incident, the Volkszeitung of Cologne makes a vigorous attack on President Wilson. It says the President will not let slip an opportunity to gain a great success, since "failure would prejudice his prospects for the next election."

"The Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette says the note leaves the door open for friendly discussion. It is couched in conciliatory terms, he adds, and the questions regarding the facts of the case and the legality of the submarine commander's act may be discussed calmly and objectively.

WILL STOP LEAK TO GERMANY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Dec. 28.—By a Royal proclamation published in the Gazette the exportation to Switzerland of virtually everything that might be of service to Germany is prohibited unless it is consigned to the Societe Suisse de Surveillance Economique, which corresponds with the Netherlands Overseas Trust, with which the government has a similar agreement.

Thus the British policy of preventing goods from reaching Germany through neutral countries has been carried a step further.

INDIAN TROOPS LEAVE FRANCE

Have Been Transferred to Another Field of Action

PUBLICLY THANKED BY KING

LONDON, December 28—The departure of the Indian army from France for "another field of action," was the most important feature of the day's news, so far as the British public is concerned. Whether the new field of action is Egypt or Mesopotamia is not announced; in both these theatres there are presumably already considerable bodies of Indian troops.

It is assumed that the places of the Indians in France have been filled by drafts from the new armies raised on the soil of the United Kingdom.

In connection with to-night's announcement it is worth noting the larger and more important share the youthful Prince of Wales is taking in the business of the Empire. The British public, both home and colonial, will read with a peculiar sense of national pride the King's words to the Indian veterans: "Before you leave France I send my dear and gallant son, the Prince of Wales, who has shared with my armies the dangers and hardships of the campaign, to thank you in my name."

The King's message reads:

"More than a year ago I summoned you from India to fight for the safety of my Empire and the honour of my pledged word, on the battlefields of Belgium and France. The confidence which I then expressed in your sense of duty, your courage, and your chivalry you since have nobly justified.

'I now require your services in another field of action, but before you leave France I send my dear, gallant son, the Prince of Wales, who has shared with my armies the dangers and hardships of the campaign, to thank you in my name for your services and to express to you my satisfaction.

"British-Indian comrades-in-arms, yours has been fellowship in toils, hardships, courage and endurance, often against great odds, in deeds nobly done in days of ever-memorable conflict. In the warfare waged under new conditions, and in peculiarly trying circumstances, you have worthily upheld the honours of the Empire and the great traditions of my army in India.

"I have followed your fortunes with the deepest interest and watched your gallant actions with pride and satisfaction, and I mourn with you the loss of many gallant officers and men. Let it be your consolation as their pride, that they freely gave their lives in a just cause for the honour of their Sovereign and the safety of my Empire. They died gallant soldiers, and I shall ever hold their sacrifice in grateful remembrance.

"You leave France with just pride in honorable deeds already achieved, and with my assured confidence that your proved valour and experience will contribute to further victories in the new fields of action to which you go.

"I pray God to bless and guard you, and bring you back safely, when final victory is won, each to his own home, there to be welcomed among his own people."

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

J. J. HARTLEY
FOR MAYOR

ADDRESS TO THE ELECTORS:

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of influential citizens, I have decided to come before the electors of Peterborough as a candidate for the Mayoralty. My long experience in municipal affairs, comprising a ten-year term as a member of the Council, also fourteen years on the Board of Education, and Chairman of the Board of Health, peculiarly fit me for the position of presiding head over your Aldermanic body. Those who are supporting my candidature are satisfied that I will, if elected, do my utmost to give the city a straight, honest administration of its affairs, and my motto will always be "strict economy." On the strength of my past record, I ask for your hearty support and the weight of your ballots to return me at the head of the polls next Monday. I promise close attention to municipal expenditures, and to particularly guard against leakages and unnecessary waste of public monies entrusted the Council for administration.

Again soliciting the honour of your votes on election day, and guaranteeing, if elected, to do my best to merit the confidence placed in me, I am,

Yours for economy,

J. J. HARTLEY

Did you decide to come back to us?" "No, m'm; I f-f-forgot t-to say I h-had such a nice time."

No Wills Probated For Aliens Here

Ontario Government Also Refuses to Issue Letters of Administration

TORONTO, December 28. The Ontario Government has caused to be published in the Ontario Gazette a notice decreeing that no alien enemies be allowed to have wills probated or letters of administration granted. The order makes provision, however, that by special permission of the crown small sums of money may be paid out of an estate left to an alien if such sums are to meet debts owing to an alien.

The Government passed the order in council when it became known that enemies of the King, who are at present interned in Canada, or are forced to report to the police at regular intervals, were in a position to receive the benefits of any estates that might be willed to them.

To the Ratepayers of The City of Peterborough

I RESPECTFULLY solicit your Vote and Influence to Re-Elect me as a Member of the Board of Education.

It is admitted on all hands that our Public Schools and Collegiate Institute compare favourably with the best in the Province.

This excellent result has been achieved by the Members of the Board taking a deep and active interest in the efficiency of all our Schools and securing the hearty and enthusiastic co-operation of every Teacher in every Department.

As always in the past so in the future I shall continue if I am favoured with your Votes to see that the splendid standard of our Schools is maintained and wherever possible improved.

HOLY INNOCENTS' DAY

To-day is Commemorated the Massacre of the Children of Bethlehem, it is known also as Childermas Day.

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

This day is known as Holy Innocents' Day, and has been observed from a comparatively early date by the Christian Church, in all its branches.

There is a special Collect, Epistle, and Gospel, as well as proper Lessons, appointed for use on this day in the Anglican Church, which is sufficient to show that the compilers of the "Book of Common Prayer," looked upon it as a day of much importance.

The Holy Innocents

Are the children mentioned by St. Matthew, in his Gospel Chap iii:v 16-18.

"Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently enquired of the wise men.

"Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

"In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not."

How Many Were Slaughtered?

The Greek Liturgy asserts that Herod killed 14,000 boys; the Syrians speak of 64,000 while, according to the Apocrypha, the numbers run as high as 144,000.

But modern writers reduce the number very considerably. They point out that Bethlehem was a rather small town, and the figures given by Knabenhauer, Gishing, and Kellner, vary from only six to twenty.

The Emperor Augustus' "bon-mot."

When the Emperor Augustus heard of Herod's deed, and that amongst the boys of two years and under, Herod's own son had been, by mistake, massacred, he is said to have remarked: "It is better to be Herod's hog, than his son." In this he was alluding to the Jewish law of not eating, and consequently, not killing, swine.

The real date of this massacre is uncertain, but it was within two years of the appearance of the "Star in the East" to the Wise Men.

The Institution of the Feast

Is, as regards date, unknown; it was not before the end of the fourth, and not later than the end of the fifth century.

The Anglican and Roman Churches observe it on Dec. 28th; the Greek Church honours it one day later; while the Syrian Church has fixed it for Dec. 27th. The Armenians, however, having a belief that these children were killed about fifteen weeks after the birth of Christ, observe it on the second Sunday after Pentecost.

To-day Not Necessarily the Correct Date.

The dates given, however, do not appear to have any chronological value; the feast in question is held during the Octave of Christmas, because the infants gave their life for the newly-born Saviour.

In the same manner the dates for commemorating St. Stephen and St. John the Evangelist (Dec. 26th and 27th) are not necessarily the correct days on which those two events occurred. St. Stephen the first martyr (martyr by will, love, and blood), John, the Disciple of Love (martyr by will and love), and these first flowers of the church (martyrs by blood only) accompany the Holy Child, entering the world on Christmas-day.

Superstitions.

Probably on account of the feeling of horror attached to such an act of atrocity as the slaughter of these innocent children, this day used to be accounted as the most unlucky day of the year. No one, who could possibly avoid it would be married on this day, it being considered most inauspicious; neither would anyone, willingly, commence any new undertaking. It is recorded that King Edward IV. of England, postponed the ceremony of coronation for a day because the day originally fixed happened to be Holy Innocents' Day. Even at the present day, housewives in some parts of the Old Country refuse to scour or scrub on this day. It is also considered unlucky to wear new clothes.

Ancient Customs.

In ancient times the massacre was annually observed by a smart whipping, which it was customary to administer to the youthful members of a family. An old writer remarks, "it hath been a custom, and yet is elsewhere, to whip up the children upon Innocents-day morning, that the memorie of Herod's murder might stick the closer, and in a moderate proportion to act over the crueltie again in kinde."

Muffled Peals.

In some parish churches, in the Old Country, it is customary to ring muffled peals on this day. From "Notes and Queries," I find that at Norton, in Worcestershire, it is still customary to ring first a muffled peal, followed by an unmuffled peal of joy for the deliverance of the Infant Christ.

The Boy-Bishop.

In many churches in England, France and Germany, on the Festival of the Holy Innocents, the ceremony of the "boy-bishop" was carried out, as well as on the Festival of St. Nicholas (Dec. 6th). He wore a mitre and other emblems of pontifical office, sang the collect, preached, and gave the blessing. He sat in the bishop's stall, or chair, whilst the choir boys, who carried out the service, sang in the stalls of the canons. On these days a boy was choir director, and they had their solemn processions, but the whole was rather a travesty on the usual services.

The Feast of the Ass.

It is stated in Holy Writ that, being warned in a dream, Joseph and Mary escaped with the Infant Child Jesus, from the massacre really directed against Him. Their escape was effected into Egypt on an ass.

Some of my readers who may have read my "Chit-Chat" article on Christmas festivities in the Christmas number of "The Examiner" may recall my remarking on an official known as the "Abbas Stultorum," or the Abbot of Fools, in France known as the Abbot de Liease, or license. Now, two burlesque ceremonies were once highly popular in Northern France, one being the "Feast of Fools," and the other the "Feast of the Ass." This latter was generally held on Innocents' Day to commemorate the flight into Egypt. This was obviously a recrudescence of the ancient Roman festival, Saturnalia. In this, both priests and congregation joined to parody the services of the church. It seems to have been instituted in good faith and without intentional irreverence, but it eventually degenerated into gross indecency and license.

In Rouen, it consisted of the representation of a little farce, in whose principal scene Balaam's ass (a priest concealed between the legs of an ass) appeared. In Beauvais the feast was far more elaborate. Before the beginning of Vespers, a richly caparisoned ass, sometimes riderless, sometimes with a maiden on its back, was led up to the principal door of the church. Two criers chanted in a loud voice a Latin chant, which being interpreted is:

"Light to-day, the light of joy. Believe me whoever is sad shall be cast out of these solemnities. Those who celebrate the Feast of the Ass wish only gaiety. Far from here to-day the sentiment of envy, far from here all that is sad."

Two canons then conducted the ass to a table, where certain ceremonies were opened by the chanting of a Latin burlesque ditty as follows:

"From the Orient
Comes an ass,
Beautiful and strong.
Able for burdens,
Hey! Master Ass! Hey!
In the hills of Sichem,
Brought up under Reuben,
He crossed the Jordan,
And leaped into Bethlehem,
Hey! Master Ass! Hey.

The congregation all joined in the last line of each verse as a chorus of response. Vespers were then read; but into the services were introduced fragments of other offices, joyful and sad, bits of prose and verse, an olio in short, of sacred and profane literature. At intervals the ass was given to eat and drink.

Finally, clergy and people danced around him with loud imitations of braying. Then all filed out into the street, headed by the precentor with a huge lantern, where in booths, ribald farces were performed. Then more songs and dances, during which the precentor was deluged with water. The proceedings were wound up by a midnight mass —a burlesque of the regular mass, just as the vespers had been a burlesque of the regular vespers. At its conclusion the priest brayed three times instead of saying "Ite Missa est," and the people answered, "Hin-han," instead of "Deo Gratias."

German Killed While Fighting For The British

Served For Nineteen Years in Army Without Wife Knowing Nationality—Learned After Death She Was an Alien

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—A remarkable story of how a German named Leibold, who enlisted under the name of Baker and served for nineteen years in the British army, rose to the rank of squadron sergeant major in the Eleventh Hussars and died the death of a hero in France while fighting against the country of his birth, is hidden behind the simple fact that the Home Office has granted a certificate of naturalization to his widow, Mrs. Jean Mowat Breadalbane Baker, of The Bungalow, Peper Harrow road, Godalming, Surrey.

What is probably more remarkable still is that the disclosure of Squadron Sergeant Major Baker's German nationality surprised no one more than it did his wife, for it was not until eight months after his death that Mrs. Baker, to whom he had been happily married since 1908, learned for the first time that her husband was a German and that she by reason of her marriage also was a German and an "alien enemy" of England. This discoming registered under the Aliens' comin gregistered under the Aliens' Restriction Order, and for a time she lost her pension. Her nationality and pension, together with the arrears, have now been restored to her.

Last month Mrs. Baker read in a newspaper that a Mrs. Leibold, a German, had been prosecuted for failing to register. In the report of the case it stated that Mrs. Leibold came to England from Germany after her husband's death and that she had a son, a squadron sergeant major, who had served in the Eleventh Hussars, and had been killed in action.

A Suggestive Suggestion.

"Well," said the Traveler, beamingly, "I have just sent my daily telegram to my wife telling her that I am as fit as a fiddle.

"Thass right—thass right," said the weary gentleman in the corner. "I wish ya'd do me a favor, m'friend. Jus' send a telegram to my wife t'me will ya—tellin' her I'm as bloomin' as a bass violin!"

"No," said the other, "I think I'd better say that you are tight as a drum, eh?"—New York Times.

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward:—

Having been nominated for alderman in the North Ward, I ask you for your vote and influence. I am a sanitary engineer of long experience, and the great problem Peterborough is up against just now makes me a very valuable man to have as your representative. This past six years I have made special studies of sewage disposal work. I have prepared and read several papers on this subject before the Sanitary Engineers of Ontario, and to show their appreciation of my ability they made me chairman for all of Ontario. In that problem alone it is enough to place me in a position where I can exercise my ability. In regard to public work, I believe that Peterborough should own its own street paving plant and do their own work.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,

Robt. G. Sturgeon

GERMANS SURPRISED BY BOMBING PARTY

Before Sleepy Huns Were Fully Awake, Many Had Become Prisoners

MEN SPENT FIFTEEN MINUTES IN TRENCH.

Only One of the Attacking Party was Killed, as Result of Accident.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Few surprise attacks have ever been so daringly conceived or so skillfully carried out as the "successful surprise" near Messines recently reported by Sir John French. A small party of bombers crawled at night across the "no man's land" separating the lines climbed over the top of the parapet into the enemy's trench, remained there about a quarter of an hour, and then returned with a dozen prisoners as concrete proof of their exploit. Only one man was lost, and even he was killed accidentally as the result of one of the party falling in the dark over his rifle.

Went Like Clockwork.

The whole affair went like clockwork. The expedition was favoured by a dark night, with the moon hidden by driving clouds, and the party succeeded in reaching the German trench without attracting the attention of the enemy's sentries, who were, moreover, forced to take shelter by a heavy rainstorm, which by a lucky chance, broke at the critical moment. Thus the party reached the enemy's trench unseen, and were soon over the parapet and among the Germans. Several in the immediate vicinity were shot, and then the bombers in the party proceeded down each end of the trench, lobbing grenades into every dug-out passed and boldly attacking any enemy parties encountered.

As I have said, the men spent fifteen minutes in that trench, and never can there have been a more exciting scene. The noise was indescribable, what with the incessant bursting of bombs and the shouting of men while the whole picture was brilliantly lit up by flares that were being sent up by the dozen. The Germans, aroused from their sleep, came lumbering out of their dug-outs, to be immediately collared by stalwart strangers in khaki, and before they were wide awake found themselves inside the British trench they had been gazing at from the safety of their own parapet during so many months. The enemy must, it is thought, have lost at least 40 or 50 killed, while another large number were wounded by bomb splinters. One man accounted for eight of the enemy single-handed.

Football Tactics.

One officer, on emerging round the traverse, came right on the top of a German who was standing on the firing platform, which in deep German trenches is always naturally very high. Quick as lightning the officer (an old Rugby player) threw himself at the legs of his adversary and pulled him down to the bottom of the trench, where he sat on his chest urging him to surrender. At the critical moment another German appeared round the corner, but the officer, seizing the rifle which had fallen from the hands of his first opponent, swung it round and knocked the new comer head over heels, so that he tumbled into a dugout.

Finally, having accomplished its mission, the little party was ordered to return. The men were hastily collected, and were soon making their way cautiously back to their own trench. Just as they were leaving the officer heard a German bombing party advancing on his left. He ran back as far as the nearest traverse and threw over four bombs one after the other as fast as he could pull the safety pins out. Four deafening explosions followed and then a dead silence.

ADDRESS OF G. WALTER GREEN

The People's Candidate for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO'

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having been honoured with the nomination for Mayor for 1916, I desire to address you as a candidate for your suffrages at the coming election on the 3rd of January.

The record of my work as an alderman for the past three years is before you. On that record I respectfully claim a renewal of the confidence which the men and women of the Civic Electorate have reposed in me and in my efforts to serve the public welfare.

A few of the leading matters which will receive my careful attention, if elected, are as follows:—

(1) To see that the working men of Peterborough are given the work the city needs done, at wages in keeping with the value of their services, and the purchasing power of their earnings.

(2) To see that the City Engineer invites tenders for all important work to be done, and that the City Engineer's Department also tenders, with the proviso in every contract that the work required to be done shall be done by city workmen, so long as city workmen are available.

(3) To see that residential streets are narrowed so that money will not be wasted on building and maintaining roadways of needless width to serve all traffic purposes—proper surface drainage and curbs and gutters provided; that streets be properly macadamized or gravelled, and then oiled to give them life, to shed water and give residents the benefit of dustless streets.

(4) To see that a system of surface drainage or storm drains is begun for these reasons:—To give work to the unemployed so that the rain fall does not enter the sewers and have to be pumped by expensive and expensively operated machinery, adding to the inevitable expense of treating storm water as sewage. It is to be remembered that every 1,000 gallons lifted at the pumping station means so much additional expense that will be permanent as long as sewage has to be pumped.
